Potter's Provincewide Tour Brings Good Press Response

By DONALD M. SOUTTER

Tory crusader Dr. Richard T. Potter has now completed his 2,500-mile tour across Ontario. His dual message asked delegates to the upcoming Progressive Conservative convention to remain uncommitted until they were absolutely sure who they should vote for and asked candidates to outline specific programs so that delegates could make an intelligent and responsible choice.

What has been his success?

Even Dr. Potter says himself he cannot measure this accurately. "I moved so quickly that the reaction was behind me," he points out.

However, one measure of the Tory backbencher's success could be the considerable amount of newspaper, radio and television coverage generated in the wake of his tour.

A second aspect has been the somewhat sharper questions fired at candidates by reporters in the ensuing days. These questions nettled minister of health Tom Wells in Windsor when he arrived to campaign for Allan Lawrence and peaked in Toronto when provincial secretary Robert Welch announced his candidacy on a platform that he would not talk about specifics —a course that reporters generally were not buying.

Newspapers, generally have been willing to give Dr. Potter full credit for his personal stand but have been somewhat more skeptical in concluding that it will make a major difference in the conduct of the leadership campaign.

Dr. Potter is not so pessimistic.

"I think, already, there has been some grassroots reaction," he claims. "I made it a point not to seek out delegates individually during my tour. Yet, at least a couple of dozen made it a point to contact me and since my return I have been asked to speak at a few riding association meetings.

"On top of that, in following the press reports of the candidates I can detect a closer questioning by reporters on specifics. I am hopeful as the leadership campaign gets closer to the voting date of Feb. 12 that if the candidates don't voluntarily point out where they stand, that the pressure of the press and the delegates will make them do so."

What did the newspapers say about Dr. Potter and his tour? Here is a cross section of the comments:

Douglas Fisher, The Telegram: "The Ontario Conservatives are not a policy party. Indeed in a good sense they represent an antithesis of policy and ideology. They are administrators who do either what their bureaucrats turn up, or they respond to the pressures of the Opposition . . . thus I would argue that Dr. Potter is off the point in his concern that there be a policy emphasis. What he should be asking for are forums where all the candidates have to perform and project themselves in a conscious rivalry."

Globe and Mail editorial— A Voice Worth Heeding: Dr. Potter is not the most popular of Conservatives — among Conservatives — in the province. But he is precisely the sort of man they ought to be listening to now if they want to find the right treatment for their tired blood . . . the Conservative Government — however belatedly — has found itself compelled to take Dr. Potter's advice. The convention should be wise sooner, and take it at once.

Toronto Star Editorial — Timely Tory Gadfly: "The number of contenders is probably enough by itself to ensure a lively contest. But there may be an even more effective gadfly in the picture in the person of Dr. Richard Potter . . . His intervention is a timely one . . . It is to be hoped that Dr. Potter and his converts will persuade all the candidates to state clearly and unequivocally where they stand not only on foreign ownership, but on pollution, education, housing and all the other problems that face Ontario. . ."

Oshawa Times editorial: "The good doctor's thinking will appeal to a lot of people."

Oakville Journal Record editorial — Doc Potter's Good Advice: "It was Dr. Potter who once said he did not get himself elected to Queen's Park 'to jump up like a trained seal. . .'

"What Dr. Potter is prescribing for the good of his party is the politics of truth as against a lot of partisan fervor and double talk. And he is insisting that before local Conservatives pledge themselves to any of the leadership candidates they first bear their policies for the party and the province.

"As Halton county Conservatives gather tonight to pick delegates . . . it would be premature to pick a candidate, unless, of course, they are happy to play trained seal . . ."

Gord McNulty, The Windsor Star: "But when it comes to taking a bull by the horn, Potter is a man to be reckoned with."

Kitchener-Waterloo Record editorial: "This quixotic campaign is entirely in keeping with Dr. Potter's legislature reputation as a severe critic of his own party and its handling of health matters in particular.

"It is most important now, perhaps, for the proof it offers of a ferment which hopefully is taking place within the Conservative party as it approaches this important convention."

Harold Greer, freelance journalist as appearing in London Free Press and other Ontario newspapers: "Dr. Richard Potter, the maverick Conservative from Quinte, is off across Ontario by car and airplane in a personal campaign to keep his party honest.

"This could be interpreted as an oblique run at the leadership by Dr. Potter himself, which is not a bad idea but quite beyond his scheming.

. . . . "Yet something may come of it. Since he took off the Ontario Conservative party has announced that for the first time seven regional meetings will be held around the province at which all the candidates will be expected to appear and hopefully, carry on some semblance of a debate for the edification of delegates. Any suggestion that Dr. Potter is responsible for this small step is, of course, categorically denied; but then heroes and prophets are often without honor in their own country.

Patrick O'Callaghan, Hamilton Spectator: "If you see an Ontario Tory leadership candidate looking anxiously over his shoulder, you can be sure he has just seen the shadow of Dr. Richard Potter."

Bill Prager, Windsor Star— Tory Hopefuls Don't Say Much: By this time Dr. R. T. Potter has returned to his Belleville home after making his short crusade around the province in his attempt to get candidates for the Ontario Progressive Conservative party leadership to discuss specific policies.

"It cannot be said his efforts have met with tremendous success but then he never did have much of a chance.

"So far there are five candidates . . . and with some exceptions . . . they have refused to answer the questioning with direct specific replies.

. . . "Dr. Potter may be asking too much. But it would seem the reluctant candidates could be somewhat more concrete than they have been to date."

Windsor Star editorial — Clear Policies Needed: . . . Potter himself has come up with a wealth of ideas which should be discussed by the candidates.

"Ontario PCs should demand solid platforms for without them there is the prospect that they will find themselves removed from the seat of power . . . Failure by the candidates to come forward with policies . . . may well create the image amongst the Ontario electorate that the party and its new leader simply do not have any to offer."

Prince Edward County To Have Art Centre

PICTON (Staff) — Nationally recognized photographer, Lloyd E. Thompson this month will introduce what he describes as "a new cultural centre for Prince Edward County" with the opening of the Thompson Studio-Gallery in the Armory Mall.

The show centre for the works of a group of professional artists residing in the county will officially open January 29 in Mr. Thompson's studio reception room.

The initial showing will feature paintings by five well known artists including Donald Dawson, Iona Grindrod, Frank Johnson, Jerry Putman, all of Picton, and William Kettlewell, Milford. Two other persons have expressed interest in becoming future exhibitors at the studio-gallery.

Mr. Thompson explained that the painting display will not be a one - man show but instead will include a variety of works in various media contributed by participating artists.

He plans to hang approximately 40 paintings in his studio, changing them periodically for the viewing public. Among the paintings and water colors will be camera portraits by Mr. Thompson who has won numerous awards in national photographic competitions.

Each painting will be offered for sale with prices ranging from approximately $50 to $250. Color photographs of scenic areas in Prince Edward taken by Mr. Thompson also are expected to be available for purchase.

The photographer observed that the group of painters would like to develop a showplace for local artists and noted the lack of an art gallery of this type in the Quinte area.

Invitations to the studio-gallery opening will be forwarded to Prince Edward county municipal officials and several special guests. Prominet Canadian artist Manly MacDonald, Toronto will receive an invitation to the open house beginning at 10 a.m. through 5 p.m. Saturday, January 29. Each artist exhibiting works for the opening will attend to greet visitors and interpret displays.

Mr. Thompson has stated that the studio will remain open to the public from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. each weekday with the exception of Wednesdays and Sundays. Throughout the summer months the studio is expected to remain open Sundays.

Mr. Thompson has predicted that the art centre will provide another tourist attraction in Prince Edward. "This is not a novelty shop, it is strictly a professional gallery," he stressed.

Minor Injuries

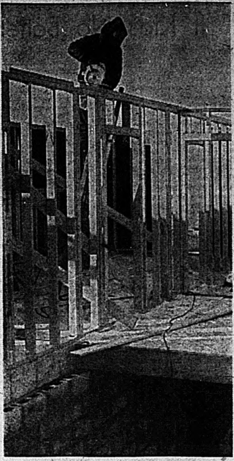
Four Belleville area people were treated and released at the Belleville General Hospital yesterday afternoon following a two-vehicle accident at the corner of Dundas and Pinnacle Streets.

Chief Douglas Crosbie said the mishap occurred at 2.55 yesterday when the cars collided in the middle of the intersection.

A vehicle driven by Frederick W. Diminie, 58, of Coleman Street was eastbound on Dundas and a car driven by Ruth E. Plane, 29, of Rossmore was northbound on Pinnacle at the time of the mishap.

Mr. Diminie sustained a minor cut to his face and his passenger, Mary O'Bryan, 21, of Burton Street, suffered a minor injury to her leg.

Mrs. Plane also suffered a minor injury to her leg and her son, Ralph, 10, a passenger in her car, injured his nose.



Work Goes On

In spite of the real old fashioned winter, house building is in progress in Ameliasburg township. Local contractor Larry Muxworthy, with power saw in hand, bundles up for full exposure in near zero temperature as ranch style design takes form along the Carrying Place to Belleville road.

Ameliasburg's Building Booms

AMELIASBURG (Special)— For those involved in the building trades, 1970 was a very good year in Ameliasburg township.

The second biggest year for new construction in the township's history added more than $75-million to expanding property values as well as providing a healthy boost of assessment figures through the $20,000,000 barrier.

Records show city dwellers with a preference for life in a rural environment were mainly responsible.

In the 12-month period, the municipality issued permits for permanet homes, cottages and other buildings for a total value of $805,000.

Only in 1969 was the total value of new construction in the township higher. The sum then amounted to $880,000.

Then, however, mortgage money for home building was more abundant at a lower borrowing rate.

Heath, Trudeau Both in India

with Prime Minister Gandhi Sunday. Later he described the discussions as valuable and fruitful.

At a news conference he spoke in optimistic terms of relations between India and Britain and rejected a reporter's contention that they had been cool in recent years.

But by all accounts his talks with Mrs. Gandhi produced no change in either country's attitude on the arms sales issue.

Heath stoutly defended his policy at the news conference, although he said that in Singapore he would listen to the views of other Commonwealth members.

He attacked what he called Soviet expansionism in the Indian Ocean in some of the sharpest terms he has ever used. He said Russian action placed a responsibility on Britain to ensure the safety of shipping lanes around the Cape of Good Hope and to honor the Simonstown defence agreement between Britain and South Africa.

He firmly dismissed any suggestion that British policy was motivated by racial considerations. Britain opposed apartheid, he said, but the vital question was what was the best way to tackle the problem.

His arguments about the dangers of a Soviet Indian Ocean build-up are unlikely to have carried much weight with Mrs. Gandhi, observers said.

But an Indian spokesman said there had been no major confrontation on any topic.

Women's Status

The report of the Royal Commission on the Status of Women, released recently, is a lengthy document and since the subject is one of continuing interest and only summaries of the report have been available to the public we thought it would be interesting to return to the subject from time to time.

Here are some facts from the report: the federal government employs some 81,000 women and the Commission found that the Federal Female Employees Equal Pay Act does not apply to the federal public service or to the staffs of the Senate and the House of Commons. Nor does the Fair Employment Practices Act cover employment in the federal public service. Moreover, differences exist between the sexes in superannuation plans and in some insurance plans in crown corporations and agencies. Women do not have equal opportunity to enter and advance in government service and proportionately fewer women than men are being trained to the full extent of their potential or being promoted to senior levels. Then again, women do not receive maternity leave with pay.

The Commission found that in Canada most of the economic power is in the hands of men; in 1967, for instance, women received less than 20 per cent of the total reported income of women and men, 37 per cent of all gross dividends from stocks, 36 per cent of rental income and 31 per cent of interest on mortgages.

Twenty-five per cent of the insurance policies combining death benefits with savings and retirement plans sold in Canada between 1965 and 1967 were bought by or for females of all ages. These represented only nine per cent of the total face value of all policies purchased. In 1966 the average size policy for women was $3,630 compared with $12,390 for men.

On the other hand the great majority of policies name wives and children as beneficiaries. In 1968 the average amount of policies in which wives were beneficiaries was around $3,000.

And yet, somehow, women appear to spend as much as men, as is suggested in this cautious statement from the report: "women are probably no more than equal to men in consumer spending."

All of us, male and female, like to get our hands on those dollar bills, even though we know they slip through our fingers all too easily. If they earn fewer than the men, do the ladies hold on to them more tightly? It is the astute man or woman who makes the dollar go farthest these days.

Germans Show the Way

Recently we mentioned how in Germany two-way radio had been established between ambulances and hospitals whereby first aid en route to hospital could be improved and information on the patient's condition relayed to waiting doctors, and went on to suggest that helicopter ambulances might be the next step to speed up service to accident victims.

Well, the German automobile club has introduced just such a service. The first in Europe, the service has been established to aid motor accident victims in the state of Bavaria.

From air ambulances to artificial grass is a far cry, but the latter is another example we have encountered of German inventiveness.

A German Features picture depicts artificial grass which can be rolled out like a carpet and is ideal for sporting activities.

Shown working out on the turf are track stars, field hockey and soccer players, and even a couple of elegantly-dressed horsemen. Maybe the next step will be golf courses of artificial grass — no need for watering or anything — or would that be really feasible?

Repair Job

While it is supervised at rush-hour by a police officer, we would suggest that the pedestrian crossing at the supermarket on Pinnacle Street, near Market Square, could be better defined. A lick of paint is needed to repair its fading boundaries; as it is, drivers from out of town would be hard put to it to recognize it as a crossing. Another thought: a sign or flashing light would also upgrade the status and efficiency of this crossing and perhaps even eliminate the need for policing at rush-hour.

Focus on A Costly Program

If Kids No Better Educated Today—Then What Next?

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

In common with so many of your recent correspondents I am concerned at the quality, cost and direction of the county education system. Also, I shared with many of them the same doubts, confusion and general lack of knowledge of the whole concept. Beyond the fact that Mr. Runacres and several other highly placed officials made in excess of $20,000, I knew the system was costing us a lot of money, and, with a son an integral of it who, I felt, was not getting any better education than under the previous administration, I made it my business to find out what we are getting for our dollars.

A three-hour, no holds barred question and answer session with Eric Runacres, Director of Education for Hastings County did much to enlighten me. In response to my opening gambit of "I'd like to ask you a few questions regarding education in this county", he replied "If you ask me any question that I refuse to answer, outside of confidential personnel matters, I'll resign". He was as good as his word.

That this man is an exceptional educator is quickly apparent, even to a lay man such as myself. His enthusiasm and dedication, allied with a bubbling super sales personality and patent honesty make him a fascinating person to debate with.

He frankly admits the $1,000 raise was an embarrassment he did not need or ask for and in reply to my question "Are you really worth $30,000 a year" he candidly says he is not, and cannot expect to be until the county is able to update its system to meet the requirements of the Department of Education. This means the spending of a great deal of money over the next few years outside of teachers' salaries to equip the schools with the suggested teaching aids that the modern concept of education dictates is necessary in the 20th century.

A comprehensive, and exciting, three part suggested plan for the implementation of this concept has been prepared, under the heading An Instructional Media Program. Part one is devoted to the audio-visual needs of the county's schools — Part two educational television and part three to library resources centres. The whole program is a brilliantly conceived educational adventure which literally places in the hands of the teachers and students just about everything necessary to facilitate the learning process. Of course, there is a snag, the cost. The cost estimates of bringing in school media equipment up to just basic standards are as follows:

Instructional Media Equipment Elementary schools, $206,725.
Instructional Media Equipment Secondary schools, $111,082.
Instructional Media Unit:
Equipment 1970, $13,833.95.
Consumable supplies 1970, $17,636.50.
Media materials 1970, $42,735.
Furniture 1970, $4,798.55.
New Staff 1970, $21,900.
TOTAL $100,904.

A suggested sample budget for the installation of Educational TV in 1970 is $83,445.

The cost of implementing a suggested Library Resources Centres is $1,121,000 for the elementary schools and $1,043,974 for secondary schools.

Based on a ten - year program the cost - year - pupil is $10.21 for elementary schools and $12.87 for secondary schools.

If this program is introduced into the schools, and I feel it is a must, the figures shown for a ten - year projection become more tenable in the light of our current inflationary troubles. Public acceptance of this will depend on the amount of information the Board gives to the public and the manner and timing of its introduction. While we cannot, and should not wait forever, too much haste could well spell disaster.

On the subject of salaries and staff, empire building and waste of money it would be hard to fault the figures provided. But as we all know, figures can be made, often to reflect the picture we want to project. One area of confusion that comes to mind is contained in the Report of the Hastings County Board of Education. Schedule seven shows teachers' salaries accounted for 68 per cent of the budget and business administration only two per cent. As a layman I cannot understand why the salaries of the Director, Superintendents, and Associate Superintendents are shown under instruction or teachers. Eithers these people are administration or teachers, they cannot be both. Perhaps this is where some of the "confusion" referred to comes in.

Are our children able to read, write and spell any better under the new system than they could under the old? Another frank answer from Mr. Runacres "No". Then what is it all about? Apparently the idea is to unlock the imagination of the child, to stimulate and arouse his or her curiosity, to make them become aware of their surroundings, their place in society as a whole, or at least this is the impression I gathered.

But after being exposed to this new concept, will our children emerge better equipped to face the demands of our rapidly changing society? Will they be better trained and able to get jobs suited to their talent and training? This is what worries me, and, although I have religiously read every word of the many publications Mr. Runacres so kindly loaned me I am still unconvinced that the necessary updating of our system will provide us with any better educated youngsters than before.

Despite the sanguine expectations of those in charge of our educational undertaking I still feel that industry and commerce will look for graduates having the qualifications and training that will be of use to them in the strengthening and progress of their companies and so on.

Mr. Freeland, in his excellent letter enquires as to how many of our PhDs, MA's and BA's are unemployed. I don't think this is really the point. What really matters is how many of them are not employed in the fields they were trained for? Many of these graduates are employed in fields far removed from what they trained for, or what they desire. The Graduate Students' Union of the University of Toronto claims that only 105 of 190 PhD's found jobs this year. To me it seems that the whole educational system fails when those emerging from its bosom eager to sell their new found learning, are so often forced into employment unrelated to their training or unable to find no job at all.

In conclusion, I can only say that as an interested parent I am still apprehensive about where we are going in education and if we can afford it without draining essential funds from other areas. I feel we must gamble, and if the powers that be treat the questioning members of the public the same way as I was, we should have no fears of any "power clique" running things. When they refuse to answer our questions it will be time to make changes.

Arms for S. Africa and Other Issues

Foreign Policy—Is There Too Much Mischief-Making?

Letter to The Montreal Gazette

Canada's open and persistent disapproval of Britain's sale of arms to South Africa is becoming increasing alarming, as it is unintentionally beginning to assume the proportions of mischief - making world propaganda. One reads of Mr. Trudeau last June writing ". . . a stern letter to Mr. Heath in which he warned of the consequences . . ." of this procedure, as well as subsequent admonishments by our prime minister, in addition to irresponsible censure by some newspaper editorials.

In the first place the arms are not intended to fortify South Africa's ability to subdue the natives which so many people envision. They are already fully equipped to do this, and there's nothing any one can do to change it — at least for the time being regardless of the world's wishes.—These arms are meant to help South Africa help Britain to police the Cape maritime trade route into the Indian Ocean, where the Russians are displaying naval strength, in order that the freedom of the seas may be maintained for all nations.

(A lot of other nations besides Britain use this trade route). — In the second place it is not Canada's business to try to pressure another member of the Commonwealth as to her trade policy. (We're all free and equal and independent of each other, let us never forget). If Canada wants a strong voice in this matter, let her contribute a couple of battleships to assist in policing the route, and then she would be in a somewhat stronger position to shout. She would also be helping to relieve an already over-burdened British taxpayer who, as things now stand, would have to shoulder preponderantly the major cost of this job.

Incidentally, on the debit side of my argument I do not believe Mr. Heath's contention that Britain is obliged to continue to sell arms to South Africa, but I certainly do be-believe that if she doesn't do so, she may well lose her Simonstown naval base privileges, and that would be the end of any policing idea with one hammer blow.

What has Canada's foreign policy been in recent years?

What is her record of achievement in relation to the bigger world issues?

She it was who so vehemently backed the U.S. and Russia in forcing the French and British to withdraw from taking back the Suez Canal, resulting in the loss of one of the world's most valuable waterways compelling the world in general to resort to the long Cape route whose freedom Britain is now trying to preserve. — and she it was who teamed up and led the African States in kicking South Africa out of the Commonwealth.

Is she now again going to team up with the African States at the Singapore conference against another (valuable, I think) member of the Commonwealth — England?

All this is very, very serious, and may well be, or at least forbode, the swan-song of the Commonwealth.

If this should come about, on balance one could surely say that Canada would have far more to lose than Britain who is obviously soon to join the European Common Market — and who at present buys more than twice as much from Canada as Canada buys from Britain — the latest figures being 560 million odd pounds versus 238 million pounds.

Jan. 11, 1971 . . . Count Galeazzo Ciano, son-in-law of Benito Mussolini, and four others were executed 27 years ago today — in 1944—by a firing squad in Verona, Italy, after a court-martial had found Ciano and 17 other members of the former Grand Fascist Council guilty of treason.

1964 — The United States public health service published a report blaming cigarettes for being a cause of cancer.

1949— San Diego, Calif., had the first snowfall in its 99-year weather history.

1947 — The Canadian government lifted price controls on a wide list of goods, retaining them for food, clothing, fuel and rent.

1346 — Albania was proclaimed a republic.

1923 — Belgian and French troops began their occupation of the Ruhr to enforce German First World War reparations.

1909 — Canada and the United States signed the International Waterways Convention which led to the establishment of the International Joint Commission.

Is Ottawa Listening? The Great 6 Per Cent Wage Guideline Joke

Letter to The Hamilton Spectator

Your editorial pleading the case of our dedicated and underpaid MPs and their 108 per cent salary raise, was surely a new low, even for The Spectator. It must have warmed the heart of every pensioner. The writer has fully earned his "Pretty Pierre" button, and should be allowed to kiss Mr. Munro's hand. Are these the peerless inflation fighters, the 6 per cent wage guideline men?

No mention was made of the unconscionable manner in which our glorious professionals sneaked through the pension ruling, awarding themselves $3,780 a year for life, should they retire or be defeated after six years in office. This guaranteed annual income is paid at any age. With operators like these, who needs the Mafia?

The Belleville Public Utilities has entered the realm of big business, serving a total of 8,600 electrical customers in the city and rural district, and pumping over a billion gallons of water for its customers during 1950. These were the figures given to members of the Belleville and District Builders' Exchange by O. H. Scott, manager of the local Utilities Commission.

Two New 'Local' Galaxies Discovered Behind Milky Way's Dust

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Astronomers using facilities at four observatories to track down a report about strange space objects have discovered two previously undetected galaxies in the earth's galactic background.

The discovery is similar to finding that an apparently vacant lot across the street has been the site of an invisible house for many years.

Location of the two galaxies, nam-d Maffei 1 and Maffei 2, and their apparent size and distance from earth was reported Sunday in The Astrophysical Journal by astronomers from the University of California at Berkeley, the California Institute of Technology and the Carnegie Institution of Washington.

The nine astronomers who wrote the article said that interstellar dust in the Milky Way Galaxy, of which earth is a part, has obscured the two galaxies and delayed their detection.

The discovery means astronomers must revise their concept of what they call the local group of galaxies, those nearest earth. The local group previously was believed made up of five galaxies—the Milky Way, of which the sun is a minor star, the Andromeda Galaxy and three smaller satellite galaxies.

Andromeda is the nearest massive neighbor to the Milky Way and the most familiar galaxy in photos, science fiction and popular astronomy. But the article reported that Maffei 1 and Maffei 2 are only twice as far away as Andromeda—making them close on the inter-galactic distance scale.

The astronomers estimate the new galaxies are about three million light years from earth. A light year is the distance light travels in one year, about 5.8 trillion miles.

And the studies indicate Maffei 1 may be as large or larger than Andromeda—the largest galaxy in the area of the solar system.

The newly discovered galaxies are named after a young Italian astronomer, Paolo Maffei, who reported in 1968 in an obscure scientific journal he had found two strange objects on infra-red photographs made at Frascati, Italy. The report set off the California investigation.

Pension Escalation Asked

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Teacher's Association voted Saturday to press for inclusion of a cost-of-living escalation clause in the pensions of retired teachers.

Nora Hodgins, the federation's secretary-treasurer, said the recently announced adjustments in teachers' pensions, particularly for those who retired 20 years ago, were the result of five years negotiations.

"We want a provision built into the pensions so we don't have to spend another five years talking about the next adjustments," she said.

Largely Up to Heath

This Could Be Last Commonwealth Conference

LONDON (Reuter) — The biggest question facing leaders of Commonwealth countries at their nine-day conference in Singapore starting next Thursday is whether they will meet again as a united group.

The decision rests largely with Britain's Conservative government, elected last June 18 under the leadership of Prime Minister Edward Heath.

A majority of the Commonwealth oppose his plan to resume the sale of arms to South Africa, a Reuter survey of the 32 member-countries indicates.

The Commonwealth is a unique international organization, grouping countries of various races, religions and tongues. In the days of the British Empire, most of the countries were under British colonial rule. Now all are independent.

It is their decision whether the Commonwealth, which has been holding periodic meetings in various forms since 1887, will survive as an effective group.

Many things could happen.

Some nations threaten to quit the Commonwealth if Heath goes ahead with his arms-sale proposal. Ghana has even suggested the expulsion of Britain from the Commonwealth.

Or the Commonwealth could die. Some members argue there are enough international organizations to replace its functions.

Yet the Commonwealth represents 900 million people living in North America, the Caribbean, Africa, Asia, the Pacific islands, Australia and New Zealand as well as the founding nation, Britain.

The central issue in Singapore is not so much the proposed arms sale as the right of each of the 32 members to determine its own foreign policy. This is Heath's argument.

Prime Minister Trudeau of Canada hopes he will be able to find a compromise on the arms issue. His experts have been working for months on a way out of the impasse.

Canadian diplomat Arnold Smith, now secretary-general of the Commonwealth secretariat, says that if the organization cannot respond to challenges such as the arms proposal it may not survive in "a meaningful way."

Echoing this view, Trudeau said on leaving Ottawa last week that "no single issue" is worth a break-up of the Commonwealth.

African and Asian members now outnumber whites in the Commonwealth. The major issues once were political and economic. Now racism is the problem.

The Singapore gathering will be the 18th since the modern cycle of talks began in 1944. It is still supposed to be a "family" meeting and unwritten laws of such conferences forbid open public arguments between members.

Disputes between one Commonwealth country and another are never discussed without the consent of the parties to the dispute.

South Africa, whose apartheid policy of racial segregation is a central issue at the forthcoming conference, left the Commonwealth a decade ago by its own choice.

The objective of each conference is "to reach the highest measure of understanding, not the lowest measure of agreement," says British diplomat Lord Normanbrook, conference secretary from 1946 to 1962.

On this basis, the Commonwealth may not break up or become fragmented, as some pessimists have forecast, even if Britain goes ahead with the arms sales to South Africa.

Heath will defend his position on the basis that the growth of Soviet naval strength in the Indian Ocean poses a threat and requires the proposed arms agreement.

Thirteen of the Commonwealth members are African countries. They will have a powerful voice in Singapore.

Reuter correspondents in various Commonwealth countries report:

Ghana: This most militant of the African members expects the arms issue to dominate the conference. Foreign Minister Victor Owusu has warned that Ghana would consider expulsion of Britain from the Commonwealth. But Prime Minister Kofi Busia still regards the Commonwealth as valuable for its aid programs

Tanzania: President Julius Nyerere sees the conference as a last chance to talk Britain out of the arms deal. He is seriously thinking of quitting the Commonwealth if Heath goes ahead with the program.

Zambia: President Kenneth Kaunda finds no chance of a compromise on the arms plan. Some observers believe Zambia will leave the Commonwealth if the arms deal goes through.

Uganda: President Milton Obote was said to have told Heath last July that Uganda would leave the Commonwealth if the arms deal was sanctioned.

Nigeria: Foreign Minister Dr. Okoi Arikpo opposes the arms sale but hopes it will not bring the break-up of the Commonwealth.

Kenya: President Jomo Kenyatta hopes Britain can withdraw the arms plan without losing face so that the Commonwealth can survive intact.

Malawi: President Hastings Kamuzu Banda is one of the few black African leaders to support the arms sale because of the Soviet presence in the Indian Ocean.

Botswana: President Sir Seretse Khama opposes the arms sale and argues that the answer for southern Africa must be self-determination.

Gambia: Prime Minister Sir Dawda Jawara has announced he will speak against the arms sale at Singapore.

Mauritius: Prime Minister Sir Seewoosagur Ramgoolam will approve the arms sale as long as the weapons are not used to repress Africans.

Lesotho; Premier Leabua Jonathan has offered to serve as a go-between in settling the arms dispute. He has not taken a firm stand. Independent Swaziland is also attending the conference

Sierra Leone: Foreign Minister Cyril Foray, who will represent Premier Dr. Siaka Probyn Stevens, wants Britain expelled from the Commonwealth if the arms deal is approved. The alternative, he says, is for his country to leave the Commonwealth

Singapore: Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew, the conference host, plans to act as a mediator in the arms quarrel. He believes the Commonwealth has a future if it can find a framework to develop new meaning as a multi-racial group.

Pakistan: The Pakistani government firmly opposes the sale of arms to South Africa. It is also deeply interested in the discussions about Indian Ocean security.

Ceylon: Main preoccupation is on the security of the Indian Ocean and the need for Commonwealth nations to promote regional co-operation in defence and economics.

India: Prime Minister Indira Gandhi fears the arms sale could jeopardize the future of the Commonwealth. She also is interested in discussions on Indian Ocean security.

Malaysia: Prime Minister Tun Abdul Razak opposes the arms sale but wants the Commonwealth to continue.

Australia: Prime Minister John Gorton will take a neutral position on the arms issue but would like to see a build-up of Indian Ocean defences.

New Zealand: Prime Minister Sir Keith Holyoake hopes the Commonwealth will continue to thrive and provide assistance for its new Pacific members—Tonga, Western Samoa and Fiji. Tiny Nauru, also in the Pacific, has a special relationship with the Commonwealth.

Trudeau Calms Demonstrators

VARANASI, India (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau calmed down four strident demonstrators Sunday night in this holy Hindu city on the Ganges and sent them away smiling.

The four were among a dozen shouting outside his hotel about alleged racial discrimination against Indians in Canada.

The Prime Minister tried to talk to the group outside the hotel.

When they kept shouting, he shrugged and went inside.

Shortly after, he suggested a meeting with four of the youths. A get-together was arranged in the hotel bar.

Mr. Trudeau said there are some injustices in Canada and it is the obligation of the government to correct them.

He told them to write to him if they heard of any injustices in Canada.

The four went away giggling.

British Anti-strike Law Protested

LONDON (AP) — British workers threatened Sunday to disrupt ports and train services, hamper newspaper production and close some factory assembly lines Tuesday in a national demonstration against a new anti-strike law.

Parliament last month approved the Conservative government's controversial industrial relations bill, curbing the power of Britain's trade unions by making labor contracts enforceable in court, with fines for unions that break them. It is expected to become law this summer.

More than a quarter of a million protest strikers, some led by Communists, shut down plants and ports across the country a week before the bill was passed.

A milder protest is planned for Tuesday, when Parliament reconvenes after a Christmas vacation, but it is expected to grow into a major disruption.

Breathalyzer Facing New Test

FREDERICTON (CP) — After surviving one major bout with the Supreme Court of Canada last year, federal breath testing legislation has again been challenged—this time by the rulings of a county court judge in New Brunswick.

Because of rulings handed down by Judge Reginald D. Keirstead of Saint John, Justice Minister J. B. M. Baxter ordered Friday that all use of the legislation be suspended in the province until a test case can be heard by the New Brunswick Supreme Court.

Mr. Baxter said he expects a decision by the end of January and, in the meantime, prosecutions for impaired driving will continue under a separate section of the Criminal Code.

Since September, Judge Keirstead has upheld four appeals by motorists against lower court convictions of operating a motor vehicle when their blood alcohol levels exceeded .08 per cent.

His rulings questioned procedures in the handling of certificates and notifications to the defence, and in two cases he found the Crown had been unable to prove the proper solution was used in the breath machine when tests were conducted.

In one case, testimony showed that samples of the solution were tested at the RCMP crime laboratory in Sackville, N.B., but there was no evidence that all capsules were of the same batch number or that precaution had been taken to avoid the possibility that they might have been tampered with.

A police chemist said he was unsure how many capsules were in a batch, how distribution was handled or who decided and applied batch numbers.

The defence in that case was handled by Mr. Baxter, then a practising lawyer in Saint John, and Judge Keirstead ruled that a reasonable doubt had been created.

Lawyers within Judge Keirstead's jurisdiction began to take notice and prosecutions tapered off after Christmas.

The situation came to public attention last week when a charge against Education Minister Lorne McGuigan was withdrawn because of what a Crown prosecutor called "insufficient evidence" in view of Judge Keirstead's rulings.

Mr. Baxter said he will decide this week whether to go to the Supreme Court through the appeal process or with a "stated case" in which questions are posed for the court to decide. His prime concern is to get speedy "clarification" of the issue.

Judge Keirstead said in his judgments the question of chemicals used could be solved by amending the legislation so that random sampling of capsules would be deemed proof that the proper solution was used.

Opinions by a number of lawyers indicate that the judge's points on procedure could be overcome by more careful handling of certificates and documents.

Until the findings are reversed by a higher court or the legislation is amended, the judge's rulings will be binding at the provincial-court level in New Brunswick and presumably could be cited in other provinces.

Writes Books In Braille

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Barbara Burton's Concise Oxford Dictionary is in 16 large volumes. Her medical dictionary is in eight.

They are in braille.

Miss Burton, first Canadian woman to graduate from the physiotherapy school of England's Royal National Institute for the Blind, is waiting for her books to follow her across the Atlantic by ship.

She has come home to Kingston a professional physiotherapist after three years at the London school.

Cancer left her blind when she was five. She took her public school and first four years of high school at the Ontario School for the Blind at Brantford, Ont., then transferred to Kingston Collegiate and Vocational Institute, where she was the first blind student to graduate from Grade 13.

Now 22, Barbara says there are some difficulties for a blind person in hospital work: "For instance, when there are screens instead of curtains around the beds in a ward and you have to drag the screens from one end of the ward to the other."

Usually, she says, patients who can walk help. "And if there are little kids on the ward, they always always come to take the screens if they possibly can.

"You also have to learn how to smile when you knock over a vase of flowers. It makes us cross because when we do it, it's because we're blind. When a doctor or nurse or someone else does it, it's an accident."

In London, she travelled several miles a day by subway and bus to classes and to the various hospitals where she worked.

She developed a respect for the facilities available to the blind in Britain and for British attitudes toward the blind.

"They have really very good services there—lots of talking books and tapes and long, long lists of volunteer readers. There are always students wanting to read. Usually, they ended up being our friends and coming along to all our parties."

She talks of her visits to Scotland and Italy, especially of "seeing" works of great sculptors in Rome.

"I never knew what a Michelangelo really looked like. That's what I loved most about London and Italy, I think—the sculptures.

"I spent hours in the Vatican, looking at the sculptures, and got the girls in all the shops to open up the glass show cases so I could touch the souvenirs."

Barbara has other memories: a tree in a London park with delicate and beautiful carvings etched into its bark; a sculpture in another park of a small boy holding two little bears; theatres: concerts; the "atmosphere" of places, and people who were good.

Wesleyan Ministers Meet in City

About 70 Ontario ministers of the Wesleyan and Free Methodist denominations arrived at Belleville Wesleyan Methodist Church today for a Conference which concludes Tuesday night.

Dr. Wilbur T. Dayton, Professor of New Testament and Chairman of the Department of Religion at Marion College, Marion, Indiana, spoke on such themes as, "Relating the Word to Today's Issues," "The Answers to Today's Biological Questions," and "The Answers to Today's Theological Issues."

There will be panel discussions on "Our Church Music — Is It Obsolete?", and "Methods of Evangelism." All meetings are open to the public.

At the Tuesday evening rally, Rev. George Leroy, director of The Stepping Stone, a Christian Drop - In - Centre, in Toronto's Yorkville area, will speak.

Both denominations had their beginning in the United States, more than a century ago, from Methodists who wanted to free the slaves, contrary to the position of the mother church. Both groups hold the same doctrines and have three times formed committees to pave the way for union. In 1955 the proposal lacked only one vote of having the required two - thirds for a union. In 1969 a committee was again formed to examine the issue. Meanwhile the two groups cooperate, in publishing the one hymn book, and in many other ways.

This meeting in Belleville, while not officially considering union, will doubtless further cement the sense of oneness that has characterized the two churches in Canada.

Styles Galore At Judy Presentation

By ALLISON STICKLE
Women's Editor

If the wide variety of styles worn by those attending the Judy Fashion Awards presented by the Garment Salesmen Ontario Market in the Canadian Room at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto last Thursday evening is any indication — anything goes in wearing apparel these days—and the more colorful the better.

Perhaps the long formal gowns in various color combinations were the most predominant, but the ever popular pant suit, pant dress and flaired jump suits ran a close second. A few minis were seen, but the younger set in particular seemed to sway towards jumpsuits or a type of knicker suit which has hit the fashion scene recently.

The men also came into the fashion limelight with mostly bright colored shirts being worn with short and longer type jackets in various colors — some quite formal and others rather sporty. A number wore the moderate type with the new wide ties.

Interspersing the presentation of the awards were three fast paced shows which lived up spectacularly to its theme — A Kaleidoscope of Fashions — with every hue imaginable shown in the styles worn by the adults and children who modelled. Fashions for all nations concluded this portion of the show.

A most striking fashion ensemble and perhaps one of the most eye-catching of the VIPs, was worn by Vanda King of TV fame who was wearing a two-piece pant dress in a gorgeous shade of lustrous deep pink with splashes of silver sequins which glittered under the TV camera lights.

Among other well - known personalities who participated at this annual awards night were Hon. Stanley Randall, Ontario Minister of Trade and Development and Bill Symons, Toronto Argonauts halfback.

The Intelligencer Women's Page which won a Judy Award last year was again nominated this year. No award in this category of under 70,000 circulation was given this year, but the Thunder Bay News Chronicle, which also received a nomination, was given notable mention.

Dancing rounded out the evening's gala event following a tasty dinner served to approximately 2,000 guests in attendance.

Says She's Basically Lazy

Anne Murray on Busy Rise to Top Of Musical Business in N. America

TORONTO (CP) — She says she's "basically a very lazy person," but Anne Murray is on a busy rise to the top of the music business in North America.

The Canadian singer who studied at the University of New Brunswick to be a physical education teacher has, in the last two months, appeared on the Glen Campbell Goodtime Hour, sold a million copies of the song Snowbird and received a gold record for it on the Merv Griffin Show, introduced a new record on the Johnny Cash Show and done her own CBC special. She was also voted woman of the year in entertainment in the annual Canadian Press year-end poll.

It's a far cry from a gym class on Prince Edward Island where she last taught.

The pretty blonde from Springhill, N.S., started her climb through show business three years ago on CBC-TV's Singalong Jubilee and now is committed to the CBC and U.S. network programs like the Campbell show.

In addition, she is hostess and featured artist on CBC radio's program Afternoon once a week. Add to that winter recording dates with Capitol Records for another album—her third—and, "Yeah, I guess I am kind of busy these days."

At 26, Anne is being touted as Canada's first bona fide international singing star, but "I really don't know what a star is. . ."

During a recent 10-day run at the Royal York Hotel here, even waiters would stand near the stage with tape recorders running "and I guess that's part of the star thing."

In an interview, she said "the trend today is toward the more natural—like Glen Campbell, for instance."

"You can't fool people any more with that aura business. People want to get close to you, even slap you on the back and tell you you're doing fine. And that's great by me."

Her approachability is perhaps part of the reason for her success so far, and she'd like to keep it that way.

"I prefer very much working with a live audience. There are vibes . . . reactions, and the whole feeling is wonderful.

"You don't get any vibes from a machine."

Anne's naturalness with an audience has accorded her nods from a variety of show-business critics.

During her appearance at the annual Grey Cup football banquet she appeared in a full-length evening gown, sans shoes, explaining "well, I didn't have anything that matched the dress—what are you gonna do"

Bursting suddenly into the limelight in both the U.S. and Canadian show business hasn't though taken away her ability to be a private person, "and I don't really think it ever has to—there's still a big part of me that I keep for myself."

Her private person spends a lot of time these days dreaming about a house she wants to build on a plot of land she recently bought in Nova Scotia.

"I want a retreat of sorts . . . somewhere I can go to sink back into the slow pace.

"All I can think about lately when I slow down is that house."

And in her music, she's looking for adherence to a personal standard, rather than an imposed standard. During her club date here, she received rave notices from the critics, but criticized her own opening night as "mediocre."

"It was the first appearance in a big club and I was a bit nervous."

Anne says she has no basic goals in show business, except "to be as good a singer as I can."

She's still getting used to having things done for her.

During the interview, she suddenly remembered some clothes that had been sent out for dry cleaning and began to worry about pick-up time. "Don't worry," somebody told her. "The hotel will have someone bring them up."

"Oh. Oh yeah, that's right, I guess," she grinned, leaning back.

"I'm a star now, aren't I"

Kitchen Tested Recipies

Recipes Using Leftover Cheese

By MARY MOORE

One of our good provider friends overbought for her wine and cheese party and was stuck with eight varieties of only slightly cut into cheeses. We offered to swap something for them and she gladly settled for a modest box of chocolate creams.

Our cheese - loving family demolished those cheeses in no time.

If you have a surplus of cheese on hand or a few odds and ends that should be used up one of the two recipes I am giving today will make the main course for your next meal.

FONDUE (a casserole)

2 cups stale bread cubes (½")
1½ cups grated cheese (packed)
2 eggs
2 cups milk
¾ tsp. salt
2-3 cup bread crumbs
2 tbsps. melted butter or margarine

Arrange bread cubes and cheese in layers in buttered medium baking dish. Beat eggs and stir in salt and milk and pour over bread and cheese and let stand 20 minutes to soak. Stir melted butter into bread crumbs and sprinkle over top. Stand baking dish in larger shallow pan containing one inch of hot water. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. about 25 minutes or until firm and golden.

DELUXE MACARONI AND CHEESE

Cook six ozs. (approximately 1½ cups) elbow macaroni in boiling salted water and drain. Melt 1 tbsp. margarine; blend in 1 tbsp. flour. Gradually add 1 cup milk and heat, stirring constantly until thickened. Add 2 cups grated cheese, 1-8 tsp. dry mustard, ½ tsp. salt and a generous dash of pepper; heat stirring until cheese is just melted. Stir in 1 cup dairy - sour cream. Put half the cooked macaroni into a greased casserole, then add ½ cup diced cooked ham or leftover meat and half of the cheese sauce. Sprinkle with 1 tbsp. chopped parsley. Repeat with another layer of macaroni, meat, sauce and parsley. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 30 minutes. Be careful not to overbake, because of the sour cream. Serves 6.

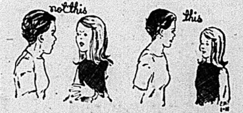
Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



In some households, life seems to be a constant battle with the teen-ager of the family. Parents feel inclined to give up and let the rebellious youngster do as she pleases and suffer the consequences of her mistakes.

Try to understand your teen-ager's rebellion, but don't abdicate your right of control as parents. Be as calm and sympathetic as you can, but insist on behavior you think is right.

No matter how your teen-ager may storm, these are the years she most needs your love and often your control.

Fur Coat Price Increase Results in Sales Decrease

PARIS (Reuter) — Fur coat prices have shot up by nearly 25 per cent in Paris, causing a slump in sales this season.

But furriers are working overtime stitching extra pelts onto old coats to bring them to current midi or maxi length.

Every type of fur coat from the humble rabbit to the dark ranch mink owned by the French president's wife, Mrs. Georges Pompidou, can be lengthened.

Mrs. Pompidou was one of the first clients to send her coat back for an overhaul—a complicated affair, since her coat is styled with vertically worked pelts involving a perfect match of additional skins and skilful splicing.

When a coat is lengthened with the same type of skin, the price amounts to almost 30 per cent of the original cost, with mink averaging between $900 and $1,100 for the additional skins and labor involved.

The French Federation of Furriers says persian lamb is the easiest fur to match, followed by mink and long-haired fluffy skins such as fox. Seal and other flat-haired pelts are the most difficult to match.

The answer for low-priced furs, where the cost of labor involved is out of proportion to the value of the coat, is to add a hemband in a contrasting type of skin.

Furriers specializing in budget and junior furs are doing a tremendous business in bands of fur sold by the yard, which can also be matched with new collars and cuffs.

Different types of fur employed for the same coat do not necessarily need a matching operation, and such leading firms as Christian Dior and Revillon go all out for combinations like broadtail or mink teamed with monkey fur, snow leopard with wolf, persian lamb with black fox, nutria with badger.

Some budget firms show such unlikely combinations as rabbit trimmed with long shaggy strands of curly-haired kalgan lamb.

Wife's Pregnancy Disrupts His Plans

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 40. My wife is 38. We have been married 20 years. Our children are 17, 15, and 13.

ANN LANDERS

I've been a good provider, a good father and a good husband . . . in that order. My wife and I have devoted our lives to our children and we were looking forward to the day when there would be just the two of us. We've always wanted to travel and have a little fun.

Last month when our youngest boy turned 13 our goal was in sight. Another two years and he'd be off to prep school and we'd be free. I felt ten years younger just thinking about it.

Just as I was making plans to have a vasectomy, my wife announced that she had seen the doctor and he told her she is pregnant. I asked her to have an abortion. She refused. We got into an argument, and now she isn't speaking to me. I think she is happy about this pregnancy. In fact, I have a sneaking suspicion she got this way on purpose.

The prospect of being tied down until I am nearly 60 depresses me. The way I see it, either my wife has an abortion or I get a divorce. When I told her to take her choice she didn't believe I was serious — but I am. I realize this an an extreme measure but I can't face raising another child. I'd like your honest opinion. — ON THE BRINK.

DEAR ON: My honest opinion is that you are either off your rocker or an 18 Carat Heel. Maybe both. Your wife did not get pregnant by herself. If she wants to have this baby you have no right to ask her to have an abortion. She is the one who must carry the child, deliver it, and care for it. The least you can do is give her a full measure of emotional support. My advice is to stop acting like a jackass and accept this fourth child with dignity.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Several days ago, I ran into a fellow I dated a few times when I was in high school. We are now both 23. I am not married. Bud is. In fact he has two small children.

I was immensely attracted to Bud when we were in school but he didn't want to go for me. When we met in the supermarket he was knocked out by my looks, my figure, the whole bit. He said he'd love to see me again, but he made it plain he couldn't take me out publicly. He'd like to come to my place and see me "quietly." It seems he married the "wrong" girl. His wife is unresponsive and cold. He needs someone who can give his life meaning.

I am dating several fellows but no one seriously. (My true love was killed in 1968, Vietnam.) I'm not promiscuous but I do have a yen for this old flame. I guess I really feel sorry for him. He is miserable and he wants me. Would it be wrong? — VULNERABLE.

DEAR VUL: We both know what you can do for him, but what can he do for you? For openers: He can take up a lot of your time. And he's sure to improve your cooking and double your grocery bill because you'll be fixing little suppers . . . trying out new recipes. While you "give his life meaning" you'll be passing up opportunities to date single fellows. And let's not overlook the possibility that he might dump his wife and marry you. You would then have the privilege of helping him with alimony and support money for the children. And don't forget the guilt (both yours and his). Suddenly, when it's legal, you'll discover that it isn't nearly so exciting as you thought it would be.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our daughter is 18. She is a high-minded, moral girl, holds a good job and has never caused us any trouble.

Last night when her date was leaving (about midnight) he slammed the door and yelled, "Go to hell." My husband is a sound sleeped and this awakened him. He asked me if I had heard it — and I had.

At breakfast this morning our daughter said nothing. This evening at the dinner table my husband asked her what the argument was about. She replied, "Nothing important. Bill came to the office this afternoon and we straightened everything out."

Is this sufficient? My husband and I think it's not. If she were your daughter what would you do? — CONCERNED PARENTS.

DEAR CONCERNED: I'd mind my own business. The hassle was between them. Stay out of it.

Just How Close Is the Wide, Wide World?

Dear Doris: I am 12. My mother and father keep crawling up my back. Every morning when I leave for school I am inspected. She looks for the length of my skirt, to see if I have eye shadow on, etc. I want to be "in", not "out", of style.

When my mother starts yelling at me she doesn't stop. When my father gets into the act he yells, but he is much better than my mother. She swears and says she is going to kill me some time. My older sister and my younger sister are favored more than me.

My mother doesn't seem like a mother when she starts yelling and swearing. She never takes us out. She and my dad go out all the time and leave us home with no television. I am punished a lot and blamed for things I don't even do. — Feel Like Leaving.

Dear Feel: Not only are you in the dead middle, between older and younger sisters, which is handicap enough; you are also half way between being a child and being grown up. Your parents still see you as a child when it comes to make-up and styles. Yet they are expecting grown-up behavior.

Try:

(1) To tone down your far-out behavior, whatever it is.

(2) to accept your mother's tantrums as evidence that she is human,

DORIS CLARK

(3) to remind her that a girl needs a little loving understanding, and

(4) to carry your own weight around the house.

I'm promising you things will improve.

Dear Doris: We would like our only daughter's wedding to be beautiful without being elaborate.

There will be 60 guests and if we serve dinner plus paying rental for the new Legion Hall plus lunch at midnight, we're afraid of getting carried away!

Would it seem too cheap to have the ceremony at 7.30 p.m. and a come - and - go (or stay) affair afterwards? The couple don't want a dance but we think, provided it weren't crowded, it would be good entertainment, as music is no problem. — No Time To Waste.

Dear No Time: Sometimes I think that a smaller wedding, done in good taste, can be more beautiful and memorable than a splashy affair. There is no reason why you have to start off with a big dinner.

What about an evening ceremony by candlelight? At the reception you serve a simple buffet of fancy sandwiches, pickles, olives, celery and carrot sticks, wedding cake, tea and coffee. If you wish, serve wine or punch for the toasts.

If music was provided, the younger people might swing into an informal dance. Serve coffee later still.

I'm sending you my 10-cent leaflet, "Happy The Bride The Sun Shines On", which describes three very different — and lovely — weddings.

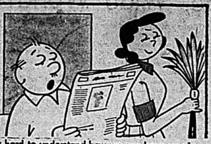
THE BETTER HALF

By Bob Barnes



"It's hard to understand how we can have an air-pollution problem with 200 million pairs of lungs filtering out its impurities with every breath."

Demonstrators Defy Cold

OTTAWA (CP) — About 20 demonstrators braved below-zero temperatures outside the justice building to demand the release from prison of persons arrested in Quebec under provisions of the War Measures Act Sunday.

Organized by Charlotte McEwan, co-chairman of the Emergency Committee for the Restoration of Civil Liberties, the orderly group included Young New Democrats, members of the NDP waffle group and the Young Socialist League of Canada.

Workers Ill, Blame Enzymes

NEW YORK (AP) — A special study group of the American Academy of Allergy said Sunday that detergents containing enzymes, which have led to illness in industrial workers are a "potential danger to the public health."

The group said it has been meeting with government and industry officials to set up a study of consumers to determine the magnitude of any danger.

Enzymes in detergents have produced respiratory illness in detergent industry workers in England and the United States, the committee said.

The committee said the enzymes will produce the same illness in consumers—the housewives—even though they are exposed to a much lower concentration. The only question, says the committee is how prevalent the illness is.

The Soap and Detergent Association, spokesman for a $1,200 million-a-year U.S. industry, said it was "perfectly willing to have all these things explored," but maintained there was no evidence that the enzymes pose any threat to the health of consumers.

Enzymes, found in all living things, are catalysts that speed up chemical reactions.

In detergents, enzymes are used to break down certain soils and stains into simpler forms so they can be more easily removed by the normal detergent and washing action, the industry says.

A box of enzyme detergent contains about one per cent enzyme material. Enzyme detergents have been in use in Europe since 1965 and in North America since 1967.

Leafs' Spencer Would Rather Be Scorer Than Scrapper

TORONTO (CP) — Brian Spencer grinned as he sat on the Toronto players' bench after his third goal of the night in the Maple Leafs 5-2 National Hockey League win over Pittsburgh Penguins Saturday.

Later, as he skated out to accept the plaudits of fans as the game's first star, there was a look of concern on his features, as if recalling the tragic circumstances that followed his elevation to the Leafs from their Tulsa farm club in the Central League 15 games ago.

Shortly after Leafs promoted him, his father was killed in an exchange of gunfire with RCMP at a Prince George, B.C., television station that was carrying the Vancouver Canucks game rather than Toronto.

The 21-year-old Fort St. James, B.C., native was informed of the shooting the following morning, a Sunday, but played that night and was a contributing factor in the Leafs' weekend sweep over Buffalo Sabres.

Later, he said it had always been his father's desire to see him play in the NHL. A few more games like Saturday, and it'll be difficult to remove the husky scrapper from the lineup.

In the dressing room after the game, Spencer said he'd prefer to be recognized as a scorer rather than a scrapper, the purpose Toronto management had in mind when they brought him from Tulsa.

He was ticketed for the Leafs last year but wound up with Tulsa.

During this year's training camp, pre-season injuries gave him a late start and he was assigned to Tulsa for conditioning.

But a lethargic Leaf team and injuries opened the door for Spencer's return and a sudden upswing in Toronto fortunes.

Until Saturday night, however, the former Swift Current, Sask., junior's contribution had been mainly as a muscle man, although he had shown smatterings of big-league hockey with his play-making ability.

He finally broke his goal-scoring drought in Toronto's 13-0 lacing of Detroit Red Wings the previous Saturday night and his three against the Penguins brought his season's total to four.

Wings Good For Barkley; Leafs Better

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Things were better for Doug Barkley when his job as coach of Detroit Red Wings was only temporary.

The 34-year-old Lethbridge, Alta. native, flown in as an interim coach Friday, did so well Saturday that Detroit gave him the job permanently, and the Wings lost Sunday night.

Barkley, coaching the Wings' farm club at Fort Worth in the Central League, was thrust into the Detroit job when Ned Harkness ascended to the general manager's post left vacant by the sudden departure of Sid Abel after more than 30 years in the organization.

In his only start as an interim coach, the Red Wings nipped Buffalo Sabres 3-2 Saturday.

Harkness gave Barkley the position Sunday for the remainder of the season hours before the Red Wings faced Toronto Maple Leafs, hottest club in the NHL with 13 victories, one defeat and a tie in the last 15 games.

The Leafs won, but not without a struggle. The Red Wings peppered Bruce Gamble in the Toronto goal with 34 shots but came out on the short end of a 3-2 score when rookie Billy MacMillan's scored with just over four minutes remaining gave Toronto a 3-1 lead.

In other Sunday games, New York Rangers tripped St. Louis Blues 4-2 to stay within a point of Boston Bruins, leaders in the East. The Bruins were 7-4 victors over California Golden Seals with two goals during the final three minutes. Los Angeles Kings and Buffalo Sabres played to a 2-2 tie, Minnesota North Stars edged Chicago Black Hawks 3-2 and Philadelphia Flyers came from two goals back to nip Montreal Canadiens 3-2 in an afternoon game.

Saturday, Brian Spencer's three goals helped Toronto defeat Pittsburgh Penguins 5-2, Montreal shaded Los Angeles 1-0 on Yvan Cournoyer's late goal, New York clipped Minnesota 1-0 on a goal by defenceman Rod Seiling, Chicago edged Boston 3-2, Philadelphia downed California 5-3 and Vancouver Canucks played a 2-2 standoff with St. Louis.

Sudden changes are nothing new to Barkley.

After years of obscurity in the Chicago system, he arrived in Detroit as a 27-year-old newcomer during the 1962 season and was an instant success, just missing top rookie honors.

His career as a player crashed around him Jan. 30, 1966, when he was struck accidentally in the right eye with a stick by Chicago's Doug Mohns. He suffered a detached retina and the eye was removed.

He remained with Detroit in a front-office job until the Fort Worth posting in May, 1969.

Then, during last week's period of unrest in the Detroit hierarchy, fate dealt him another sudden change and he was back in the NHL, this time as a coach.

Bruce Norris, club president, said Sunday: "We are extremely happy to have a man of Doug's ability. I heartily agree with Ned's choice of coach. . . ."

The Red Wings responded with their best game of the season, holding Toronto to just 19 shots at rookie goalie Jim Rutherford.

Red Wing shots hit the goal posts three times, twice by Gary Unger.

"It was some hockey game," said Leafs' Norm Ullman, a former Red Wing. "The last two times we played them (9-4 and 13-0 Toronto romps) they weren't anything like the old Red Wing teams.

"Tonight they were."

New York finally solved goalie Ernie Wakely's goaltending at St. Louis and rammed in four third-period goals. Dave Balon's power-play effort at 1:53, his first of two scores, launched the Rangers' recovery and offset a 1-0 St. Louis lead.

Phil Esposito's 38th goal in 41 games snapped a 4-4 tie at Boston as the Bruins survived three California power-play goals.

The North Stars capitalized on Black Hawk penalties at Chicago, scoring all three goals while enjoying a manpower advantage. Defenceman Barry Gibbs's score, at 18:27 of the third period with Chicago's Stan Mikita and Lou Angotti in the penalty box, was the winner.

Bill Lesuk's goal at 8:15 of the third period, his second of the game, sank Montreal and they saw their third-place standing in the East threatened when Toronto closed to within four points.

The Flyers only previous win over the Canadiens in Montreal was Nov. 4, 1967, the year they joined the league.

Looking more like a weekend golfer than the star he is, Arnold Palmer hits his second shot on the 9th hole out of deep ivy, left, during second round of the Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open, then shoots his third from behind a tree, right, to the green. He finished the hole by missing a birdie putt.

Casper Claims Click Costly

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bob Lunn—and possibly a cameraman—beat Billy Casper in a sudden-death playoff for the $22,000 first prize in the Glen Campbell-Los Angeles open golf tournament, the first stop on the 63-event pro tour this year.

Casper said the click of a camera on the final regulation hole Sunday "ruined my tempo on my driving."

"I didn't hit the ball solid once after that."

"I necked it on the 15th (the first playoff hole), hooked it on the 16th, sliced it on the 17th and pushed it on the 18th.

He saved par on all of them, however, but Lunn won it with a birdie on the 18th, hitting a wedge to within 18 inches of the flag.

It was the fifth victory for the burly, soft-spoken 25-year-old from Sacramento, Calif. He has been on the tour only a little more than three years and has won over $300,000.

Each had a final round 67 for 274, 10-under par on the Rancho Park golf club course. Art Wall, a 47-year-old former Masters champion who hasn't won since 1966, had a share of the lead until he three-putted the final hole, missing the second from three feet.

He had a 28 for 275 and was alone in third.

A group of four, including third-round leader Bobby Greenwood, followed at 277. The others were Phil Rodgers, Don January and Gibby Gilbert.

Arnold Palmer never was in contention and finished with a 71 for 282, well back. U.S. Open champ Tony Jacklin had a 72 for 284.

Casper, usually one of the most mild-mannered players on the tour, levelled a baleful glare at the cameraman after he was disturbed "right in the middle of my swing."

HAMILTON (CP) — General Manager Ralph Sazio says he'll be looking for a "special kind of guy" for Hamilton Tiger-Cats' next coach, someone with a strong personality.

Sazio hasn't anybody in mind at the moment as a replacement for head coach Joe Restic who quit to assume a similar post with Harvard University last week.

"We have a history here of having coaches with strong personalities, right from Carl Voyles, and that's a tradition I'd like to continue."

Sazio was the last to know of Restic's resignation. He returned from a European tour Saturday and got the news from a porter at Toronto International Airport.

Sazio will be in Houston this week for the American colleges coaching convention and will talk to candidates there.

HOUSTON (AP) — Tobin Rote, one of the all-time great quarterbacks at Rice University and with Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League, has been named an assistant football coach at Rice, new Head Coach Bill Peterson announced Saturday.

Rote, who led Rice to the 1949 Southwest Conference championship and to a 24-13 Cotton Bowl victory over North Carolina, has been in in private business in Detroit since his retirement from professional football after the 1966 season.

Thoeni took the first heat in 48.03 seconds and the second in 47.12 for a total of 95.15.

World champion Jean Noel Augert of France was second, clocked in 48.93 and 47.33 for a total of 96.26.

Russel had 48.92 and 47.71 for a total of 96.63.

After the race Russel had 80 points in the World Cup standings, followed by Augert with 79 and Henry Duvillard with 69. Thoeni was fourth with 55

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — Ron Ferguson, who skipped his Moncton rink to the national schoolboy curling championship last year, earned the right during the weekend to represent New Brunswick at the Winter Games next month in Saskatoon.

Ferguson and his rinkmates, Garth Jardine, Brian Steeves and Cyril Sutherland, topped five other teams in a single round-robin tournament here.

VIC STASIUK

Stasiuk Hits Roof

MONTREAL (CP) — The Gazette says it has learned that Philadelphia Flyers of the National Hockey League have a new rule: French-Canadian members of the West Division club are forbidden to speak their native language wherever the club gathers as a team.

The Flyers have five French-speaking players: Goalie Bernard Parent and forwards Serge Bernier, Andre Lacroix, Jean-Guy Gendron and Simon Nolet.

The newspaper says the players involved refuse to discuss the affair and that Flyers' coach Vic Stasiuk and Marcel Pelletier, the club's director of player personnel, were irate because the team's privacy had been invaded.

"It's nothing to get excited about," says Pelletier, a Drummondville, Que., native who picked up his English in 15 years as a professional goalie.

The situation, Stasiuk said, came about after a game in Boston last week.

"In the Boston game, I noticed some of the French fellows were talking up plays and telling each other to watch certain things. But later, one of the French players didn't warn one of the English players and it resulted in a Boston goal."

Italian Driver Dies

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — The tragic death of Italian racing driver Ignazio Guinti marred Sunday's 600-mile Argentina auto race Sunday.

The race was won by a Porsche 917 driven by Jo Siffert of Switzerland and Britain's Derek Bell. But Guinti's death overshadowed the race.

The Italian driver was fatally injured when his Ferrari smashed into Jean-Pierre Beltoise's Matra on the 38th lap of the 164-lap race. Beltoise's car had run out of gas

Shadow Gone, But Not Forgotten by Those Who Knew Him

TORONTO (CP) — Sports editor Jim Vipond of The Globe and Mail told the story today of The Shadow, and although the touching yarn had an element of mystery, it had nothing to do with the old detective show on radio.

Vipond recalls in his column that it started last Christmas Eve in the sports office, when a caller said on the telephone: "This is the Shadow."

The caller said he would like to bring in a donation to the newspaper's fund for retarded children. He was told Vipond would be on hand.

"An hour later," Vipond recalls, "a well dressed, middle-aged gentleman, carrying a bulky briefcase, stood in front of my desk.

"'Sir, I'm the Shadow. Could we have a few minutes in private somewhere.'"

"In a small office, he opened his briefcase and pulled out a package of small bills bound by a thick piece of elastic."

Explaining that his "Shadow" nickname was a private joke, he started to peel bills off the roll.

"'You did me a favor a couple of months ago," he told Vipond. "A newspaper man, a mutual friend of yours and mine, died suddenly.

"For years he used to give his son hockey tickets for a Detroit-Toronto hockey game as a birthday gift. This year I kept the tradition going. You may not know it, but you lined up the tickets.

"Here's $50 for the kids. Wish it could be more but I just came off 18 weeks on a picket line."

Then he peeled off another $11.

"Add this to it, to take care of the cost of the tickets. And here's another $11 for the kids just in case you can get tickets for another Detroit-Toronto game for the lad."

Then the caller poured Vipond a drink, left his name and address with a reminder that he wanted no publicity, and departed to catch a train to Guelph with a "Merry Christmas."

Vipond says today that he is breaking his promise about no publicity for a very good reason.

"Nine days later a newspaper clipping was dropped on my desk."

Hotspur Block To Leeds' March

LONDON (CP) — The march of Leeds United toward the English League soccer championship ran into a roadblock Saturday in the form of Tottenham Hotspur.

The Spurs scoring a 2-1 victory, broke Leeds' unbeaten home winning streak, and became only the second team to beat United this year in league play.

Leeds now is under intense pressure, with only one point separating it from second-place Arsenal, the European Fairs Cup holder, which downed struggling West Ham United 2-0 in London.

Leeds has 39 points from 25 games, one more than Arsenal which has played one game less.

Arsenal's triumph was predictable. West Ham, fourth from last, has had only one league victory in the last two months. Arsenal has yet to be beaten at home in league play.

Martin Chivers sparked Tottenhams to its upset win over Leeds. He netted in the second and 72nd minutes to offset a furious onslaught by Leeds in the closing stages. Allan Clarke headed home Leeds' goal in the 17th minute.

Goals by George Graham and Ray Kennedy sealed the fate of West Ham, whose defeat capped a week of dramatic headlines and desperate measures.

On Thursday, four West Ham players, including England team captain Bobby Moore, were disciplined following a late-night party, and manager Ron Greenwood staggered soccer fans when he dropped Moore from Saturday's game for tactical reasons.

Manchester United, the other glamor club whose fortunes have soured this season, halted its slide down the First-Division ladder with a 2-1 win over Chelsea on Chelsea's field. United, like West Ham struggling near the relegation zone in the First Division, scored its first league win since Nov. 14.

United won on a goal by Alan Gowling after a Willie Morgan penalty goal had countered a goal by Chelsea's Alan.

Ironically, United looked more impressive than in recent weeks despite the absence of one of its stars, George Best, dropped by manager Sir Matt Busby for disciplinary reasons.

The Second Division has developed into a three-way race, with Leicester City, Luton Town and Hull City all ending the day with 22 points.

Hull crushed Sunderland 4-0 on three goals by Chris Chilton and a fourth by Ken Wagstaff.

Bristol Rovers maintained its two-point lead over Fulham in the Third Division, despite a 2-1 defeat at home to third-place Aston Villa.

Pistons Can't Do Any Worse

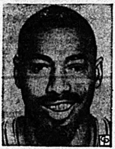
By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Detroit Pistons have 36 National Basketball Association games left in which to match last year's total number of victories. If they stop there, it will be quite a disappointment.

The Pistons won their 30th game of the current season Sunday, whipping Los Angeles Lakers 118-109. The victory, in their 46th game of the season, left the Pistons one shy of their total number of victories all of last year.

In other NBA action Sunday, Philadelphia '76ers tripped Boston Celtics 115-107, Chicago Bulls walloped Buffalo Braves 141-113, Phoenix Suns downed Atlanta Hawks 116-105 and Milwaukee Bucks bombed Baltimore Bullets 151-99.

In Saturday's games, Philadelphia defeated Phoenix 123-112, Seattle SuperSonics toped Cincinnati Royals 114-110, San Francisco Warriors downed San Diego Rockets 109-103, Milwaukee whipped Detroit 118-100, Cleveland Cavaliers took Buffalo 111-99 and Portland Trail Blazers stung New York Knicks 114-96.



WILT CHAMBERLAIN

Both the Lakers and Pistons took turns blowing 11-point bulges and their game went into the fourth quarter deadlocked at 86. But the hot shooting of Dave Bing and Terry Dischinger pulled the Pistons away in the final 12 minutes.

Jimmy Walker led Detroit with 29 points. Bing had 23 and Dischinger 19 including his last eight shots from the floor. Wilt Chamberlain and Jerry West had 25 apiece for the Lakers.

Billy Cunningham whipped in 31 points and Philadelphia beat Boston for the first time in four tries this season to move into a virtual tie with the Celtics for second place in the NBA's Atlantic Division.

Bob Love and Jerry Sloan combined for 20 points in the third period as Chicago shattered a tight game and whacked Buffalo

Paul Silas connected on 17 consecutive foul shots leading Phoenix' parade to the foul line as the Suns topped Atlanta.

Cal Loses Track Title

HOUSTON (AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association took away the University of California's 1970 national collegate outdoor track and field championship Sunday for using an ineligible athlete.

The athlete in question, Isaac Curtis, may lose a season of eligibility in both football and track.

Curtis finished second in the 100-yard dash, fourth in the 220 and ran on the winning 440-yard relay team—a total of 22 points — as California won the NCAA track title last June at Des Moines, Iowa.

The action by the NCAA's executive committee dropped California's winning point total from 40 to 18 and awarded the title to Brigham Young, Kansas and Oregon, which had tied for second with 35 points.

Curtis, who was an outstanding sophomore halfback last fall on California's football team, was declared ineligible for the track championship because the school did not establish a predicted grade average for him when he entered as a freshman.

Under NCAA policy, a student must predict at least a 1.6 average on a 4.0 scale to be eligible for athletic participation.

The NCAA said California discovered after the track championships that it had inadvertently failed to submit a prediction for Curtis.

Hometown Skaters Dominate Oshawa Meet

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Annual competitions for berths on the Ontario squad travelling to the national figure skating championships at Winnipeg were held in four regions Saturday and Sunday.

The competitions at Oshawa, Mississauga, London and Sault Ste. Marie qualified representatives for the Jan. 18-24 national finals.

At Oshawa, Lynn Nightingale, 14, of Minto, won the eastern division senior women's singles, nosing out Stephanie Haney of Kingston.

Barbara Anderson of the Nepean figure skating club won the junior women's singles and the junior women's dance title went to Susan McDonald and Deborah Harrison of Cornwall.

Gary Shortt of Oshawa took the senior men's dance title. Gayle Shortt and Stan Hughes of Oshawa won the junior pairs.

The central division competition was dominated by Toronto skating clubs.

They won all but three of the competitions for 16 spots in the national championships.

Barbara Berezowski and David Porter of Unionville won the senior dance competition and Cynthia Zacher was second in junior women's singles, preventing a clean sweep by Toronto.

Cheryl Richardson of Toronto won the junior women's title and Jayne Elliott was third.

Steve Bohenk won the senior men's singles, with Ray Naismithand Roger Ussemae second and third. In senior women's singles, Carol Farmer was followed by Judy Dick and Heather Moore.

Linda Tasker and Allan Carson will represent Central Ontario in senior pairs and Kevin Robertson, John Rait and Bob Houston qualified, in that order, for junior men's singles.

Judy Ann Curran, 20., and Keith Caughill, 19, runners-up in junior dance at Edmonton last year, topped the senior dance class at the western Ontario sectionals in London.

The St. Thomas couple will compete, under national rules, in the junior class at Winnipeg.

Julie Black of Sarnia won the senior women's crown and will be accompanied by her runner-up, Patricia Modde, 15, of Point Edward.

Others who will go from the western sectionals include: Janice Maikawa, Hamilton, and Reed MacDonald, 18, junior pairs; Jamie McGrigor, Preston, senior men's; Nancy and Rick Gruhl, Welland, senior pairs; Kim Wylie, Galt, Kathy Ostapchuck, Mississauga, a member of the Brant figure skating club, and Susan Patterson, Guelph, junior women's singles; Susanne Lamoreaux and Paul Whitson, Windsor, junior dance.

North Bay's Betsy McLean successfully defended her senior women's title at the Northern Ontario sectionals in Sault Ste. Marie as North Bay skaters won five of the six national berths.

Randy Coyne and Nancy Podolski of Sault Ste. Marie captured the sixth spot with a victory in junior pairs.

The other North Bay winners were Kathy Fahlgren, junior women's singles, Tommy Harrison and Glen Laframboise in junior and senior men's singles, and Harison and Michele Boucher, senior dance.

Fairways Just Fail to Throw Wrench in Peterborough Machine

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

A large - size, adjustable checking wrench thrown by the Belleville Fairways wasn't sufficient to stop the Eastern Ontario Junior B League's "machine", but it was enough to keep it out of high gear.

The Belleville B's dropped a tight 5-4 decision to the first who have been winning with machine - like precision this year, in a Sunday night home ice bout.

The league leaders scored the winning goal with a minute and 38 seconds remaining in the game, seconds after Belleville had successfully killed an interference penalty to Rick Holmes.

Defenceman Randy Spencer clicked on a nifty three-way passing play with Jim Johnston and Bob Gainey to beat Ron Jury on his glove side for the deciding score.

Neither team was able to take advantage of the scoring chances that could have put the game out of reach earlier as the Fairways were able to curtail a Lion attack that had scored 27 times in three previous meetings this season.

"They've got the formula down pat now and they saw what they can do with it. It's up to them from here on in", said Belleville coach Floyd Crawford of his team's backchecking effort. "I think they (Peterborough) had to come out of here with a little more respect for us", he added.

After Peterborough had taken a 1-0 lead on the first of Jim Jones' two goals, Belleville's Brian O'Coin walked in to beat Doug McFadden for his 11th goal of the season.

Joe Clarke, shifted to left wing with Danny Lupenette and Dave Smith for the contest, beat McFadden on a breakaway near the end of the period to give the Fairways a one-goal lead.

The Lions had missed two great opportunities to move into the lead when Doug Murray fired a breakaway attempt wide of the Belleville goal and again when Jury slid out to stop Bob Gainey and then was able to scramble back into his crease before the visitors could score in the empty net.

Peterborough appeared ready to take command in the opening minutes of the middle frame, hitting for two quick goals as the Fairways had a brief checking lapse.

Jury prevented the visitors from upping their 3-2 lead when he sprawled to take a rebound attempt away from Jim Johnston at the 15-minute mark.

Belleville Fairway centre Brian O'Coin takes a jolt from defenceman Randy Spencer of the Peterborough Lions in last night's Eastern Ontario Junior B contset in Belleville.

Dave Ferguson's first goal of the year pulled the home team back even in the third period. The Picton winger, shifted to the third line with Rod Palmer and Cliff Janitsch sailed into the clear and slapped a low 25-footer past McFadden.

Jones counted a power play goal at the eight-minute mark for the Ontario Games gold medalists and it appeared that the score might hold up when McFadden smothered Janitsch's breakaway attempt and blocked a screened drive by Terry Meagher minutes later.

Janitsch evened matters with the Peterborough netminder when his centring pass from behind the net hit McFadden's back and went in to tie the game.

Spencer scored his game winner just as Holmes stepped on the ice to even the teams at four men apiece. The Fairways pulled Jury for an extra attacker in the final minute of play but were unable to muster a serious scoring threat.

Crawford spread praise throughout the whole Belleville team, but was particularly pleased with the effort by the Palmer - Ferguson - Janitsch line. Dave Smith played a standout checking game for the losers while Danny Lupenette threw several stiff bodychecks.

Winger Terry Meagher playing in his first game of the season showed the effects of a lack of conditioning, but was still dangerous around the net.

On defence, Kevin Dockrill came up with a hard-hitting effort as the top Fairway rearguard.

Jury was called upon to face 40 shots from the winners while Belleville tested McFadden 29 times.

Next game for the Fairways will be Friday night when they are at home to the fourth place Cobourg Cougars in a crucial battle for the league's final playoff berth.

Mo-Hawks Get Weird Bounces

OWEN SOUND (Special) — Most hockey teams have their hands full beating other teams. But when the puck's not on your side, you're in trouble.

By even the most unbiased standards, the little black disc was not rolling for Belleville Mo-Hawks when they dropped a 7-2 Saturday night decision here to Owen Sound Crescents.

A picture - play goal by Ray Johnston had tied the game 2-2 for the Mo-Hawks early in the third period when the puck turned on them.

LIONEL BOTLY

"I've never seen five weirder goals than the ones they got in that third period," said coach Dave Jones.

One of the five, which came in a nine-minute span, started off as a beautiful toe save by Mo-Hawk goalie Steve Rexe. That was before the puck hit the post and richocheted back into the net.

Another struck Rexe's pad, bounced straight up in the air, and went into the net over his shoulder.

Two Owen Sound goals were shot from behind the Belleville net, and caromed in off skates.

"We didn't play too badly . . . but what can you do when the puck does that," shrugged Jones after the Mo-Hawks' first loss in five games.

Lionel Botly got the other Belleville goal in the second period. It marked the steady defenceman's initial scoring success of the season.

Little Mayo Paquette paced the Crescents with two goals, while Dale Watson, Don Vipond, Drew Haldane, Bob Tunstead, and playing-coach Dave McComb added the others.

Fortunately for the Mo-Hawks, Kingston Aces helped out by losing a pair of weekend games, 8-2 and 13-5 drubbings by Barrie and Orillia, respectively.

The Mo-Hawks' 13-13 record leaves them with a slim one-point foothold on fourth place in the eight - team senior grouping ahead of Kingston and Oakville. The Mo-Hawks have a game in hand over the Aces, Oaks and Crescents, whose Saturday win gave them 20 points.

The Mo-Hawks need at least a split in next weekend's tough road trip to Galt and Oakville if they want to keep third - place Barrie in sight. The Flyers, who lost 5-2 in Belleville Friday, are eight points up, but have played two more games than the Mo-Hawks.

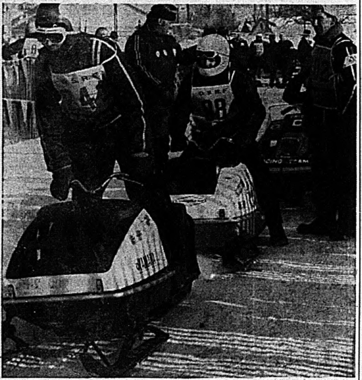
SUNDAY'S RESULTS
Peterboro 5, Belleville 4.



This was the scene in the "on-deck circle" Saturday during C modified competition at the third annual Kawartha Cup snowmobile championships in Peterborough. In the centre, Prince Edward Yamaha racing team member Bill Ireland does some pre-race chatting with teammate Doug Weese.

Cats Complete Snow Job

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — The Kawartha Cup went to an American snowmobiler racer Sunday after a rough-and-tumble day of racing that sent five people to hospital.

Roger Janssen of Thief River Falls, Minn., nosed out hometown favorite Scott Hemming by just over one point, with a 185.82-point total to Hemming's 184.24. Both were driving Arctic Cats.

Geston Ferland of Valcourt, Que., was third with 181 on a Skidoo.

Paid attendance over the two days of racing was 48,000. Many of the fans decided to remain for today's action which features modified machines and an attempt at a land speed record.

Many races had to be restarted because of pileups in which drivers were often hit by one or more following machines.

The racing was dominated by the seven-man factory team from Thief River Falls driving Arctic Cats made by the Arctic Cat factory there.

They were driving four-cylinder vehicles using special fuel, and had been training for months, sometimes on grass.

Until the 800-cubic-centimetre King Cats arrived, nothing bigger than three cylinders had raced in Ontario.

Quinte area entries were not totally snowed under in the 1,000 - entry competitions, dominated by factory - sponsored drivers.

Most successful Quinte driver was Belleville's Mary O'Neill who qualified in the first two finals of the Molson's Women's International, winning one Sunday heat, and coming second in a Saturday preliminary, but finishing out of the money in both finals.

She was also driving her Arctic Cat in today's third women's event.

Sisters - in - law Nancy and Sandra Weese cashed in for qualifying for Molson finals Saturday and Sunday, carrying the Prince Edward Yamaha racing team's colors.

Weese team members Bill Ireland and Bob Weese found themselves competing in one of the most competitive classes, facing 60 other drivers in C Modified competition. Ireland ran second in his first race but failed to qualify for the Kawartha Cup final after his second heat.

More than 5,000 prospective spectators were turned away from Sunday's racing at Peterborough's Morrow Park.

Mayor Will Try To Oust Hippies

KITCHENER (CP) — Mayor Sid McLennan says he intends to do everything possible to rid the city of "hippie communes" being operated in several old houses.

"I intend to take a hard line and will do all I can to eliminate such pollution in our city," he said in a weekend statement.

He said earlier that shortly after Christmas he accompanied police during drug raids on two houses used for communal living.

"I was astounded," he said. "It was just unbelievable that human beings were placed in such filth."

He placed part of the blame on parents and absentee landlords.

The mayor said one solution would be strict enforcement of Kitchener's occupany maintenance bylaw, now awaiting final approval from the Ontario Municipal Board.

TV's 'Second Season' Begins With Mixed Bag of Shows

NEW YORK (AP) — Television's "second season" began during the weekend with a flurry of new programs and specials. All this combined for diversity and spice which sometimes has been lacking in recent weeks.

The Super Comedy Bowl on CBS Sunday was an affectionate, kidding tribute to professional football that enlisted a spectacular cast of stars—John Wayne, Jack Lemmon, Charlton Heston, Lucille Ball, Carol Burnett and Flip Wilson were just the top-drawer names. There was also a squad of football players including Joe Namath and O. J. Simpson. Everybody was busy being funny.

The result was a crowded, uneven hour pulled up by a few deft sketches including one about the home life of a football player and a funny male fashion show of the latest in football uniforms. It was the kind of show that was most enjoyed by the hard-core football fans.

NBC's correspondents were on hand for its annual year-end news review and look into the future. The Conversation, steered by John Chancellor, was free-wheeling and enlivened by expressions of opinion—a meaty 90 minutes that covered the globe.

The educational stations, heartened by public enthusiasm for its Forsyte Saga series last season, have imported a new British series. The First Churchill, a 12-part history of the first Duke of Marlborough, ancestor of Britain's wartime prime minister.

The first episode, seen Sunday, introduced viewers to the 17th Century court of Charles II and its intrigue. It was a handsome period piece with colorful sets and costume and surprisingly frank dialogue. Moving between scenes of battle, court and bedroom scenes, it launched the romance of Capt. John Churchill, then a French mercenary, and Sarah Jennings, a lady-in-waiting to a duchess.

Also on Sunday night was a rewarding hour with the Velaquez, Goya and El Greco paintings in Spain's famed Prado museum. The photography was great and Aline Saarinen's narration was precise and intelligent but after exposure to Kenneth Clark's lively observations in Civilisation, it sounded a bit like excerpts recited from a guide book.

The New Andy Griffith Show had its CBS premiere Friday night. Andy has finally made it back to a small town and both he and the audience are bound to be more comfortable. With wife (Lee Meriwether), two children and a sister-in-law, he arrived in a small Southern town to become mayor pro tem. He immediately got involved with three old friends visiting from Mayberry. His old home town—Don Knotts, George Lindsay and Paul Hartman. Griffith, once again, is playing the strong, central good guy while the comedians operate around him. It was pleasant, low-key entertainment with a little moral for the whole family.

Rollins Peewees Edged by Hosts

Lindsay peewes believed that hospitality shouldn't extend to the hockey rink, stopping the Maurice Rollins allstars 4-3 Saturday in the championship game of the Lindsay peewee tournament.

Rollins grabbed an early 2-1 lead in the game, but the home team came back to earn a 2-2 draw at the end of the second period. Two quick goals in the final frame gave Lindsay the cushion they needed to win the title.

Bobby Crawford, Peter Coates and Andy Lupenette were the Rollins' triggermen in that game, while Bruce Hamilton turned in a strong effort in the Belleville goal.

Earlier in the tournament Rollins had edged Barrie 4-3 and topped Orillia 6-4 to gain the berth in the finals.

Ray Skelly was the big gun in the win over Barrie with three goals with the other going to Crawford.

In the win over Orillia it was Skelly scoring his fourth and fifth goals, with Lupenette, Crawford and Tony Meagher getting singles.

Ottawa Grips Second

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ottawa 67s got outstanding net work from Michel Larocque to turn back a determined team of St. Catharines Black Hawks 5-3 Sunday and take a tight grip on second place in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

Larocque withstood 42 shots before St. Catharines scored its first goal early in the third period.

Netminding was also a key factor in Niagara Falls Flyers' 6-4 win over London Knights as Keith Pallett made his first appearance in the Flyers' goal. He was traded from St. Catharines Saturday.

At Montreal Richard Martin fired six goals and Bobby Lalonde got three in the Junior Canadiens' 10-3 win over Oshawa Generals. And in Toronto, Bill Barber fired two goals late in the third period as his Kitchener Rangers forged a 7-7 tie with Toronto Marlboros.

The wins left the league standings in the same order with idle Peterborough in front, Ottawa three points behind with 49, St. Catharines another three points back and Montreal in fourth place with 45 points.

Toronto has 34 points in the fifth spot, London, Hamilton and Kitchener are bunched with 26, 25, and 24 points. Oshawa is ninth with 21 and Niagara Falls trails with 14.

London travels to Oshawa Tuesday and Kitchener faces Hamilton.

At St. Catharines Sunday the Black Hawks carried 75 pre cent of the play but couldn't get past a 3-0 Ottawa lead until the third period. They then tied the score but Peter Gaw shoved Ottawa in front again and Murray Wilson clinched it with an empty-net goal.

The Black Hawks outshot Ottawa 53-67.

Ottawa's other goals came from Dennis Potvin, Brian McSheffrey and Ron Bobbette. The St. Catharines marksmen were Bob Peppler, Paul Shakes and Clyde Simon.

Another Niagara Falls import, former Hamilton Red Wings forward Mike Schoenfeld, scored the insurance goal at London and set up two others, including the game-winner by Gary Holt.

Morris Titanic scored two goals for the Flyers and the others went to Wayne King and Don Lever. Reg Thomas, Lou Nistico, Randy Osburn and Ray Babcock scored for London.

Jocelyn Guevremont added a single point to the multiple-goal efforts by the Junior Habs' Martin and Lalonde. Terry O'Reilly, Al Avery and Don Selling collected goals for Oshawa.

Kitchener's Chuck Blair and Bruce Herridge matched Barber's two-goal output. The other goal was scored by Ted Scharf.

Quinte Skaters Consoled

Finishing second had its consolations for Quinte Figure skaters Patsy Allore and Michael Fitzgibbon at the Eastern Ontario Figure Skating sectionals in Oshawa, Saturday.

The Belleville entry in the juniors pairs competition finished 3-10 of a point behind the winners and as a result earned the right to compete in the Canadian championships in Winnipeg next Sunday.

None of the other nine entries from the Quinte club qualified for the trip to Winnipeg.

Towers Save Face

Towers Food City Novices were the only Belleville OMHA entry to come up with a weekend win, taking a 4-1 decision over Trenton.

Scoring was evenly spread among the winners with Gary McInroy, Gary Frederick, Tim Coates and Danny Duffy each counted once.

Mulroney's Sunoco Novice B's were on the short end of a 4-2 count in their match against Port Hope.

Wayne Deighton and Mark Crawford were the Mulroney's scorers as the winners held a 22-6 edge in shots on goal.

In bantam action, the Belleville Kinsmen suffered a 6-0 blanking at the hands of Trenton in a Sunday encounter.

The Blake Kerr Imperial midgets not only lost their game with Trenton, but their goalie as well. Bruce Clarke was struck in the throat by a puck late in the second period and was taken to the Belleville General Hospital, where he was given out-patient treatment.

Eldon Matthews finished up in the Imperials net with Russ Herrington scoring the team's only goal.

'Greene' Fields

Batawa skiers had their Toronto opponents turning "Greene" with envy in their Nancy Greene League competition Saturday.

The Batawa ski club youngsters wracked up a big 151-71 edge over the Dagmar Ski Club from the provincial capital.

Helfried Probst, Dietmar Probst and Neil Ackerman swept the top three spots for Batawa.

A total of 20 skiers from each of the two clubs participated in the meet.

Hulk of French Cruise Liner Smoulders on Caribbean Reef

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (CP) — The grey-black hulk of the French cruise liner Antilles lay smouldering on a reef off the Caribbean island of Mustique as an official inquiry into the shipwreck opened in Martinique Sunday.

The last five of the 350 passengers from the 19,828-ton liner left Barbados Sunday, and about 134 crew members of the stricken vessel were scheduled to reach Paris Sunday night on a special flight from Martinique.

A spokesman for the ship's owners, the French Line, said in Paris that the Antilles, the line's second-largest liner, was considered a total loss.

Fire broke out aboard the vessel after she ran aground Friday on the reef 100 miles from Bridgetown.

There were no casualties and most of the Antilles' passengers and crew were brought to Bridgetown Saturday by the British liner Queen Elizabeth 2 and the French ship Suffren.

The Elizabeth, spent most of Friday night picking up the survivors from the tiny island of Mustique, which they reached in lifeboats and other small craft.

The accuracy of navigation charts was being questioned in some quarters. The coral area where the Antilles ran aground and other Caribbean coral areas are being visited for the first time by cruise liners.

M. Kutz, a pilot of a light plane and resident of Mustique for 12 years, said in an interview with Radio Antilles in Fort de France that he had never seen such a big ship so close to shore.

Kutz said he flew over the liner, wagging the plane's wings, and at the same time tried to contact the Antilles on his radio.

The radio station said another resident of Mustique who saw the liner nearing land telephoned the marine radio centre on the island of St. Vincent and asked that the vessel be warned by radio. It was not known whether the message got through.

The French line said a fuel tank was broken when the ship hit the reef, hurling oil into the boiler room and starting a fire.

Leadership Candidates Speak

TORONTO (CP) — The five declared candidates for leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative Party, and with it the provincial premiership, were expected to begin providing a basis for choice as the campaign begins in earnest this week with tours and speeches.

So far they've been willing to offer policy details only in limited areas as indications of the direction their administrations would take, although they have agreed the present government has been pre-occupied with material considerations.

Education Minister William Davis, considered the front runner with considerable support already pledged by cabinet colleagues and backbenchers, begins his campaign today with a visit to Hamilton and continues through southwestern Ontario Tuesday and Wednesday,

He follows Alan Lawrence, mines and northern affairs minister, who swung through southwestern Ontario immediately after announcing his candidacy last Wednesday. He hit northwestern Ontario on the weekend.

Returning to Toronto Sunday, the mines minister said he was "agreeably surprised" with the support he encountered.

Also in the north on the weekend was Darcy McKeough, municipal affairs minister, who made a speech stressing economic nationalism in Sudbury Friday night, then went to Timmins.

The five candidates—the others are A. B. R. (Bert) Lawrence, minister of financial and commercial affairs, and Provincial Secretary Robert Welch—plan to meet on the same platform at seven regional meetings. The first is scheduled for Thursday at Ottawa.

Allan Lawrence was scheduled to address his home riding of Toronto St. George tonight, then travel to Cochrane and Sault Ste. Marie Tuesday and Kitchener Wednesday.

Today Mr. McKeough was to visit St. Thomas and London, where he was scheduled to address political science students at the University of Western Ontario.

The candidates will meet in six more regional debates—at Toronto, Sudbury, Thunder Bay, Hamilton, London and Windsor

Astronauts Begin Preparation

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (Reuter) — Astronauts Alan Shepard, Ed Mitchell and Stuart Roosa began today the most sheltered three weeks of their lives — a period of strict health precautions leading up to their flight to the moon Jan. 31.

This will be followed by nine days in space and then 17 days in quarantine to ensure they have not been infected by any unknown "moon bugs."

Before flying back to the launch centre here, Mitchell said in Houston that he thought the new pre-flight restrictions were "a blasted nuisance."

But he added: "We are buying a measure of added protection by this and we are all going to try to make it work."

Under the "flight crew health stabilization program," the crew will be isolated from anyone not designated a "prime contact." The program was devised to prevent a recurrence of the Apollo 13 situation in which Ken Mattingly was replaced on the eve of the flight because he had been exposed to German measles.

Trinidad Regime Faces Stiff Test

PORT OF SPAIN (AP) — Prime Minister Eric Williams of Trinidad, who won a 2-to-1 victory in 1966 voting, is facing a serious challenge in this year's elections.

His government was nearly toppled during a crisis last April. The aftermath of the rioting and mutiny which took place then is still being felt.

A court martial of 13 officers and men of the Trinidad and Tobago Regiment, the two-island country's 750-man army, continues after six weeks of prosecution testimony. Some 50 other soldiers await trial.

Prosecution testimony has linked the mutineers with Black Power leaders in an alleged abortive plan to stage a revolution during the rioting last spring. The alleged plot failed only because the coast guard remained loyal and shelled the mutineers' camp to prevent them from entering Port of Spain

Four persons died. The week of disorders began with the government's decree of a tough state of emergency on April 21 and a rampage through the downtown shoping area a few hours later by rock-throwing youths. The mutiny erupted the same day.

The government finally lifted the state of emergency two months ago and released half a dozen Black Power leaders jailed since April. They have stayed out of the limelight since.

More moderate black nationalist leaders, such as Lloyd Best, a lecturer in economics at the University of West Indies campus in Trinidad, and Dr. James Millette, an English history lecturer at the university, actively oppose the Williams government but neither man was involved in the spring trouble.

"I'm certain the old order isn't going to last through 1971," says Best. He heads Tapia, a black-nationalist organization which publishes a widely-read monthly.

Williams's five-year term has expired and he must call new elections within six weeks after the present Parliament ends its business. Elections probably will be in the spring.

A strong coalition including those disenchanted with the Williams government and hitherto apathetic East Indian voters could end his 15-year stay in Whitehall, the country's government house.

Your Car

Corrosion May Be Culprit If Hot Engine Won't Start

By RAY STAPLEY

A reader writes:

"I have a starting problem with my three-year-old car that baffles me. When the engine is cold, or has been running at a slow speed for a few miles, it starts instantly. But if I shut off the key after driving on the highway for an hour or so, the car wont' start until it has been parked for about 15 minutes. If I try to get going in less time than this, the starter simply groans and the engine barely turns over.

"I do most of my own repairs, and during the past six months I have done the following; installed a rebuilt starter-motor ;put in a new heavy-duty battery; overhauled the alternator and adjusted the voltage regulator to produce maximum current output to the battery.

"The engine has been thoroughly tuned and retuned by myself and a mechanic, but after checking my work I can find nothing wrong with it.

"Apart from this problem, the car is in excellent condition, and I would like to keep it for two more years.

"I would appreciate your comments on this matter."

Mr. J. D.,
Toronto, Ont.

Several readers have contacted me regarding starting difficulties when the engine is up to maximum operating temperature. Occasionally malfunctions can develop in the starting circuit that even a well-trained technician can find difficult to diagnose

Begin with the battery. When the car often remains idle for several days, and is driven only on short, slow runs, even a new battery can fail. When, due to insufficient driving, the battery remains in a semi-discharged condition, the plates can harden. This may make it difficult and, occasionally, impossible to fully charge the battery, and replacement is the only cure. Under adverse driving conditions, the battery should be tested frequently and charged as necessary. As well, the voltage regulator should be adjusted to suit driving conditions.

The starter-motor uses considerably more current than all the rest of the electrical accessories combined. For this reason, there must be no corosion or dirt that would restrict the flow of current to the starter. The inside of the battery cables and the posts to which they are attached should be scraped down to bare metal to assure a perfect bond between them. The other end of the battery ground cable (usually attached to the block) must be clean and securely tightened. Remove any paint or rust at the point to which it is anchored.

Corroded contacts in the starter solenoid switch, or undersized or damaged battery cables, can restrict the flow of current to the starter.

Maladjusted ignition timing is another cause of starting failure when the engine is either hot or cold. Before the timing is set, the automatic spark advance mechanism should be thoroughly inspected for possible defects.

If, after all these things have been checked out by a knowlegeable mechanic, the problem persists, there is one more point that should not be overlooked.

In the starter-motor there are four field coils. Depending on the volume of power the starter motor must produce, these coils can vary. The use of a wrong field coil when the starter is being rebuilt can seriously affect the starter's maximum power output.

When it appears that this may be the culprit, it is wise to consult an automotive electrical company that specializes in this type of diagnosing.

Tobacco Laws Coming

OTTAWA (CP) — Health Minister John Munro says the government will introduce in the current session of Parliament legislation dealing with tobacco and smoking.

He did not specify what specific areas the legislation will cover but he said the government had considered a Commons committee report on the subject and a policy position presented by the health department.

The committee, which studied the cigarette health-hazard issue in 1967-68, proposed that within two years of enactment of restrictive legislation on cigarette advertising, all broadcast advertising be banned and other promotion be limited to brand-name statements.

Appeal Rejected

WASHINGTON (AP) — James R. Hoffa, once among the most powerful U.S. union leaders, faces up to an additional five years in federal prison following U.S. Supreme Court rejection today of an appeal from his 1964 pension fraud conviction.

The 57-year-old Teamsters Union president, serving an eight-year sentence for jury tampering, lost his third attempt in the court to avert a new jail term.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Penicillin Fights Rheumatic Fever

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I'm not stubborn, just anxious. My 21 - year - old son has had two attacks of rheumatic fever. The first when he was 12 years old, the second a few weeks ago. He had sore throat, was in bed with swollen joints — the whole bit. His doctor says he has been fortunate that he hasn't had any heart complications.

But the problem is this. Should he or shouldn't he take penicillin? The doctor says there are no two ways about it. Unless he does he's liable to have more attacks and severely damage his heart. But I'm afraid of penicillin. What would you do — Mrs. V.

Comment: Let your doctor carry the burden of anxiety. Let him weigh the advantages of penicillin against the possibilities of a penicillin reaction.

Your son is fortunate in not having had any heart complications. Why depend on Lady Luck in the future rather than on penicillin which is more likely to prevent serious troublesome complications What you are doing is assuming that your son will not get another attack of rheumatic fever. This is wishful thinking.

For example, a recent study by Dr. Leon Gordis and associates of Baltimore showed that continuous prophylactic anti - streptococcal medication is necessary in young people who have had rheumatic fever. This is so because recurrences are not uncommon.

They studied 41 patients hospitalized for acute rheumatic fever. Ages ranged from 21 to 53 years. Twenty-four of the patients who had attacks were from 21 to 29 years of age.

Twelve of the total cases were recurrent. There were seven second attacks and five cases which were third or more attacks. Eight of the recurrent attacks were in patients with recurrent attacks of rheumatic fever was receiving regular penicillin prophylaxis at the time of the acute attack.

So you see, Mrs. V., your son is still liable to have future attacks of rheumatic fever unless you protect him. If I were you, I'd follow the doctor's advice. Have your son take preventive doses of penicillin prescribed by him — over a period of months (and years, if necessary). There's much less potential danger to his heart in following this regime. Doctors are aware of possible penicillin reactions and take precautions when prescribing this treatment.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: An old track fan and grade school buddy of mine from Dubuque sent me your column on exercise. I have not read your book, but surely you have got to be kidding.

You might be interested in some simple arithmetic. The normal heart beats at 72 per minute This produces 4,320 beats per hour and 103,680 per 24-hour day, omitting consideration for the decrease while sleeping.

It is not difficult for a two-mile - a - day jogger to lower his heartbeat rate to 60 per minute. (Mine is 56). This produces 3,600 per hour and 86,400 per day. Now, it takes about 16 minutes to jog two miles. So subtract 960 beats at the jogger's normal rate and substitute, for the 16 minutes, 1,920 beats, figured at 120 beats per minute. This increases the jogger's daily heartbeats to 87,360.

Subtract 87,360 (jogger) from 103,680 (sitter), and the jogger's heartbank deposit ends up the day 16,320 beats richer than the sitter. — Mr. B.

Comment: I am happy to present your side of it. But in fairness, read my book to understand why I prefer to save my heartbeats by napping rather than by jogging.

Sydney J. Harris Says

We Forget The Unpleasant

One of Freud's most substantial contributions to our understanding of the unconscious mind was his work on "memory" and "forgetfulness." He demonstrated conclusively that when we forget dates or misplace objects, such carelessness is usually a deliberate (if unconscious) act.

I used to forever be misplacing my lecture notes — also losing the addresses and forgetting the dates of my engagements — because of an aversion to public speaking. And it is probably true of all of us that we "misplace" bills a good deal easier than checks; we don't want to pay the bills, but are eager to cash the checks.

Darwin, who understood this trick of the mind long before Freud, wrote in his autobiography: "I have made it a habit over the years always to make notes of any facts or observations that disagreed with my general theories; for I found by experience that such facts and observations were much more likely to escape from the memory than favorable ones."

Ellen Terry, in her memoirs, relates that one of the few occasions on which she forgot her lines was during the early performances of an Ibsen play. When she came to a certain speech, she simply "blew up" in her lines, and had to be prompted.

This happened several nights in a row, and was quite uncharacteristic of Miss Terry, who was a "quick study" in all her parts. Finally, she sat down to analyze the trouble, and then recollected that the speech echoed a disturbing episode during her youth — so her unconscious mind rejected it.

Stephen Leacock invariably "misplaced" invitations to social functions he didn't want to attend. Dickens often forgot the names of his literary colleagues, which was his way of obliterating his competitors. Dwight Morrow, who hated to travel, would embark on a train trip and in the middle of the journey completely forget where he was going.

The most classical case of absent - mindedness is that of Painleve, who was three times premier of France. This brilliant man would take a taxi home when his own car was waiting for him, and would often give the cabdriver his telephone number instead of his address.

Once, expecting a friend, he pinned a note on his own door: "Painleve will return in 15 minutes. Please wait." On returning, he saw his own note and sat down on the steps to wait for himself: This "idiot" had been Minister of Aviation, Minister of War, and one of the most brilliant mathematicians Europe had produced in this century. What a field - day Dr. Freud would have had tramping around in that unconscious mind.

'Institutionalized Racism' Is Alleged in Canada

TORONTO (CP) — A black student leader charged Sunday that "institutionalized racism" is prevalent in Canada.

Deborah Clarke, a student at Centennial College and a member of the Black Students Union, said she was not talking about prejudice.

"A country that's investing money in South Africa and the Caribbean can't say that it's a country free of racism in its institutions," she told the Willowdale Unitarian Fellowship.

"There are no black institutions in North America and very few in Africa. That's the kind of racism I'm talking about," she said.

Miss Clarke told the Unitarians "all the institutions, corporations and companies you work for aid in keeping institutionalized racism operating."

She commented that when slavery was abolished in Canada in 1793 there were three times as many blacks here as in 1949 when a census was taken.

She suggested things might have been made difficult for blacks who wanted to stay in Canada once they were free.

"There are a lot of uptight, ripped-off (cheated) young blacks in downtown Toronto and in Montreal and on the East Coast," she warned. "And we're heading for the same situation here as Watts, Harlem, Chicago, Buffalo and Detroit have faced in the past 10 years."

"But we sit around and say, in effect, it can't happen here because all our niggers are imported and they're happy.

"But they're not all imported and they sure as hell aren't happy."

Crown to Try to Prove Plot Against Bourassa

Seditious Libel Trial Underway

MONTREAL (CP) — The Crown intends to prove the existence of a plan "to overthrow the Quebec government by force" when the first of the jury trials arising from the province's political kidnapping crisis resumes at 10 a.m. today.

Prosecutor Bruno Pateras made the statement Monday in his opening address to the jury at the trial of Robert Langevin, 21, charged with publishing a seditious libel.

"The Crown intends to show," he said, "that on or about Oct. 11, 1970, (Langevin) drafted with his own hand a plan to follow to overthrow the Quebec government by force."

The charge alleges that Langevin wrote and distributed a pamphlet "advocating the use of force to replace a legally established government in Canada," punishable on conviction by 14 years in prison.

Langevin, wearing a brown leather jacket over his blue shirt and red knitted tie, sat quietly and attentively in the prisoner's dock beside a policeman as the trial got under way.

In addition to the publishing count, Langevin is charged under the Criminal Code with seditious conspiracy with four others: Jean Boisjoly, Gilles Cormier, Raymond Cormier and Come Leblanc. This also carries a possible 14-year sentence.

The other four, all young men appearing to be in their teens or early 20s appeared just before his trial began and were instructed to return for trial Wednesday.

The dark-haired Langevin also faces two charges under the Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act, 1970—of membership in the outlawed Front de Liberation du Quebec and of advocating or promoting the illegal acts of the FLQ. Both these charges, to be dealt with later, are punishable by five years or a $5,000 fine or both.

Only two witnesses were heard at the opening session of the trial Monday after the selection of 12 male jurors was completed just before 4 p.m.

Sgt. Andre Charette, 36, of Montreal police testified he took three photographs inside an apartment during a raid Oct. 25. Wilfrid Nolet, 40, superintendent of the apartment building, said he rented the apartment in question to Leblanc.

Strict security was in force for the opening of the trials, with more than 20 extra police on hand to search everyone entering the courthouse.

The selection of the jury took less than three hours. Only 20 of a possible 160 candidates for jury duty were called, with the defence disqualifying seven and the Crown one.

Defence lawyer Michel Lamarre asked all 20 whether they had heard of the case through newspaper, radio or television accounts and whether they had formed an opinion about it.

Jordan Battle Ceases

AMMAN (CP) — The Jordanian government and the Palestinian Arab guerrilla command joined in a new ceasefire order today after five days of fighting between King Hussein's army and the guerrillas.

A joint statement said anyone disobeying the order would be tried as a traitor. The statement was signed by Premier Wasfi Tell and Ibrahim Bakr of the central committee of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

They appealed to Jordanians and Palestinians to go back to work and resume their normal activities.

The Jordanian army was reported preparing to move back into Amman in force to conduct a house-to-house search for guerrilla arms.

Trudeau on Leaving Commonwealth

Canada Might Want to Be 'Pure as Other Countries'

NEW DELHI (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau raised the possibility twice Tuesday that Canada might be forced to drop out of the Commonwealth.

He told a group of students at Nehru University that if a certain number of the 31 Commonwealth states—he did not say how many—withdrew from the organization because of the South African arms issue, a chain reaction might set in.

In such a case, Canada might "want to be as pure as the others."

Later at a news conference he said he hopes India will do what it can to prevent any breakup of the Commonwealth on the arms issue.

But if some Comomnwealth countries did withdraw and a chain reaction set in, India like Canada would be in a difficult position about what to do.

Uruguayan Police Get New Powers

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (Reuter) — More than 12,000 troops and police hunting kidnapped British Ambassador Geoffrey Jackson were armed today with sweeping new powers for house-to-house raids and arrests of suspects without a warrant.

Congress suspended key constitutional rights Monday night for 40 days to enable intensification of the search for the 55-year-old envoy, snatched in a daring morning raid by Tupamaro urban guerrillas Friday.

The action, requested by President Jorge Pacheco Areco as the sweeping manhunt failed to turn up any clues, allows security forces to hold any arrested persons indefinitely without bringing them before a court.

The Tupamaros so far have issued only one brief communique about the ambassador, saying he is being held in a "people's prison" along with Brazilian Consul Aloysio Dias Gomide and American agronomist Claude Fly, who were kidnapped more than five months ago.

Working to Preserve Commonwealth

Trudeau and Mrs. Gandhi Achieve Meeting of Minds on Arms Sale

NEW DELHI (CP-Reuter) — Prime Ministers Trudeau and Indira Gandhi expressed their concern again today at the dangers to the Commonwealth from Britain's proposed sales of certain types of arms to South Africa.

The Canadian leader urged the Indian prime minister and the country to rally around the Commonwealth and help preserve it.

Trudeau, on his way to the Commonwealth prime ministers conference in Singapore which opens Thursday, arrived in New Delhi Monday. He missed a serious outbreak of rioting by students in the holy city of Varanasi by a few hours after a visit there Monday. The riots left 11 persons dead.

Canadian sources said Trudeau and Mrs. Gandhi met for 2½ hours of formal talks and had "certain meetings of minds" on the arms sale issue.

Each has the same concern about the dangers of the situation and the future of the Commonwealth and both are anxious to avoid a confrontation at the Commonwealth prime ministers' summit, the sources added.

In a speech at a luncheon given in his honor by Mrs. Gandhi, Trudeau spoke of the Commonwealth as a valuable instrument well worth preserving. It demanded nothing more than tolerance, good faith and human concern but offered friendship assistance and goodwill.

Trudeau's message to British Prime Minister Heath at a dinner meeting here Monday night was the same.

Trudeau was understood to have repeated to Heath that he considers the projected British sale of arms to South Africa as unwise because of the consequences it might have on the future of the Commonwealth.

Trudeau said of the Commonwealth in his luncheon speech:

"No other international grouping permits the representatives of such a widespread number of countries to gather and to co-operate with one another in a totally unrehearsed and civil fashion."

While conscious of India's material poverty at present, Trudeau said it is nothing compared with the spiritual and artistic poverty of much of the world in past centuries. A solution to present-day violence might well be found through a combination of the comprehension of the East and the technology of the West.

For the violence possibly is a product of what he called the subconscious clash between the forces of desire and the forces of reaction.

The common factor facing all government is change, Trudeau said. "I have not the slightest doubt that the decade which has just begun will be witness to more changes in most spheres of human activity than has any other decade in history."

The sources said most of today's talks, the only official discussions between the two leaders during Trudeau's four-day visit to India, were taken up with a review of major world issues.

It's U.S. Turn to Protest Campaign of Harassment

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The war of nerves over harassment of Americans in Moscow and attacks on Soviet property in the United States intensified today in a crossfire of threats and protests.

After five days of menacing incidents involving American citizens in Moscow, the U.S. embassy Monday night officially protested to the Soviet authorities.

Political Councillor Thompson Buchanan called in person at the foreign ministry to present a list of incidents including deliberate damage to Americans' cars and encounters between Americans and indignant Russians.

This harassment followed a Soviet warning a week ago that it could not guarantee the safety of Americans in Moscow if Soviet premises in the United States were not protected against attacks by extremist Jewish groups.

A Soviet embassy building in Washington was damaged by a bomb blast only three days after the Russian warning, and Sunday the militant Jewish Defence League in New York threatened harassment of the attacks on Soviet officials there.

The recent wave of anti-Soviet sentiment in the United States, and the ensuing anti-American reaction in Russia, grew out of Jewish resentment of the treatment of Jews in the Soviet Union.

Sunday's threat by the JDL, which claims 15,000 members and admits responsibility for several attacks on Soviet property in New York, brought a quick and disapproving response from the state department

Jarring to Outline Israel's Peace Plans

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — UN mediator Gunnar Jarring meets today with Muhammed El Farra, Jordan's chief UN delegate, to talk over Israel's new peace proposals.

Jarring met Monday night with Mohammed El Zayyat, Egypt's chief UN delegate. The mediator was maintaining strict secrecy in the first stages of his newly resumed peace mission, and neither he nor El Zayyat had anything to say afterward.

After conferring with the Jordanian ambassador, Jarring planned to convey the Arab reaction to Israel's chief UN delegate, Yosef Tekoah, who took part in the meetings Jarring held in Jerusalem last weekend with Premier Golda Meir and Foreign Minister Abba Eban.

Israeli leaders in Jerusalem feel that their proposals to Jarring have "kicked the ball back into the Arab court," one diplomatic source in the Israeli capital reported.

Allore (left), suspended separate school superintendent, was represented by former Ontario Liberal leader John Wintermeyer (right), a Kitchener solicitor at yesterday's public hearing in Hastings County court house. Donald Williams

New Board Chairman States His Position

The newly-elected chairman of Hastings county board of education last night hit at unequal distribution of educational funds among county boards.

Donald Williams of Stirling, chosen last night to head the 17-member board for 1971, said that he had never thought it fair "that one county can spend $600 per pupil a year and we can spend only a little more than $400".

In his remarks at the board's inaugural meeting at Centennial Secondary School, Mr. Williams noted that Hastings county's per pupil costs are less than those of many other counties.

"We have a long way to go to fulfil our goal of equality of education," he told trustees and about 50 visitors in attendance.

He called for the public to take an interest in other areas of education besides elementary and secondary schooling.

The public is very aware of what we spend," he commented. "It should investigate the amount of money spent on post-secondary education in the province — the amount spent on community colleges and universities."

Mr. Williams said professional development of teachers is still the board's top priority.

"Modern classrooms and teaching aids are of no avail without a good, qualified teacher in charge," he said.

Mr. Williams called on trustees, administrators, principals and teachers to foster good public relations.

"We have nothing to hide," he asserted. "We've got to tell the public that we are not throwing money away; we are not hiring people we don't need. And we can prove it."

He said the ceiling put on educational spending by the minister of education will force boards to take a second look at what they are doing.

"We will have to continue to examine our priorities and make sure we get value for every dollar spent," he said. "If we do a good job we can get the money we need and move ahead."

Mr. Williams paid tribute to director of education Eric Runacres.

"One of the first things we did as a board in 1969 was to hire Mr. Runacres," he said. "I feel that it was one of the best things we did. He is a real asset to education in Hastings county. He succeeded in bringing together the whole county — its administration, principals and teachers."

Everett Fairman of Belleville was elected vice-chairman of the board for 1971. Because of illness he was the only trustee not present at the inaugural meeting.

Before voting for the new chairman began, F. John Follis of Bancroft announced that he would not be in the running "for personal reasons". James Clarke of Belleville, chairman during the board's first two years of existence, also requested that his name not be placed in nomination.

Rev. Michael Caswell of Trenton read the inaugural prayer.

Before adjourning, Mrs. Jean Hutchison of Trenton recorded a motion in appreciation of Mr. Clarke for his chairmanship during the board's first two formative years.

The newly-elected chairman had already commented on the harmony and unity Mr. Clarke had achieved among the 17 trustees during his term of office.

"He cemented us together." said Mrs. Hutchison.

Mr. Clarke replied that his years as chairman had been happy, enjoyable and "very easy because of the calibre of the trustees and administrators."

Allore Hearing Is Adjourned In Mysterious Circumstances

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

A mysterious "communication" led to the adjournment yesterday of the public hearing into the suspension of separate school superintendent F. B. Allore.

The hearing will reconvene Thursday at 10 a.m. at Hastings County Court House.

Frontenac county court Judge A. R. Campbell granted the two-day adjournment on the request of Hastings and Prince Edward separate school board solicitor Willard Esty of Toronto.

It was the second adjournment of the day.

The first was granted at the request of Mr. Allore's lawyer former Ontario Liberal leader John Wintermeyer of Kitchener. Shortly after the hearing opened he said he had "a communication to relay to counsel for the board" and it should be considered privately.

Immediately after the adjournment was granted, 12 of the 14 members of the 1969-70 board present in the courtroom met with their solicitors in an adjacent room. Three members of the board's administrative staff also sat in on the closed sessions.

The marathon session continued for five hours, with time out for a short luncheon break.

When the hearing was reconvened again at 3:30 p.m., Mr. Esty asked for a further adjournment until Thursday.

"Discussions have come to the point where we now need authoritative instructions," he told the judge.

Asked outside court who would issue the "authoritative instructions", Mr. Esty shrugged, "Who knows? I didn't write the statute."

"God, I suppose," replied former board chairman E. J. Buckley to the same question.

The term of office of 1969-70 board ended Dec. 31, 1970. The new board takes over after the inaugural meeting Wednesday night at Nicholson Catholic College.

Of the 12 trustees locked in discussion yesterday at the court house, seven were re-elected Dec. 7 for a two-year term. None of the five new trustees voted in for 1971-72 were present at the closed discussions yesterday.

The public hearing was poorly attended.

Four spectators were present in the morning and six in the afternoon.

The hearing began Dec. 21 in Kingston, when Mr. Allore and Mr. Buckley and their lawyers met with Judge Campbell to decide on procedure for the hearing. At that time Mr. Esty estimated it would continue for a week and arrangements were made to hold it in Belleville for the convenience of witneses.

Mr. Allore has been under suspension since May 8, 1970, after refusing a request to resign his position as superintendent and chief executive officer of the separate school board.

The department of education did not ratify the suspension and the minister of education called the public hearing Nov. 17.

The board's reasons for the suspension were neglect, misconduct and inefficiency.

It alleged that Mr. Allore failed to work with the office staff, failed to supply accurate information to trustees, failed to follow directions of the board and conducted himself in a manner amounting to usurpation of functions and powers of the board.

The board also charged that Mr. Allore's conduct undermined the required mutual trust between the board, superintendent and staff, that he disregarded the department of education requirements and followed a course of conduct that indicated serious lack of the type of judgment required of a senior executive in education.

Mr. Allore was hired as superintendent of the newly-created two-county board in January, 1969. Before that, he was an inspector with the department of education serving the Hastings-Lennox and Addington, Northumberland and Nipissing district area.

Natural Gas Pipeline Going to Prince Edward

Lake Ontario Cement Ltd. of Picton will be using natural gas for all processing requirements by May of this year if plans of Northern and Central Gas Corporation Ltd. are carried out as expected.

And Selkirk Snyder, district manager for Lakeland Natural Gas at Kingston, sees no problem that might interfere with the gas company's plans.

Lakeland Natural Gas is a division of Northern and Central Gas Corporation Ltd., which distributes gas throughout Quebec, Manitoba and Ontario.

Plans are to tap into the Trans Canada natural gas pipeline about a mile north of Marysville and run 14.9 miles of eight-inch pipe through Tyendinaga and Sophiasburg townships to the cement plant north of Picton.

The pipeline would be suspended from the Quinte Skyway bridge for crossing the Bay of Quinte.

Mr. Snyder said yesterday that the necessary approvals for the pipeline had been received from the Ontario Energy Board and also from the Department of Highways for use of the Quinte Skyway bridge.

Tyendinaga township yesterday gave third reading to a bylaw authorizing construction of the pipeline, while Sophiasburg was expected to give final reading to a similar bylaw today.

Construction of the pipeline is expected to get under way within a week or 10 days.

"It will be a winter works project," Mr. Snyder told The Intelligencer. "We hope to have the pipeline completed by May."

Alignment of the pipeline will generally parallel Highway 49 which runs from Highway 401 to Picton over the Quinte Skyway bridge.

A branch pipeline from the eight-inch main to serve the town of Deseronto is also under study by gas company officials who said there was little doubt that the branch line would eventually be built.

Still to be determined, however, is the timing of construction.

"There are a couple of industries in Deseronto that are interested in gas service," Mr. Snyder said.

Belleville Was Fatality-free All of 1970

Belleville has distinguished itself among Ontario municipalities of its size by having a fatality-free traffic year, Chief Douglas Crosbie of the Belleville City Police reported this morning.

The fatality-free situation last year was the first time in 12 years that no one has died of a traffic accident in the city.

The Belleville Police Department has sought to achieve such a record since 1958 which was also a fatality-free year. And 1970 was the year.

The fatality-free situation occurred despite an increase in 1970 of people injured and an increase in traffic accidents.

"Naturally, we're quite pleased," Chief Crosbie said. "Very few communities our size can report a fatality-free year."

Chief Crosbie explained that in addition to an increase in traffic accidents there has been an increase in population in Belleville and an increase in the number of vehicles in operation.

"I suppose it's a combination of good luck and credit to the drivers here," Chief Crosbie said. "I would hope it was an improvement in driving habits."

Cement Profits Sharply Down

A price war in the Toronto ready - mix industry; a 40 per cent increase in the cost of purchasing coal for the Picton Lake Ontario Cement plant; and the freeing of the Canadian dollar in June which affected income from United States business have been blamed for a 48 per cent profit decline in 1970 for Lake Ontario Cement Ltd. of Toronto.

R. D. MacLean, president of the company which operates a plant near Picton, blamed the above factors on the fact that profit for the year ended Dec. 31 was $534,518 or 12.7 cents a share, compared with $1,028,354 or 24.3 cents a share a year earlier.

Sales increased to $22,617,173 from $21,735,902.

Date Changed

It has been announced that the Prince Edward County Board of Education meeting at Bloomfield, scheduled to be held at 8 p.m. yesterday, was deferred until Wednesday, Jan. 13.

This will be the inaugural meeting of the board.

Chamber Urged To Support Mill

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward County industrial commissioner William Duggan has suggested members of local chamber of commerce forward their resolutions supporting the kraft pulp mill proposed for Hillier township by the Canadian International Paper Co. to concerned provincial and federal government authorities.

He expressed concern with the more active front presented at government levels by county residents opposing the mill. Mr. Duggan urged those supporting the project to convey their feelings, too. Although chamber members did not act officially yesterday on this suggestion it was approved in a general discussion.

New Face on Council

Hadley Richardson joined Sidney Township Council in signing his official declaration as a member of the council in the inaugural meeting yesterday. Clerk J. Byron Harder watched while both returning councillor Glen Meyers and the new councillor officially joined council for the 1971-72 term.

Land-split Decision Now in Hands of OMB

Results of yesterday's Ontario Municipal Board hearing, held at the Sidney Township municipal offices, will not be known for at least 10 days.

The hearing was called as a result of an appeal by Department of Municipal Affair's veto of an approved land-split of his three lots in the hamlet of Wallbridge.

The proposed land-split to result in a small subdivision was approved by the Committee of Adjustment but came to a halt when the Department of Municipal Affairs overruled the approval.

One of the principal objections outlined by a DMA spokesman yesterday, was that development in the township was spotted, spread out.

The spokesman stated that it was not a wise decision to create permanent growth "at random throughout the township".

Belleville solicitor Bernard W. Hurley, acting for Mr. Ketcheson, asked if there would have been an objection if an official plan had existed.

"If there were an approved official plan, there would be no objection to this application," was the official statement.

Mr. Ketcheson stated that he had planned the severance since 1960 and began work on the land in 1967, finishing his clearing in 1969, spending $3,460 on road grading and gravel alone.

"I went ahead with this thing in all good faith . . . and was not informed by anyone (township officials) that any trouble would occur with the planned severance or any future severance."

He advised hearing chairman F. G. Blake, member of the OMB, that a petition had been put before all his neighbors, asking their approval of the split, which he received.

Mr. Blake advised Mr. Ketcheson that such a petition could not be considered in evidence because the person who signed could have changed his mind upon observing hearing evidence and "should be present to give their reasons for signing."

Mr. Ketcheson, 67, stated that he had owned the land for the past 30 years and had no other income other than his old age pension.

"I hoped to make $3,000 to $5,000 on the sale of this land", he said.

He explained that he had sold a number of the lots and had a prospective buyer, Maurice Rollins Construction, for the remaining lots.

The DMA official commented that consideration would have to be given to the proximity of schools, supply of water and sewer services.

The hearing concluded shortly after noon. Results are expected to be received by mail within at least 10 days.

The hamlet of Wallbridge holds much historical significance.

Mr. Ketcheson contradicted the DMA official's testimony that the hamlet was a "well established community, 30-40 years old" by stating that it had existed for at least 150 years.

He testified that Wallbridge had at one time been the municipal head of Hastings County, with County offices in existence until they were destroyed by fire.

Although no longer a centre of special importance, there are more than a dozen homes spread along the road running through the hamlet.

Snowmobile Bylaw May Be Confusing

Members of the city traffic committee are not certain that the provisions of city council's new snowmobile bylaw is getting across to the public.

And this despite the bylaw being advertised in the newspaper.

Alderman E. A. Orr felt that the bylaw was much too wordy to expect close reading by the general public and suggested that the salient points should be condensed into an easily read display advertisement "placed in a more thoroughly read section of the newspaper."

It was felt the classified section of the newspaper might not be read by most snowmobile users.

Committee members voted that when the city's snowmobile bylaw is approved by the Ontario department of highways, it be re-advertised in a more condensed form.

Farmer Takes Shotgun To Cow-baiting Dogs

An irate Sidney township farmer stepped out of his house one night recently with a shotgun under his arm.

Hugh Gray of RR5, Belleville, informed Sidney Township Council yesterday that an increasing number of dogs have been running loose.

"They'll be running in packs soon," he said.

"They'll run cattle to beat anything," the angry farmer said.

Mr. Gray asked council what laws there were against shooting dogs.

Reeve Jack Bush replied that "if they're on your property, you can."

Referring to the case of shotgun versus dogs, the farmer commented that he had had a change of heart.

"I don't want to shoot a neighbor's dog . . . so I fired into the air."

However, he hinted that he might lower his aim in the future.

"I'm not going to have my cattle run by dogs."

A number of dogs have been reported shot and at least one farmer has received compensation from council for a dog-ravaged steer.

Council was advised yesterday that township Animal Patrol Officer Dan Tucker of Stirling had been patrolling regularly and reported several dogs being picked up and disposed of.

Legal Counsel Hired To Fight Ward System

TRENTON (Staff) — Town council here last night decided that the taxpayers' money should be used to finance a professional fight against the ward system form of voting.

Councillor Paul Tripp introduced the motion, passing council, that parties who oppose the ward system would receive legal counsel paid for by the town when the Ontario Municipal Board hearing into the ward system opens here February 19.

Mr. Tripp took the view that because council "represents the sum total of the people" and because "it is not against the present system, that it should hire counsel to present its side of the case".

Council had requested October 13 that a hearing be held in the town to determine whether a ward system form of election should be instituted here. It had been compelled by the Municipal Affairs Act to forward a 392-name petition to the OMB advocating a ward system and suggested the public hearing so that both sides of the case would be heard fully.

Referring to the petitioners, Councillor Tripp said he felt 'they should be responsible for bringing their own counsel and making their views known."

Mayor Duncan McDonald took the position that "it is not right for one side to be provided with legal counsel (by the town) when the other side is not."

Clerk - comptroller O. W. Larry told councillors that he had been told recently by OMB officials that they definitely prefer having cases presented at public hearings by professional lawyers and that the town had set a precedent in taking sides on a case when it engaged a lawyer to help have services extended across private land on the Carrying Place Road.

"I think that was a matter of what was best for the town," Mayor McDonald replied. Mayor McDonald did not support the motion.

Builder Objects To Board's Action

Local builder Maurice H. Rollins has voiced objection to two planning board recommendations regarding provision of a sidewalk and road widening in connection with a proposed condominium housing development in the College and Moira Street area.

The planning board recommendation to council was that approval of the project be granted subject to provision of a sidewalk on Moira Street, and giving 26 feet along the south side of the property for widening of College Street.

Yesterday, Mr. Rollins told the city traffic and light committee that he objected to the requirement for a walk along the east of his property on Moira Street, claiming that most pedestrian traffic generated by the development would be to the west thereby making the sidewalk unnecessary.

Also, he felt it unfair of the city to ask him to give up 26 feet of his frontage for street widening.

Mr. Rollins said he was not opposed to giving up 13 feet or half of the width of the proposed widening.

Giving up 26 feet would mean elimination of two housing units and Mr. Rollins did not feel this was fair, especially when other property needed for street widening would have to be expropriated by the city.

Police Chief Douglas T. Crosbie said, however, that he stood by his feeling that there should be sidewalks on all city streets as a safety measure.

On recommendation of Alderman E. A. Orr, action on Mr. Rollins' objection with respect to street widening was deferred to allow time for the city engineer and planning staff to investigate and bring in a report.

Mr. Rollins said a construction start on what would be Belleville's first condominium housing was not expected for another month or so.

Fishing Derby Sponsorship Change Proposed

PICTON (Staff) — Members of the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce have agreed to delegate the organization of the annual fishing derby to members of the Quinte's Isle Tourist Association with an offer of assistance in the project. The decision followed a general discussion during which it was noted that the efforts of the chamber in connection with this event do not correspond with its success.

One member pointed out, however, that the publicity provided for Prince Edward County through the fishing competition could not be measured. A second member suggested that the derby is primarily promotion of the tourist industry and local tourist operators generally have neglected to co-operate in its sponsorship.

Artificial Snow At Picton Club

PICTON (Staff) — Members of the Macaulay Mountain Ski Club this week are taking the slopes by storm with a machine manufacturing artificial snow up to depths of 18 inches. Snow-making equipment was used last weekend to cover one 700-foot long run with a solid base.

Club director Dr. Karl Euler pointed out that with the snow-maker skiers can enjoy their sport on a steady basis. He said that the slopes will be open this evening, Wednesday afternoon and Thursday night adding, "If there was enough demand, then we would ski every night because we can make snow almost at will."

Club facilities now are being utilized by more than 100 skiers. Next summer the club directorate will consider further development of the ski site and probably replace the present rope tow with a T-bar. Dr. Euler suggested the cost of T-bar equipment would be approximately $30,000. Companion slopes to the existing 700-foot main run also will be cut on the mountain in the summer months.

It was suggested at yesterday's meeting of the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce that ski enthusiasts' efforts in organizing the Macaulay Mountain Ski Club should be formally recognized with a congratulatory letter. A small work force initiated a concentrated effort this fall in clearing the two ski runs now enjoyed. The non-profit club has been developed successfully largely through members' volunteer labor.

Model Cost $500-plus

TRENTON (Staff) — One of the newcomers to town council, George Brown, asked last night for information about the cost of a cardboard model of the Post Office development scheme that went on display here before the municipal election.

Council decided to pay for the miniature reproduction of the complex last month but the cost had not been disclosed. The model had been on display in a downtown shop window in the week before Trenton voters went to the polls to decide whether they should finance part of the project.

"Council should not be hiding this. I think it should be made public," Councillor Brown said.

Clerk - comptroller O. W. Larry told council that he did not have the bill for the scale model available but that it cost over $500. It was built by a local student in his spare time.

Meeting Set

PICTON (Staff) — The annual meeting of the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce will be held Thursday, February 4 at Prince Edward Yacht Club. Guest speaker for the dinner meeting has not yet been named.

Trenton Post Office Expenditure Approved

TRENTON (Staff) — Council here last night authorized the spending of $251,150 to finance its share of the Post Office redevelopment scheme on Dundas West, despite objections concerning design of the proposed building.

"I do not think that I could go for the present setup with the tower kept for $20,000." Councillor George Brown said. The landmark clock tower was to be retained as part of the project.

"This is the plan that was brought before the people." Councillor Ted Parker explained and Councillor Paul Tripp added that the concept had been devised "to try to satisfy as many people as possible".

Councillor Pete Aziz asked if approving the expenditure meant that the draft plan for the new building "must be followed as indicated".

In reply, Councillor Parker said that council would be holding meetings with the architect of the project, David Linden of Montreal, in the near future and that Mr. Linden is receptive to suggestions.

Clerk - comptroller O. W. Larry told council that the scheme would be held up by the Ontario Municipal Board until Trenton's capital budget is drawn. This should be complete in two weeks.

Doctor Complains Driveway Plugged

TRENTON (Staff) — Trenton council last night heard a town medical practitioner, Dr. J. V. Byrne of 92 Dundas Street East, complain that the town's snowplows were blocking his driveway with snow.

Dr. Byrne said that he had photographs to prove that the town's plows were plugging his driveway with snow — at times 2, 3 and 4 ft. deep — during "odd hours of the night."

"I am a senior member of the medical profession" he said, adding that he expends considerable effort trying to keep his driveway clean.

The doctor urged that the Town of Trenton begin a program of cleaning out the driveway entrances of those engaged in emergency services. He mentioned policemen, firemen and the medical fraternity.

"I am not asking that every driveway in town be cleared but only those of people involved in emergency service. This is important," he concluded.

Mayor Duncan McDonald asked if cleaning the driveways of such people had not, in fact, been town policy.

"If this was the town policy, I was not aware of it," town engineer Arthur Campbell said.

However, during the discussion, it was learned that there had been such a policy four years ago but that it broke down in part because some doctors said they were "more important than others".

The matter of cleaning driveways of certain individuals was referred to the administrative board for suggestions. Councillor Ted Parker recommended "that a list should be compiled of those that come into the emergency services group."

Agreement Signed Following Debate

TRENTON (Staff) — Approval was given by council here last night to the long-delayed subdivision agreement between the town and Dufferin Developments and doubt was raised by one councillor whether the mayor intended to sign it.

"If you are not going to sign it, I would like to know," Councillor Ted Parker told Mayor Duncan McDonald, referring to a rumor that the mayor would not sign it even if approved by council.

The Mayor replied that he would sign if there was a general subdividers' agreement policy on the books. If not, he said that he would "take a long look at it".

"I am not satisfied with the town expending money to extend services to subdivisions . . . If other towns had these give - away programs, I would not object," he explained.

The Town of Trenton, in many subdividers' agreements, contributes 50 per cent of the cost of providing services to new subdivisions in the town. This the mayor contends is a "give-away".

While councillors discussed the matter, deputy clerk Arden Royce sifted through the books for a form attached to an old subdividers' agreement.

Once found, it was read by Clerk - comptroller O. W. Larry who concluded that the attached item was a council policy statement — that 50 per cent of the cost of services should be met by the town.

Mayor McDonald then signed the new Dufferin Developments agreement. However he indicated that he would institute measures to end the costsharing practice.

Work Scene in 1971

Although a $50 million youth program for the coming summer has been described by Manpower Minister Otto Lang as "completely speculative," the minister does admit that some proposals are being considered.

Considering that an estimated 250,000 students will be unemployed this summer, anything that Ottawa can do to provide them with work should be welcome. The relief of unemployment among both the adult population and students should be a government priority. Whether one has worked on a regular basis in adult life, with a family to support, or is among the new crop of PhDs, and in the eyes of many an employer "over-qualified," there is nothing so demoralizing as having nothing to do.

Looking at this kind of situation one can understand the sense of disillusionment of thousands of seasonal workers, teenagers and young adults who are without gainful employment. If, as has been mentioned, schemes to improve the employment picture this year include putting 30,000 students to work planting trees and improving salmon streams — a program that would cost about $15 million — then 1971 may be a promising enough year.

That leaves thousands of others however, and we wonder if industry, the business world and government could not combine to absorb the rest in some capacity or other. A good many students of course must realize that personal appearance does matter and that they cannot expect to be accepted into the "square" world if they are untidy and unkempt, or favor eccentric habits of dress.

For all their expensive education moreover, not to mention their supposedly greater knowledge of the world (this we doubt anyway), if a student cannot even spell he may have difficulty finding work requiring academic talents. We receive letters from students, some of them betraying more than just a hint of arrogance and contempt of the adult world while at the same time eulogizing youth's superior talents, only to find that there are many spelling errors. One would think too that they would know when a word is misspelled and look it up in the dictionary — but no.

In any event, we hope that all concerned will make every effort to find work for those who need work and are willing to work. It is one of the big efforts that must be made this year in Canada, for the wellbeing of individuals and of society at large.

Pantomine Season

In Britain it is still the traditional season of pantomimes, the mixture of fairy tale and vaudeville entertainment that begins before Christmas and continues until about the end of January.

From one end of Britain to the other, in theatres from London to Belfast to Aberdeen young and old are enjoying the make-believe of productions such as Cinderella, Dick Whittington and Jack and the Beanstalk with their lithe, quick-stepping and pretty "principal boys" who in true pantomime tradition happen to be girls!

But if pantomimes are supposed to be mainly for children, the Associated Press reports that in recent years some had become so indecent that one noted British performer, Richard Hearne ("Mr. Pastry") spurned them. Now, says AP, pantomimes have not been so clean in years. The in-thing is clean man; smut and four-letter words are out. So are jokes with double meanings which hitherto were supposed to be too subtle for the children and just subtle enough for adults.

AP does not say what sort of material is being substituted by the comedians who are so much part and parcel of pantomime fare. However, we recall some of the patter of a comedian in a Belfast pantomime 20 years or more ago. It was long before drugs were part of the general scene, but a comedian would always make it his business to introduce some local color into his dialogue. So this fellow ended with, "Now if you will excuse me folks I have been invited to a reefer party in Amelia Street, which happens to be a street of dubious fame just across the road from the theatre!

Some $64 Million in Sales

Our Textiles, Fashions, Going Over Big Overseas

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Canadians style-setters?

Showing New York, London, Los Angeles, Paris, Frankfurt what is up in high fashion?

Believe it.

For that is what it says in WOMEN'S WEAR DAILY, the Bible of the women's fashion industry, so powerful that it still remains in doubt as to whether WWD, as this New York trade newspaper is known in the style world, has won its own "war of the midi."

So far, it seems to be a stand-off between the combined forces of North American women and WWD with more and more of the individual participants in the fashion battle seeking the neutral ground of the pants suit.

The other day, out of Frankfurt, West Germany, WWD carried this dispatch from its European correspondent:

"Twelve Canadian textile mills (10 in Quebec, one each in Ontario and British Columbia) garnered immediate sales of $3,160,000 and potential for $13 million more at their first combined exhibit at the German Trade Fair for Clothing Textiles here.

"The Canadian Department of Industry Trade and Commerce which sponsored the Canadian exhibit set up a Telex communications system from Frankfurt which enabled mills participating to obtain prompt head office contact to help close on - fair - site sales.

"Most of the big names in the textile industry were here including several well-known U.S. mills."

But is not the Canadian textile industry supposed to be in deep trouble, and what is it doing competing successfully against world competition at a Frankfurt trade fair?

Very nicely, thank you, says Industry Trade and Commerce Minister Jean-Luc Pepin.

And not just in Frankfurt.

But in New York, Philadelphia, Dallas, London and a lot of other places.

Not just with textiles, either, but with sportswear, knitwear, furs, costume jewellery, rainwear, coats, dresses, leathers and suedes, gowns, hosiery, suits, slacks, hats, shoes. The whole head to toe works in the world of fashion and fabric, male and female, and children, too.

In the department, senior hands suggest some of the go-go-go, the drive and the business - is - fun way of thinking and working, was left behind by former Trade and Commerce Minister George Hees.

You remember just how go-go George Hees was with those ties and cufflinks and stick - pins with the message "YCDBSOYA" worked into them as "dress of the department day."

Those initials, he made no secret, spelled out the Trade and Commerce slogan: "You can not do business sitting on your ass."

Taking up the departmental success story, Jean-Luc Pepin relates that at these Telex-linked instant - order fabric and style shows — the textile fair at Frankfurt, the Canada "In" Group at New York's McAlpin Hotel, the Menswear Retailers of America in Philadelphia's Civic Centre, the Women's Wear Spring Fashion Parade at Chicago's Merchandise Mart and other such established trade display windows— more and more of Canada's mills and manufacturers are getting in on the act.

And not by a Canada - wide 3,700 miles just plants in Toronto and Montreal, or even Quebec and Ontario.

But from Winnipeg, and Edmonton, Vancouver, and such unlikely places as Virden, Manitoba; Stellarton, Nova Scotia; Kamouraska and Farnham, Quebec; and London and Stratford, Ontario — except, of course, how no longer can they be called unlikely.

Funny thing, too, says Jean-Luc Pepin, about the trade, is that often what Canadian buyers will not buy at home, they will buy when they see it abroad.

Some of those orders worth an immediate $3,160,000 at the Frankfurt fair, with the promise of a possible $13,000,000 more to come later, were placed by Canadian buyers.

"Difficult to credit, is it not," asks Mr. Pepin, "that they have got to go abroad after turning up their noses at our stuff before they discover just how excellent we really can be and actually are."

Okay, trade fairs and fashion shows are great, and it is nice that we are making high marks in the beady world of high fashion.

But it is the buck that is the payoff, and how are we doing in the cash register department?

Again just dandy, glows Jean-Luc Pepin, and trots out not just Industry Trade and Commerce figures but the calculations of the computers at the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

Our fabric and fashion exports to Western Europe last year ran $15,767,000, up from $9,129,000 in just four years.

Totals to the U.S. read $44,597,000, as against $9,817,000 four years ago.

To other regions, Eastern Europe, Africa, South America, the Middle and Far East, only $3,322,000 compared to $3,302,000 in 1965, which means we are not doing much better than holding our own — but look at the competition, the toughest, Japan, Formosa, Hong Kong.

The grand total? $63,595,000, nearly triple the $22,248,000 of just four years ago.

Not bad; eh, smiles Jean-Luc Pepin, for an industry that is assumed by too many to be obsolete, old - fashioned and in deep difficulty?

It is the Old College Try all over again. The YCDBSOYA drive.

He Thinks Students Should Have More Say

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I am a Grade 10 student at Centennial Secondary School. I am writing because I have recently read several editorials in yours and other newspapers concerning education. The one thing wrong with these editorials is that they are all written by adults. I am writing to give a student's viewpoint.

I think that maturer students should have their own prerogative in deciding on their dress, attendance, and to some extent, curriculum. This would help to make school more exciting for students and thereby greatly reduce the drop-out rate. Students should have more freedom because I feel that if students in the senior grades of high school are old enough to drive, get killed in Vietnam, and almost old enough to vote, then they are certainly old enough to decide on their dress, attendance and possibly curriculum. This is especially true of students who are over 16 years of age. Since they are eligible to drop out of school, they are remaining in school at their own choice.

I think that in an ideal educational system, students should be free to work by themselves, at their own speed. This would allow the teachers to circulate among the students and give the pupils the individual attention that they need.

NOTICE TO READERS

The Intelligencer welcomes letters to the editor. Letters should be written or typed on one side of the paper only and bear the address and signature of the sender. For publication purposes a pseudonym or pen-name may be used if so indicated.

Along these lines, I feel that specially gifted students should be allowed to work ahead, at their own speed. This would remove much of the boredom of school, and so would lessen the drop out rate.

Many students, I among them, have expressed deep concern about the very low turnout at the polls during the school board election (less than 10 per cent of the eligible voters voted). It would seem that most adults just do not care about us students.

I realize that very few students have communicated with adults about their feelings on our educational system. This is another case of the 'Silent Majority'; whereby the majority of students keeping quiet would indicate their approval. I do not feel, however, that most students completely go along with the present system. This can be evidenced by the high drop-out rate. I think that the majority of students agree with the present educational system up to a point. That being so, we feel we are mature enough to be trusted with more freedom.

S. Africa Retains Death Penalty

Vancouver Sun

In England, some 150 years ago, people were hanged for a wide variety of offences — even children for stealing a loaf of bread. It was a measure of the fear that had an unjust social order in its grip and there was no lack of wise people who warned that any relaxation of the rigors of this harsh law would lead to the subversion of civilized society by the very dregs of that society.

In South Africa today, the minister of justice, Petrus C. Pelser, can say that the abolition of the death penalty, which some advocate, would lead to "an enormous increase in serious crimes."

This is from a country which, as one of its more enlightened intellectuals said recently, "is responsible for 90 per cent of the judicial executions in the Western world." They hang people there at the rate of 100 a year, mostly blacks. A few years ago the offences for which the death penalty can be imposed were increased by the addition of almost any damage to public or private property, on top of murder, rape, robbery, attempted robbery, housebreaking or kidnapping.

When England took most crimes out of the hanging category, the expected subversion of society failed to occur.

The softening of the penal laws was part of a wave of reformation in manners and of amelioration of social conditions. Social justice is not even now perfectly established in England or in North America. But things are materially better and the death penalty is all but abolished even in the United States, where it is years since an execution occurred.

It may be argued that in the United States at least an increase in crimes can be traced to public leniency. But other causes can be found easily enough for social unrest leading to criminal activity.

In Canada, where there has not been an execution for murder since 1962, this is as true as anywhere. The death penalty for murder has been abolished in all cases except where the victim is a policeman or a prison guard on duty; but recently the federal cabinet commuted the death penalty imposed on the murderer of a St. Boniface policeman.

A Substitute Teacher's Frank Look At The Discipline Problem Today

Letter to The Globe and Mail

I have just read your editorial, Just Ban the Strap. I go into the schools as a substitute teacher, after having had 27 years as a regular teacher in most of the elementary grades of Ontario schools. It is interesting, arduous work and I enjoy it — mostly.

The schools vary to a certain extent. In some the principal is greatly desirous that the children should learn to become polite and orderly people who are learning that such self-control makes for a worthwhile society. In no school where I have subbed have I found a too - strict principal. There is much more freedom in all the schools than there was 10 years ago. Many of the children are learning well.

In some schools the children enter, scuffling, loud - voiced, even the odd ones down on the hall floors wrestling. They go into their classrooms — it takes about 15 minutes for them to reach their seats, and to become quiet enough for the teacher to be heard — so that the day's work may start. This happens every time they enter — four times a day. Their exit is much the same — even when thoroughly supervised. One tries to make sure that no small child is in their roistering path.

I shall spare you further details of the defiant pinching and hitting that the odd child goes on with in the classroom — the rude answering back, the resistance to any reproval. Punishment is out — the principals and teachers (that I have encountered) are afraid of the press and such editorials as yours, as well they may be. They do not of course say so.

My view is that if one is a principal, one is wise enough to sum up a situation and to realize when a child needs some correction, and also to decide what this correction shall be. It is not a matter for parents, trustees, or newsmen. By no means are all these unruly children maladjusted or without care, clothing, or from poor or bad homes. (Some of them are, of course, and the principal realizes this.) I, a great disliker of corporal punishment, were I writing an editorial, would entitle it Don't Ban the Strap.

Bill Increasing Veterans' Pensions Meets with No Argument

OTTAWA (CP) — Veterans Affairs Minister Jean-Eudes Dube told the Commons Monday his bill to increase veterans' pensions and allowances contains the "most important improvements in veterans' legislation since the end of the Second World War," and opposition MPs gave him no argument.

The bill was given second reading and sent to the House veterans affairs committee for detailed study.

Today the Commons is to debate a bill to double the operating capital of the Export Development Corp. to $100 million.

The pension measure would increase veterans' pensions by 10 per cent and allowances by 15 per cent, benefitting 133,212 veterans and 29,100 dependants now getting pensions because of death or disability from war service.

For example, a single man with 100 per cent disability would get $3,504 under the new plan, compared with the current $3,180

Jack Marshall (PC—Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe) was "quite pleased" with the bill, and acknowledged that veterans' organizations have praised the measure.

But he said none of the veterans who have written him about the bill expressed complete satisfaction.

The government had "ignored the plight of the veterans" and produced the changes "too late for too many who have passed on."

Mr. Marshall said the changes should have been made retroactive.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) also approved of the "many progressive steps" in the legislation, including the benefits for Hong Kong veterans.

But he said the maximum exceptional incapacity allowance should have been lifted to $3,500 as recommended by the Commons veterans affairs committee that studied the issue.

Gilbert Rondeau (Creditiste—Shefford) also approved the changes, but said they should have been made long ago.

Among other changes are:

—A pension review board to act as an independent court of appeal for pensioners dissatisfied with rulings of the Canadian pension commission;

—Special benefits for veterans of the four-year imprisonment at the hands of the Japanese in Hong Kong;

—A new "exceptional incapacity allowance ranging from $800 to $2,400 a year for veterans suffering unusually delibitating conditions resulting from war;

—A board of legal services to help veterans get their entitled pensions and allowances;

—A provision extending the benefit of the doubt to any veteran applying for funds. The man will get the money as long as he offers "credible evidence" that he is entitled to it and the government does not contradict the evidence.

Earlier in the House, Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp said the government will bring the issue of the Public Order Act before Parliament soon, but not necessarily in the form of new legislation.

He said the act will not necessarily be kept in force until permanent legislation is passed. The government had not yet decided in what way the question of the act would be introduced in the House.

In debate on the pension bill, Ross Whicher (L—Bruce) said Canada already had better veterans' benefits than any of its former allies or enemies.

J. Chester MacRae (PC—York-Sunbury) suggested that men held prisoner in Europe be given aid similar to that proposed for Hong Kong veterans.

But he was "very pleased" with the bill as it stands.

Liberal backbencher Gordon Blair (Grenville-Carleton) expressed disappointment that the government had rejected the higher $3,500 ceiling on the exceptional incapacity allowance.

Louis Comeau (PC—South Western Nova) said he was outraged that the measure—good though it was—was five years being prepared.

Future of North's Canadian Rangers in Doubt

OTTAWA (CP) — Whether the Canadian Rangers are to continue as part of the armed forces is a decision to be made by Brig.-Gen. Ramsey Withers, commander of the new northern region headquarters based at Yellowknife, N.W.T.

Most of the 1,600 whites, Eskimos, Indians and Metis who made up this purely-volunteer force now are inactive.

In the late 1940s, when the Rangers were formed, these men lived mostly in remote areas of the sub-Arctic and the Arctic and were an invaluable source of help and information.

"They were given such tasks as guiding regular troops, providing a reconnaissance screen, and coast-watching," says the current edition of The Sentinel, published by the Canadian Forces Headquarters.

"They were to help the RCMP and police in apprehending small groups of enemy agents. They were to report on friendly aircraft in distress and help the crews of such aircraft, and they were to report on enemy aircraft.

"Finally, if the situation required, they were visualized as the nucleus for guerrilla bands operating against an enemy invader."

Building the Distant Early Warning line across the Arctic and long-range aircraft stripped the Rangers of many of their duties.

And the Rangers themselves were changing.

The lure of community life, with its schools and stores, took many Eskimos and Indians away from the trapline.

Maj. Bill Stirling, dispatched last summer on a 12,000-mile mission to report on the status of the Rangers, found many of the units "practically non-existent," says The Sentinel.

He was to report on the current usefulness of the Rangers and make recommendations for their future.

But establishment of the northern headquarters put Rangers under Maj. Stirling and Brig. Withers.

"He is determined that the force should reinforce the pattern of development in the North," says The Sentinel.

"He wants to talk to a great many more people in the Arctic and sub-Arctic before he comes to any conclusions about this proud force."

Programs May Be Curtailed

TORONTO (CP) — If indications of an oversupply of university graduates are borne out by continuing studies, some programs might have to be eliminated or enrolment curtailed, the Committee on University Affairs of Ontario says in its annual report released Monday.

The committee, an advisory body to the provincial government, notes that the market for graduates has "softened considerably" in most fields following a period of rapid expansion in the 1960s when demand was high.

Liberals Suggest Education Changes

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Liberal party suggests 67 changes in the province's education system which it says is "full of confusion, undisclosed information, fragmented responsibility and duplication."

In a paper released Monday, prepared for a Liberal policy conference here Jan. 21-24, the party says "a tough, somewhat ruthless insistence in finding out what is happening to our money and to the recipients of education" is needed.

"Once this is done," the paper says, priorities can be straightened out and savings from greater efficiency and from low priorities transferred to the top-priority concerns."

The paper is one of 12 prepared by special study committees to set out the powers and policies of the 12 government departments Liberal Leader Robert Nixon says should replace the present 23 departments.

They are being released for comment in advance of the policy conference.

Additional background papers for the conference will be released throughout the week, a Liberal party spokesman said.

The paper on judicial reform recommends the appointment of more judges, shorter judicial holidays, abolition of police commissions and less rigid height requirements for some policemen.

Another paper calls for the establishment of a new department of industry, trade and development that would take an equity position in companies locating in slow-growth areas instead of granting forgiveable loans as now is done.

OMA Is Preparing Snowmobile Report

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Medical Association is preparing a report on snowmobile injuries that is expected to make some far-reaching recommendations on safety, design and government regulation of the winter vehicles.

Dr. Robert Baxter, OMA assistant secretary, said in an interview Monday night that a team of 10 doctors has been correlating data on snowmobile injuries last winter from 30 hospitals across the province.

"We're trying to discover if there is any pattern to the type of injuries suffered in snowmobile accidents," he said. "We hope to make a number of recommendations that will deal with such things as design safety, protective clothing, helmets and government regulations."

Dr. Baxter said some proposals such as banning snowmobiles from all roads go too far.

The OMA, he said, believes that snowmobiles should have access to roads only in isolated areas; municipalities in more settled areas should enact bylaws to keep the vehicles off the streets.

Snowmobile drivers should have adequate instruction in operating the machines, should be sober, and not allowed to drive them at night, said the OMA spokesman.

Dr. Baxter said when the OMA report is ready "we'll make a number of important recommendations.

Stanfield Plans Speaking Tour

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said Monday his forthcoming cross-Canada tour is inteded to emphasize "the terrible degree of unemployment in the country and the lack of government determination to do anything about it."

He said he will provide an itinerary Wednesday just before he begins the trip.

Chief Justice Worried By Insane Murderers

TORONTO (CP) — The increase in violent crimes committed by persons who are insane at the time indicates a "serious malaise" in Canada, Ontario Chief Justice Dalton Wells said Monday.

Chief Justice Wells opened the Ontario Supreme Court trial division's winter assizes with a veiled criticism of the system for causing a shortage of judges

Another speaker at the opening, Arthur Martin, treasurer of the Law Society of Upper Canada, used the occasion for critical comments on congestion and lack of facilities at the old city hall for prisoner consultations with lawyers.

Provincial Secretary Robert Welch told the opening Ontario's legal system is under review but will be re-organized only after consultation with the public.

Chief Justice Wells noted that in 1969 Ontario courts dealt with 49 murders, 10 of them in Toronto. Last year there were 53, of which 17 were in Toronto.

"The actual increase is quite modest," he said, "but in Toronto itself the number has jumped from 10 to 17—about 75 per cent—and of the total 53 charged, 16 were found not guilty by reason of insanity at the time the offence was committed.

"In my opinion this indicates a very serious malaise in our country which should require everyone's careful consideration. The same thing is true of rape, which is another crime of violence."

". . It will require the most careful thought on the part of all of us to obtain a reversal of these trends, and it is a matter that should engage the best consideration of all thinking citizens."

Dress Designer Coco Chanel Dies in Paris

PARIS (AP) — Fashion leaders on both sides of the Atlantic paid tribute to Gabrielle Coco Chanel, the most influential dress designer of the 20th century, who died Sunday night at her suite in the Ritz. She was 87.

Chanel "changed fashion more than any other designer," said Norman Norell, the dean of American designers.

"She's the one who made women comfortable . . . There may be other designers who made more beautiful clothes, but she had the most influence."

"One of the great designers of the century, who never sacrificed herself to the tendency of making fashion ridiculous," said Marc Bohan of Dior.

A chambermaid at her hotel found Chanel ill Sunday night and she died shortly after. Officials of her fashion house said death apparently was due to a heart attack.

The House of Chanel announced that showing of her new spring and summer collection will begin on schedule Jan. 26. She had been working on it Saturday and had approved 85 models.

Popular Pants Costume Now Accepted Apparel

NEW YORK (CP) — The pants costume has become a classic, such as the trench coat, the shirtwaist dress, the Chanel suit. Pantsuits or pants worn with a tunic now are accepted wardrobe items, not just for teen-agers but for women, even those in the upper age bracket.

So naturally fashion has to find a news-making substitute. Last fall it was the wide South American cowboy pants, the gaucho look. This spring, it's knickers. "They're big news, combined with body sweaters, cardigans or tailored jackets," says Eleanor Lambert, co-ordinator of the recent spring showings in New York.

Not all the designers, however, showed knickers. But the trend-setters did, such as Jacques Tiffeau with his black knickers tucked into high boots and worn with a black-dotted-on-white tunic or his tight navy knickers with a pink jersey tunic topped by a pale pink shell.

Several of the designers whose clothes are aimed more towards the 20s and young 30s also showed knickers. Suzy Perette used both soft jersey and black crepe for her styles. Then there was Anne Fogarty with a black-and-white cotton print in matching knickers and jacket. Cuddlecoat hid cotton poplin knickers under a side-buttoned skirt (worn partially unbuttoned, of course) and a crop jacket.

Two extremes in the knicker look were designer Kasper's citified glen plaid wool jumpsuit with knickers effect, worn with a long shaped blazer and printed crepe shirt and oMntreal-born Arnold Scaasi's white pique knickers and tunic worn under a navy glace chintz greatcape.

He also designed a huge plaid cape and orange knickers with black top for Barbra Streisand for her Las Vegas December opening. Amusing were the black knickers with a red bull's eye, the motif repeated on the white top and a white shawl.

Also interesting were the laced football-type knickers shown in several collections. Traina Boutique included a chamois style with printed wool challis shirt, to retail at $200.

One unexpected aspect of the knickers look is that shoes have suddenly appeared. We had been lured into the belief that only high boots could accompany any short pants costume. One red knicker outfit with a patterned top sported red shoes.

Knickers are the shortened term for knickerbockers and were first introduced by the men. Actually they had worn loose breeches gathered in at the knees some years before the name knickerbocker was used.

But knickerbocker doesn't seem to have been applied to the current fashion until about the middle of the 19th century when it referred to the knee breeches worn by boys and sportsmen.

Women were first introduced to knickers about 1894 when they decided to play some of the more strenuous sports, such as the new bicycling. Obviously the long skirts were impractical, so they adopted almost a uniform of wide knickerbockers, well-tailored coat, button-up leggings, a mannish shirt and a soft felt hat. But soon knickers weren't considered stylish enough for bicycle riding. Women then took to a divided skirt.

Men had taken to knickers in the 1870s, mostly in Harris tweed and worn with a Norfolk jacket. Incidentally, several of the New York designers showed Norfolk jackets with their spring knickers for women. Then, in 1928, men blossomed from knickers into plus fours for golfing, a trend started by the Duke of Windsor, then Prince of Wales. But that fad faded and knickers dropped out of the men's sportswear wardrobe. Now it's the women who are reviving the fashion.

Week of Prayer Services Ended

Rev. L. Dean spoke at the final service in the Week of Prayer series on the theme of Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. In the Old Testament, God's role as Father is emphasized. In the New Testament, the revelation of the Son, Jesus Christ, begins at Bethlehem.

Matthew, writing especially for the Jews, traces the geneology of Jesus from Abraham. Luke, writing for the Gentiles, traces the geneology back to Adam and to God. John begins with God, showing that in the beginning the word was with God and the word was God. The word became flesh and was seen by John and many others.

"The Holy Spirit is God who has come to be, — not only with us, — but in us." Jesus said, "He that hath seen Me, hath seen the Father." The spirit has come to glorify Christ. He is not restricted to one place at a time as was Jesus when He was upon the earth.

Father, son, and Holy Spirit are three persons, yet one God.

Following the service, Canon and Mrs. Wright hosted the clergy and their wives for a time of fellowship and lunch.

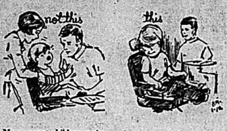
Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Many young children make a big fuss when it's time to have their teeth checked. A visit to the dentist's office sends them into a screaming panic.

Let your child meet the dentist at an early age before there is a chance for pain or discomfort. This will help start the association off on the right track.

Children are not as likely to fear a dentist who is a familiar friend.

Crude Exploitation At Dinner Party

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I attended a lovely dinner party last night and witnessed the crude exploitation of a lovely man who chose medicine as a career. Within 30 minutes, three women converged on him. One wanted to know if she should stay on The Pill — or is the I.U.D. better — or should her husband have a vasectomy? Another woman said she had been hoarse for two weeks and would he look at her throat. The third woman — Ann, you won't believe this — dragged him into the utility room and confided that she had just noticed a lump in her breast and would he mind taking a quick look and put her mind at ease. This particular evening was worse than most but every time we go out it's the same story. Why do people do this? Is there a solution? — THE DOCTOR'S WIFE.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR WIFE: People do this because they can't resist the temptation to get something for nothing. (It's usually a dame.) One doctor solved the problem this way: Whenever a clod approached him at a social affair for professional advice he stopped her cold by saying — "Undress so I can examine you."

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have a new mother-in-law problem for you. Mummy is 70 years old and we just found out that she is an alcoholic. She has been falling a lot and has broken a leg, an arm and a shoulder. It never occurred to us that Mummy was drinking. In fact, she never touched a drop so far as we knew.

Twice last week she was saved by the rescue squad. (The landlady has a key and looks in on her from time to time.) Yesterday my husband found Mummy passed out on the couch with a lighted cigarette in her hand. He told me this morning that we must take her into our home.

Ann, I don't know what to do. My mother-in-law and I never got along. For years she called me by another girl's name — (the girl she wanted him to marry.) In addition to the personality conflict, I am afraid to have an alcoholic in the house — especially a chain smoker. I'll have to be a fire marshal, a nurse and a caretaker. How far should I go? — PANICKED.

DEAR PAN: Go as far as you must, but win this one. Your mother-in-law needs custodial care or a constant companion. If your husband has brothers and sisters, they should share the cost if Mummy can't manage it on her own. Whatever the sacrifice, be prepared to make it. It will be worth it.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I suspect you don't know the difference between a lesbian, a transsexual, a transvestite and a bisexual. As a lesbian who resents being lumped with the others may I educate you?

I am a homosexual woman. I do not want to be a man. I have the body of a female. Since no one has been able to prove that the mind has gender I will say I have the mind of a human. My emotions are those of a homosexual woman. This is my only deviation. I am not sick. In fact, I am healthier than most straight women who insist on hanging the "sick" label on me.

I do not want a man or a straight woman or a bisexual woman. And most of all, I do not want to be bothered by curious straight people who view me as a freak of a conversation piece. I enjoy a pleasant life with a single lesbian like myself. We do not bother anyone and we would appreciate it if people wouldn't bother us.

The grief-stricken mother whose daughter wanted a sex change operation called the girl a lesbian. She is not a lesbian, she is a transsexual. Please print this letter or at least remember it. — SUE OF L.A.

DEAR SUE: I will do both. Thank you for writing.

Family Planning Is the Right of All Concerned

By DORIS CLARK

There was a woman in Newfoundland who had borne 13 children. Of these, eight were so physically deformed that they will be housed in an institution for the rest of their lives. Four of the remaining five are mentally retarded and also in institutions. The cost of maintaining these 12 children until they die is close to 1½ million dollars.

It is impossible to measure the anguish and agony that the parents of these children carry with them daily. This couple had never been told about birth control — information which is a basic human right and should be available to all.

Canada lags behind in making sure her people can easily get this information.

Our best, earliest hope lies in the local voluntary groups which have been working away at it for several years — the Planned Parenthood Associations. New branches are springing up all the time.

If you need one where you are, or want to pass the news on to a distant friend, help in organizing may be had from the National Organization, the Family Planning Federation of Canada, Room 205, 96 Eglinton Avenue East, Toronto 315, Ontario.

Dear Doris: Whenever someone phones me up I never have anything to say. If it's a girl it's O.K. because she'll just keep right on talking but when a boy phones me and I don't talk he asks why I'm so quiet, or if there is something the matter.

I have trouble explaining anything, too. I can never find the right words.

I haven't talked with my parents about these things because I know this wouldn't help as neither of them has time and they wouldn't understand anything. I'm 15. — Practically Mute.

Dear Mute: No gift of the gab? Quiet people like you can be restful.

But you do have to say enough that the other fellow knows you are still there, and listening. Are you sure that you aren't just in a state of suspended animation?

Both Mom and Dad are to blame for your lack of talking practice. I know families where meals are discussion-times about current affairs as well as what's going on right around home. Good conversationalists are made, not born.

Show Mom and Dad this column.

Dear Doris: Could you please tell me what "deteriorating muscles" are? What are the symptoms of it? What age could a person get this — A Faithful Reader.

Dear Faithful Reader: Deteriorating means growing worse. Wouldn't you say that such muscles were losing strength?

This is not necessarily a disease. The body goes through constant routines of deteriorating, building up, wearing down and wearing out.

Certain diseases do affect the health of muscle structures — but if you suspect disease the doctor is your consultant.

GAMMA MU CHAPTER

Mrs. T. Rowland presented a program, the theme of which was "Nature" at the first meeting in 1971 of the Gamma Mu chapter held on January 5 at the home of Mrs. John Sherry. Mrs. Rowland showed a film on trees and how they grow which included some beautiful photography of colorful flowering trees such as the magnolia and the crab apple and viewers were left wondering what life would be like without trees. Mrs. Rowland was thanked by the co-hostess Mrs. A. Gray.

During the business period, thank you letters were read from the Quinte Arts Council regarding Gamma Mu's decision to become a member, from the Christmas Sharing Program for the $15 donation, from the BCI student who received the $25 award, a letter of congratulations from International regarding the fine job done by the recording secretary and an announcement encouraging early registration for the Brantford convention to be held in June.

The majority of members voted in favor of attending a mass meeting to discuss the formation of the City Council.

After the business meeting a social hour followed and refreshments were served by Mrs. J. Sherry and Mrs. A. Gray.

Kindergarten Gingerbread Made in Electic Fry Pan

By MARY MOORE

Five - year - old Sharon Janzen made this Kindergarten Gingerbread in her mother's electric frying pan.

So I decided if she could I could. However since Marianne and family were with me for New Year's week I asked Davey to preside.

This can be baked in the oven or in an electric frying pan. When I am "baking" in an electric frying pan I am apprehensive always for fear the batter will burn because it is so close to the element but it never has.

So here is a gingerbread that may be made by a 5-year-old and baked, if desired, in an electric frying pan, covered.

KINDERGARTEN GINGERBREAD
(courtesy 5-year-old Sharon Janzen)

3 eggs
1 cup sugar
1 cup molasses
1 cup melted shortening
1 tsp. cloves
1 tsp. nutmeg
1 tsp. cinnamon
2 tsps. baking soda
2 tbsps. hot water
2 cups stirred but not sifted, all-purpose OR cake and pastry flour
1 cup boiling water
icing sugar
whipping cream (optional)

Into beater bowl break eggs and add sugar, molasses, shortening and spices and beat until foamy and blended. Dissolve soda in the two tbsps. hot water and add. Add flour, alternately with boiling water, in thirds, beating on "low" as you add, until batter is smooth. This batter is very thin.

Preheat oven to 350 deg. Fahr. OR preheat greased electric frying pan to 280 deg. Fahr. If baking in oven grease a 13 x 9 ½x 2" pan. Pour batter into either prepared pan. If in oven bake about 45 minutes. If in electric frying pan, COVER and "bake" about 25 to 30 minutes or until when touched at centre on top it feels firm. Serve warm, sprinkled with icing sugar, cut into squares and top if desired with unsweetened whipped cream. Try spiced apple yogurt with it sometime.

Rock Musical Debut Subdued

WINNIPEG (CP) — The rock musical Salvation was supposed to be outspoken and loud; at its opening Monday at the Manitoba Theatre Centre it was neither.

Patrons who sat down wondering if newspaper columnists' fears of vulgarity and nudity were founded in fact left the two-hour continuous performance relieved, if not somewhat disappointed.

As son of Hair, Salvation uses symbolism and inference instead of continually assaulting audience senses and sensibilities.

Written by C. C. Courtney and Peter Link, Salvation was improvised around its musical core by director Keith Turnbull and his cast of 12, including the four members of the Winnipeg rock groups the Merry - Go - Round.

The show is set as a parody of a revival meeting. Current themes of sex, drugs and alienation lace the show.

MUSIC IS KEY

Musical direction by Victor Davies of songs with titles such as If You Let Me Make Love To You Then Why Can't I Touch You, There Ain't No Flies on Jesus and Tomorrow is the First Day of the Rest of my Life, was the show's most outstanding quality.

Mr. Turnbull said in a recent interview the re-writing of the play was intended by the authors. The musical score is the framework, he said, and to make it "all make sense . . . the rest must come from the people in it."

The people in it included Alan Weeks as Monday, Yolande Bavan, P. M. Howard, Andrea Martin, Brian McKay, Dorothy Poste, Michele Shay and Dennis A. L. Simpson.

The set, designed by Tiina Lipp, consisted of raised platforms and shapeless cushion-seats. Projections on three suspended screens helped set mood.

Salvation played for 10 months in New York. Monday's opening was its Canadian premier and it also opens Thursday in Amsterdam.

ANAF News

At the last executive meeting it was learned with pleasure that Provincial President Lou Murphy will be attending the general meeting on Thursday, Jan. 14. He will assist Dominion President Jack Lundberg with the election and installation of the Duke of Edinburgh Unit 201, 1971 Executive. However, the main reason is to award twenty-five-year pins to approximately fifty members among whom is Cde. Lundberg. It is believed that this is the largest group, so far, to receive this honor at one time in one Unit in Ontario.

A large number of members are expected to be in attendance for this memorable meeting. Although only four positions are left to be filled, it is expected that there will be some hotly contested and very close results. After the business of the evening is over and the meeting adjourned, there will be a social hour in the downstairs lounge when you can meet your friends and the new executive over a bowl of Mexico's national and favorite dish which should be very acceptable during this frigid spell.

Despite the Christmas holidays just being over, there was a very good crowd attending the regular Friday social evening in the Tartan Lounge, the first of many during 1971. A good place to visit and entertain your friends. A series of live entertainment has been arranged and there is no admission charge.

Saturday also saw a large crowd at the club. In the evening Mr. and Mrs. Darts started their second half with approximately twenty couples playing. It was the last event for Greg Ackerman as sports chairman as he has thrown his hat in the ring against Cde. Hank Ford for 2nd vice-president. Cdes. Greg and Hank Boyle were celebrating their birthdays and Cde. June Brooks presented them with a candle decorated cake. It was delicious and Cde. Greg Ackerman cut it up so that all contestants were able to have a small piece while the old Happy Birthday to you was heartily sung. It was a most enjoyable evening and the dart results were as follows: Winners, Gwen Browning and Ray Reid. Runners up, Alice and Bill Storms. Ladies high three darts, Roby Fitzgibbon. Men's high three darts, Ray Reid.

The president and members extend their sincere sympathy to Cde. Bill Salter on the passing of his mother last weekend. The sick report is short with just two comrades in hospital, R. Woods, room 711 and J. Lucciola, room 715.

Start the New Year right by paying your dues for 1971. If the membership chairman is not available, his committee members, which include the stewards, will be pleased to accept them on his behalf. Plan to attend the general meeting and help elect the new executive: 8 p.m. Thurs., Jan. 14th.

Film Makers Relieved as Critic Sheaths Knife

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — There's good news for film makers today: Burt Prelutsky is retiring as a movie critic.

Why should a movie reviewer's retirement cause joy in the hearts of film people?

Because Prelutsky, during his 10 years on Los Angeles Magazine, had earned a reputation as the fastest barb in the West.

Among his latest reviews:

"Tora! Tora! Tora! is a bore-a, bore-a, bore-a."

"Where's Poppa makes Beyond the Valley of the Dolls seem like Fine Art."

"Flap stars Anthony Quinn as an American Indian. It's Zorba the Creek."

"The Song of Norway is a series of picture post cards in search of a movie."

The Hollywood crowd learned to cringe in expectation of Prelutsky's dismissal of multi-million-dollar creative efforts. Some argued that the critic was more interested in a quip than in a considered appraisal. But Prelutsky followers relished his capsule critiques—and his occasional essays on films he found worthy.

In his January column Prelutsky, 31, announced his New Year's resolution: to quit reviewing movies.

He wrote:

"I will once again be able to view movies the way they're meant to be seen. Selectively. I will go only to those about which I have positive expectations. I will feel free to walk out of a movie if it bores me."

Prelutsky said he had come to his decision as he pondered the lead of his December column.

"All of a sudden I realized that for the last 12 years of my life I had seen an average of three rotten movies a week.

"During each year I would see five to 10 good movies out of 150. I wouldn't mind paying to see that many movies—which I will be able to choose for myself. That's a lot better than suffering through 140 other pictures for free.

"Besides, they haven't taken me off the free list yet. I got an invitation for a Disney preview on Friday."

Prelutsky, a small, slender man whose quiet manner contrasts his acidic pen, will continue writing on other matters; he produces a weekly column for Los Angeles Times' West magazine.

He found the 1970 product not without rewards. Among the few movies he favored: Joe, Lovers and Other Strangers, Glass Houses, The Lawyer, The Forbin Project, The Out-of-Towners and What Do You Say to a Naked Lady?

More Reading

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto Public Library Board wants $90,000 more than the $458,500 it spent on books in 1970, because more people are reading library books. The annual one-day count of books in use found this year that one-third of the libraries' books were out.

Trenton Plaza Turned Down

TRENTON (Staff)—Council refused here last night to give its approval to plans for a new 10 - store shopping plaza to be built on Sidney Street in northeast Trenton.

The proposal by Sidney Homes Corporation was for a neighborhood shopping centre to serve 3,000 people in new subdivisions in the area. The developers planned to build a two - storey structure with apartment units above the stores.

The Trenton and Suburban Planning Board recommended that council approve phase one of the scheme but refuse to allow apartments above the shops. Council said no last night to the whole package.

"It is not in the best interests of the community to have another downtown springing up," Councillor Ted Parker said.

Councillor Pete Aziz concurred, saying that the plaza "would detract from the downtown area".

"Part of my thinking is that large portions of Dundas East . . . are already zoned commercial," Councillor Parker said, explaining that these are still being used for residential purposes. "Substantial commercial space is available now," he concluded.

Clerk - comptroller O. W. Larry said that one of the principals of Sidney Homes could appear before council's committee of the whole session next week to explain his case.

Councillor Parker said that he would not be able to attend but felt the gentleman should be asked "what would happen to the six to 10 independent providers already located in the area" if the new plaza were built.

Subsidy Seems Remote

Although the decision is not definite, the Ontario Department of Highways has cast a shadow over what Reeve Jack Bush of Sidney Township hoped would be a subsidizing of proposed drainage installation to correct the high water table in Ghent Drive subdivision.

A report tabled by Don Bourne of the firm of Totten, Sims, Hubicki Associates Ltd. on Dec. 1 proposed a complex drainage system which would cost in the neighborhood of at least $38,000 and as much as $48,000 if a storage tank and force pump were installed.

The Reeve explained at the time that the municipal branch of the department of highways would "investigate the feasibility of subsidizing the construction costs."

The department has investigated and M. J. Bernhardt, district construction engineer, stated in a letter to council yesterday that "our construction of Highway 2 will result only in directing the drainage to an existing drainage easement and since this water will reach a common point (west of Ghent Drive) with the present drainage system, it is my contention that the department should in no way be involved in rectifying the present inadequate drainage system in existence for this subdivision."

R. J. Sim, district municipal engineer based in Kingston, agreed that the problem did not rest with DHO.

"It appears to me that either the subdivider or the people in the subdivision should co-operate with the township in deepening the offtake ditch in the existing drainage to point X (west of Ghent Drive) and then arrange to lead the water into the bay from this point."

"The problem is not of our creation and, if anything, our reconstruction will alleviate the problems encountered by some of the residents of the subdivision," wrote Mr. Bernhardt.

Reeve Bush stated yesterday that the township was "still investigating the Department of Highways road widening program and (will investigate) the spring runoff."

Girl Escapes Serious Injury

A Belleville teen-age girl escaped serious injury last night when she was struck by a car while waiting for a bus.

Treated and released at Belleville General Hospital with a bruised right hip was Carol Jean Moon, 18, who was struck by a vehicle driven by Robert Harrigan, 20, of Herchimer Ave.

According to Chief Douglas Crosbie, Miss Moon was standing on the corner of Pine St. and Humewood Drive when a car, travelling east on Pine Street failed to negotiate the turn onto Humewood and hopped the snowbanks to strike the girl.

Mr. Harrigan has been charged with careless driving, and driving with an alcohol content in his blood registering more than the legal limit of .08 per cent.

Cars Collide On OPP Doorstep

PICTON (Staff) — A two-car collision on Highway 33 last night a short distance from the headquarters building for the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police caused an estimated $1,200 damage.

Drivers of the vehicles Arnie Pols, 35, RR1, Hillier, and William Christie, 39, Bloomfield, escaped injury.

Damage to the Pols vehicle was estimated at $200 while damage to the Christie car was set at $1,000.

Council Starts 182nd Session

Sidney Township Council yesterday began its 182nd year of local government.

Clerk J. Byron Harder noted that the first council met in May of 1790.

Reeve Jack Miller Bush commented during inaugural proceedings that "if many people would bring their problems to council instead of standing on street corners, we could at least try to solve their problems; we try to be as fair as possible."

Councillor Glen Meyers said that "trust in council has been a major attraction to people locating in the township . . . although there is just a bit too much government supervision in township planning."

Returning to council were the Reeve, Deputy Reeve Gordon Wilman, councillors Meyers and Reg McCurdy.

Councillor Hadley Richardson joined council for the first time, replacing ex-councillor Art Carleton who unsuccessfully sought the position of Deputy Reeve in the December elections.

The Reeve stated that 1970 was an unprecedented year of building expansion in the township.

A total of 260 permits were issued for a total building value of $7,309,432, to bring to the township a total of $2,060 in permit fees.

The building value topped last year's figure by close to $2 million.

Largest in the 1971 building predictions is the Zellers' shopping centre on Wallbridge Loyalist Road.

Sounding Station

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Meterological Service has announced that the installation of an atmospheric sounding station at Vernon, B.C., will be completed in 1971. Primary purpose of the station is to make measurements of temperature, pressure and humidity from ground level to a height of approximately 20 miles.

Seditious

Mr. Justice Roger Ouimet said knowledge of certain facts obtained from newspapers does not render a juror ineligible automatically.

He quoted a 1907 decision to the effect that if jurors were selected on the basis of not having read newspapers, only ignoramuses would be chosen for jury duty

The five who appeared Monday are among 13 charged with seditious conspiracy. The list includes such prominent figures as labor leader Michel Chartrand writer Pierre Vallieres, teacher Charles Gagnon and lawyer Robert Lemieux, who appear for trial Feb. 1.

The major trial of the month is scheduled to start Jan. 25 when former teacher Paul Rose, 27, appears on charges of kidnapping and non-capital murder in the October abduction and strangling of Quebec labor minister Pierre Laporte.

Three others facing similar charges—Jacques Rose, 23, Francis Simard, 23 and Bernard Lortie, 19—are to stand trial Feb 8.

Sinden Adds Howe To Eastern All-Stars

MONTREAL (CP) — Gordie Howe, Detroit Red Wings' right winger, has been added to the roster of the National Hockey League's East Division all-star team.

Howe was among eight players added to the East Division squad Monday by coach Harry Sinden. The first 12 players were named in a poll among the NHL Writers' Association members last week.

Howe will be making his 22nd appearance when he joins the East Division squad for the league's 24th annual all-star game at Boston, Jan. 19.

Coach Scotty Bowman of the West Division squad also has completed his roster.

Following are the other seven players added by Sinden, who will be returning to a coaching position for the first time since he led Boston Bruins to a Stanley Cup victory over St. Louis Blues last spring:

GORDIE HOWE

Bowman, now general manager of the Blues, added nine players, including a replacement for injured right winger Ken Schinkel of Pittsburgh Penguins. Schinkel was originally selected by the West Division poll, but will be replaced by Gary Sabourin of St. Louis.

Also selected by Bowman were:

Defence—Ted Harris, Minnesota North Stars; Carol Vadnais, California Golden Seals. Centre—Red Berenson, St. Louis Blues; Bob Clarke, Philadelphia Flyers. Right wing—Bill Flett, Los Angeles Kings; Chico Maki, Chicago Black Hawks. Left Winger—Danny Grant, Minnesota North Stars; Greg Polis, Pittsburgh Penguins.

The addition of the Mahovlich brothers to the East Division team means there will be three sets of brothers taking part in the game.

Bobby and Dennis Hull will be at left wing for the West, while centre Phil Esposito of Boston will face his brother, goaltender Tony of Chicago.

The final makeup shows Chicago with the most players of any club—nine. St. Louis has five, Minnesota two, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Los Angeles and California, each have one.

In the East, Boston Bruins and New York Rangers each have six players scheduled to play. Montreal has three, Detroit two and Toronto, Vancouver and Buffalo one each.

Each player on the winning team receives $500, while the losers get $250 each.

Leafs Hottest Property

MONTREAL (CP) — Last Dec. 8, Toronto's Maple Leafs were tied for last place with Buffalo Sabres in the National Hockey League's East Division.

But since that time the Leafs have become the hottest property in either their own or the league's West Division.

An analysis of the Leafs current streak, in which they have taken 27 of a possible 30 points in their last 15 games, discloses some amazing performances.

After their game of Dec. 8, which they lost 4-0 to Pittsburgh Penguins, the Leafs and the Sabres each had 15 points. At that point Toronto had seven wins and one tie and had scored 75 goals with 94 against.

In their current 15-game streak, they have won 13, tied one and lost one game.

Minnesota North Stars, incidentally, was the only team to stop Toronto during that period. The Stars whacked the Leafs 6-3 at Minnesota and then tied them 4-4 at Toronto.

The big story lies in the Toronto goal production of 69 and the club's defensive record of only 23 goals against, 10 of these by the North Stars, which means in the other 13 games, the Leafs were beaten for only 13 goals.

Before the streak started, the Toronto goaltending record was the poorest in the league with an average of 3.62. Today it is 2.85 and during the 15-game streak it was 1.53.

In that period, Jacques Plante and Bruce Gamble each recorded two shutouts and shared another.

Offensively, the sparkplug has been centre Norm Ullman, whose 29 points during the stretch equalled the point output by leading scorer Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins in his last 15 games.

Ullman scored 13 goals and added 16 assists to boost his season's point total to 52 from 23 he had in Toronto's first 26 games.

The Toronto line of Ullman, Ron Ellis and Paul Henderson has been the second-highest scoring unit in the league in the last 15 games with 64 points.

This compares with the Boston trio of Esposito, Ken Hodge and Wayne Cashman, which had 68 points in the Bruins last 15 games. However, the Toronto trio produced 30 goals, one more than the Boston line.

Toronto currently is in fourth place with 42 points, four fewer than Montreal Canadiens, 21 fewer than first-place Boston and 20 short of New York Rangers.

COLTS' JOHNNY UNITAS

Morton Cast as 'Other Guy'

MIAMI (AP) — Craig Morton of Dallas Cowboys has been cast in the role of "the other quarterback" in the Super Bowl football championship Sunday against Baltimore Colts.

Morton, who has made his share of sacrifices to the Dallas cause, will be up against Johnny Unitas, the Baltimore quarterback with the golden arm and a string of passing records to his credit.

But Morton is neither awed by the spectre of Unitas nor perplexed by his own predicament after a long season marked by trial and tribulation.

"I've always respected and admired Johnny Unitas," he said Monday as the Cowboys began their final-week preparations for the Super Bowl, symbol of pro football supremacy in the National Football League.

"In my book, he's the greatest quarterback who ever lived. But you've got to be yourself."

Morton, beset by injuries, including a painful bruise on his right elbow, completed only 11 of 40 passes in the Cowboys' playoff victories over Detroit Lions and San Francisco '49ers that completed their stretch drive and nailed the National Football Conference title.

And the Dallas signal-caller has not called signals, except for changes, or audibles, at the line of scrimmages, since last November. Coach Tom Landry has sent in all the plays, since a humiliating 38-0 loss to St. Louis—and the Cowboys have reeled off seven consecutive victories.

"In no way has it affected me," Morton said, "and I wouldn't want to change it now, not the way we're going.

"When I come off the field, we talk together on the sideline about what we want to run on the next series. I'm so indoctrinated with his system that we more or less think together anyway. I try to approach the game the same way as he does."

"Craig is an excellent signal-caller," said Landry. "He can call them with anyone in the league.

"But a change had to be made. We were playing poorly and we had to do something to shake things up. It was either change the quarterback or call the plays.

"By calling the plays I felt I could take some of the pressure off him. He still has the option to audible anytime he chooses."

For the past week, however, Morton has been inaudible. A throat infection confined him to bed a week ago in Dallas and he is under doctor's orders to do a minimum of talking.

"This is the first day I've talked all week," he said.

Morton's erratic performances in early-season games brought the wrath of Dallas fans upon his head.

"It's been said often that adversity brings success," he said. "Sure, I've been booed in Dallas—and just about everywhere else. But the fans pay their way and they can do what they want to do, it doesn't really bother me any more."

Part-time Chaperone Expects Betsy Back

TORONTO (CP) — A Brantford housewife who has been chaperone to Canadian women skiers said Monday she believes Betsy Clifford will rejoin the Canadian national ski team once she straightens out her problems.

"Betsy's a character, but that makes a champion," said Pat Ramage, unofficial den mother of Canadian teams since 1954. She was commenting on why Miss Clifford, 17, returned to her Ottawa-area home from the tough European circuit.

Mrs. Ramage has been with the Canadian team every second year on a regular basis. She is returning this month to St. Gervais, France, where she will serve as a technical delegate for the Federation Internationale de Ski at the World Cup races.

It was reported that absence of a woman chaperone was one of the reasons behind the hasty departure from Europe of Miss Clifford, who won the world slalom championship in Italy last year.

"The kids need someone to lean on," said Mrs. Ramage. "I'm not saying it should be me or anybody in particular, but someone they know."

BETSY CLIFFORD

"There's been a lot of pressure on Betsy, and people forget it was different with Nancy Greene, who won a gold medal for Canada" she said. "Nancy was 24-25-26 in her best years and could stand the pressure.

"Betsy is Canada's first skier to come through with a world championship in just three years."

In Ottawa John Clifford, Betsy's father, said Monday his daughter is still considering whether to retire or remain in international competition.

Mr. Clifford said his daughter is discussing the "whole matter" with the Canadian Ski Association. He said she has always felt there should be more money available to competitors for training and more personnel to assist Canadian skiers in international competition.

Mr. Clifford said his daughter was upset when she returned to Canada and learned that the Canadian coach Peter Franzen had announced from Switzerland that she was going home because of "physical depressions and family problems."

Paduano On Defence

TORONTO (CP) — Welterweight Clyde Gray of Toronto signed Monday for a title bout Feb. 18 with Canadian champion Donato Paduano in Montreal Forum.

Paduano, ranked No. 3 in the world, and Gray have identical records, each losing once and winning 27 times. Paduano, of Montreal, lost his last fight, an exhibition against Ken Buchanan of Scotland, world lightweight champion. Gray lost to Eddie Perkins in Chicago.

Armstrong Stable Opposes Bet Houses

MONTREAL (CP) — The head of an Ontario breeding operation said Monday that the horse racing industry could be ruined by off-track betting.

Glen Brown, attending the annual convention of the National Association of Canadian Race Tracks was speaking at a symposium on off-track betting.

Mr. Brown, head of Armstrong Brothers Breeding in Brampton, said he was unaware of the problem until "five weeks ago."

"And then I heard a presentation by fellows who are running Ontario's present off-track messenger service and now I'm running around the country making speeches.

"I was shocked by what I heard. Our whole industry could be ruined.

"We keep hearing that they (Ottawa) are going to come up with something but the letters breeders have sent to Ottawa asking for information and consultations have gone unanswered," Mr. Brown said.

Ontario continues with a messenger service plan by which you can place bets in 110 province-wide shops on the understanding that the shops send the money to the track to be wagered.

The Criminal Code says this cannot be legally done "for a consideration", but the courts have ruled it to be legal if no considerations are involved.

The only revenues the shops seem to be able to clear are from the sale of racing programs.

Jim Carson of the Horsemen's Benevolent Protective Association told the symposium that his body would take drastic action on a national scale if the off-track bets were legalized.

Murphy Gets Job

KITCHENER (CP) — Ron Murphy, who performed with four National Hockey League teams during a lengthy playing career, Monday was named coach of Kitchener Rangers of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series. A 37-year-old native of Hamilton, Murphy succeeds Jerry Forler who resigned last Thursday.

Court Clears Way For Frazier Fight

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Muhammad Ali heads for Miami Wednesday to start training for his March heavyweight championship showdown against Joe Frazier after being given a green light by the United States Supreme Court.

The court said Monday it would hear arguments, probably in April, on Ali's claim that he was a conscientious objector when he refused induction into the army 3½ years ago. The decision cleared the way for the championship bout.

In another decision, the Supreme Court refused to review baseball's exemption from anti-trust legislation, virtually killing the suit of Al Salerno and Bill Valentine, former American League umpires, who claimed they were fired in 1968 for trying to organize an umpire's union.

Ali, commenting on his case, said:

"I'm relieved. Now I can concentrate on the fight. I am happy, very happy that the Supreme Court has agreed to hear the case and eliminate any problem with the fight. Now I am going to show who the real champion of the world is."

Ali refused induction into the army April 28, 1967, and was subsequently indicted and convicted one month later. On June 20, 1967, U.S. District Court Judge Joe Ingraham imposed a $10,000 fine and five-year prison sentence on the boxer.

Ali was stripped of his title by most boxing commissions and also lost his licence. He was freed on $5,000 bond while his lawyers appealed the case and was not allowed to fight again until last October.

Since then, he has whipped Jerry Quarry and Oscar Bonavena to earn the showdown match with Frazier March 8.

Blanda Tops Poll

NEW YORK (AP) — George Blanda, 43, the quarterback-kicking specialist whose heroics for Oakland Raiders gave new hope to the middle-aged, has been named Male Athlete of the Year by The Associated Press.

The football player received 332 votes in the year-end poll of sports writers and broadcasters, compared with 246 for runner-up Bobby Orr of Boston Bruins and 224 for baseball catcher Johnny Bench of Cincinnati Reds.

Orr, 26, the National Hockey League defenceman from Parry Sound, Ont., earlier was named Athlete of the Year in the Canadian Press poll and Sportsman of the Year by Sports Illustrated magazine.

Football and basketball dominated the top ten in the AP balloting, with baseball getting two places, hockey one and boxing one.

This Time It's Wheels

Yvon du Hamel of La Salle, Que., leads the pack during a mortorcycle race in England. Du Hamel, 31, is the world champion of snowmobile racing, and in 1958 and 1959 won the lightweight motorcycle championship at Daytona International Speedway. Du Hamel just signed racing contracts with Bombardier to race snowmobiles and F. Manley and Sons to race Kawasaki motorcycles. (CP Photo)

Lightweight Du Hamel Believes Size Least of Racing Worries

By EVE WHITE

"If you are a small man, with a big stick you can win," says Yvon du Hamel of La Salle, Que.

Du Hamel has a double-edged "big stick"—his ability to race motorcycles, snowmobiles or cars and his overwhelming will to be first in every race he enters.

He has just signed two racing contracts which could easily net him $250,000 during the coming year. One is with Bombardier to race Ski-doo and the other with F. Manley and Sons to race Kawasaki motorcycles.

Aged 31, du Hamel weighs in at 120 pounds and stands only five-foot-three. He started motorcycle racing at 15, borrowing a machine from a friend and placing second in his first attempt.

His skill at all phases of two-wheeled sport won him the Canadian Motorcycle Association High-Point Trophy six times, but his fame stayed a national one till he was signed to ride Yamahas for Trev Deeley of Vancouver.

In 1958 he upset all predictions at the Daytona International Speedway by winning the lightweight national championship and placing second in the 200-miler. The following year he repeated his lightweight win and set a qualifying record of more than 150 m.p.h.

He gave car racing a whirl, winning his first novice event, but though he would like to go into big-time car racing he doesn't want to have to go the route through club racing.

Last year for Bombardier he won the world championship of snowmobile racing at Eagle River, Wis.

Du Hamel is married and has three children. Mario, the oldest, has been riding motorcycles since he was three, first on a specially-built miniature, but now aged eight he rides a full-sized machine.

He was often on show in the intermissions at half-mile track races, but since he tried to outshine and outride his dad on one or two occasions, he isn't seen as frequently.

Miguel, at three years, is the daring one, showing off to the family and calling for everyone to look at his skids and slides on his tricycle.

"I like to be a bit scared," says du Hamel, "and speed does that for me.

"I go just a bit faster than I think I can. When the track is wet or slippery I can out-ride others because I don't try to be cautious."

He is extremely fit and can withstand extremes of temperature. In the ice races at Quebec City speeds of 80 m.p.h. are achieved on the straightaways, giving a high wind-chill factor, yet du Hamel rides in two classes, changing from one motorcycle to the other without pause.

"I've had to fight for things all my life," says du Hamel. "Perhaps that has made me tough."

Campbell Not Concerned About Flyer Unilingualism

MONTREAL (CP) — Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, said Monday he was not concerned about a Philadelphia Flyers club policy forbidding its French-Canadian players from speaking their native language on the ice.

Flyers' coach Vic Stasiuk told reporters his players could speak any language they want in the dressing room or on the bench, as long as they spoke English during a game.

The Flyers have five French-speaking players—goalie Bernard Parent and forwards Serge Bernier, Andre Lacroix, Jean-Guy Gendron and Simon Nolet.

Campbell said Stasiuk and Marcel Pelletier, director of player personnel, had explained everything to his satisfaction.

"All he (Stasiuk) is trying to do," said Campbell, "is get the team to communicate. He feels that when they're playing, a common denominator of communication should be used."

Campbell said there had apparently been some "confusion" during games as a result of the two languages.

Stasiuk "was concerned about it during the team's losing streak, explained the situation to the players during a team meeting, and everybody appeared to agree that he had a point."

Campbell said he had not received any complaints from Flyers players, "and I don't expect that any of them will complain."

West NBA All-Star Favorites

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The west team should win tonight's 21st annual National Basketball Association all-star game, according to the oldest all-star.

"The west has more of the better players" insists Johnny Green, 37-year-old Cincinnati Royal forward, a member of the east team.

The game will be played at San Diego's International Sports Arena.

The west, led by 10-time all-stars Oscar Robertson of Milwaukee, Wilt Chamberlain and Jerry West, both of Los Angeles, is a squad with the combined all-star experience of 57 games. The East's 14-man team totals 30, paced by Willis Reed of New York who has played in six.

But two-time all-star Lew Alcindor of Milwaukee may be the game's deciding factor.

WILT CHAMBERLAIN

"Alcindor can dominate the game if he makes the effort," said Green.

A year ago, when Alcindor was a rookie, he played behind Green on the east team that won 142-135. Reed and Robertson scored 21 points each in that game.

With re-alignment of the league, Alcindor and Robertson join the west team and Big Lew stands in the way of Reed's attempt to be the game's most valuable player in consecutive years.

Robertson is a 32-year-old veteran with nine of his 10 all-star game appearances resulting in victories for his side. He leads all star scorers with 230 points but will not be in the west's starting lineup.

Ferrari Pulls Out

MODENA, Italy (AP) — The Italian Ferrari racing factory announced Monday it is withdrawing from the Grand Prix of Argentina Formula One auto race scheduled Jan. 24.

A spokesman said the reasons for the withdrawal were explained to the Italian Sports Commission which will then inform the international commission.

Sources in Modena said Ferrari's decision was a clear protest over the death of its driver, Ignazio Giunti, during the 1,000-kilometre race at Buenos Aires Sunday.

Giunti was killed when his Ferrari crashed against the Matra car of French driver Jean Pierre Beltoise, which was stopped in the middle of the track.

PLEDGES

FOR A NEW YEAR

ED McKINNEY
J. E. McKinney
Realty Ltd.

This is the time of year for pledges. The cynics say that pledges have a tendency to become more recited than practised and good intentions to become forgotten.

They're right, of course. We all fall short of perfection. But it is the striving to be better that keeps our society improving. Here is a list of pledges we'd recommend to any businessman as we strive ourselves to live up to them:

"Reputations will continue to be made by many acts and lost by one . . .

"Performance will continue to outsell promises . . .
"Business will continue to go where invited and remain where appreciated . . .

"Go-givers will become the best go-getters . . .
"People will go right on preferring to do business with friends . . .

"Know-how will surpass guess-how . . .
"Trust, not tricks, will keep customers loyal . . .
"Enthusiasm will continue to be as contagious as ever . . .
"Quality will be prized as a precious possession . . .
"And as anyone who has travelled it knows, the 'extra mile' has no traffic jams".

May you and yours have a happy and prosperous New Year.

Most people are trying to find nice reasons why snowmobiling can be a dangerous winter pastime.

One weekend Kawartha Cup competitor wasn't.

"This is it, right here," he tapped a cocktail glass. "There's a party, then everyone decides they should go out for a moonlight ride on the machines."

As he pointed out, such rides are often romantic, but occasionally fatal.

The fact that snowmobiles are not necessarily dangerous, or snowmobile operators not inherently idiotic was demonstrated at this past weekend's Kawartha Cup race program in Peterborough.

Over 1,000 machines were entered in the three-day program, yet only ten drivers received injuries serious enough to require medical attention.

Some of them were travelling at speeds approaching 70 miles per hour, while most of the 50 Canadian snowmobile deaths to date this winter occurred at half that speed.

The widely-accepted notion by owners that snowmobiles are novelty items, like mini-bikes or sit-down lawnmowers, no doubt gives many riders a false sense of security. In other words, they are too relaxed.

A few belts from the old hip flask and relaxation settles in above the ears.

Legislation can only go so far: it could ban the power toboggans from roads, or confiscate machines operated by underaged or unlicensed operators.

But one snowmobile manufacturer has voluntarily taken the bull by the handle-grips.

Skiroule Ltd. of Wickham, Quebec have announced they are reducing the power of their 1970-71 line.

Company president Rejean Houle (not the puck-lugger for the Canadiens) said the pioneer measure was "a response to widespread expressions of growing concern regarding snowmobile safety."

All of Skiroule's 1970-71 line will fall within the 250-400 cc range, while last year the firm manufactured a potent 793 machine.

"The new machines will be quite fast and powerful enough for all ordinary purposes," a company release says.

But the important thing, as Mr. Houle points out, is still that "snowmobiles themselves have no bad habits."

Kingston will be one of the sites of 25 baseball coaching clinics to be staged by the Montreal Expos in four provinces over the next four weeks.

Outfielder Jim Gosger, and pitchers Bill "No-hit" Stoneman and Howie Reed will conduct the eight-stop Ontario clinic scheduled to be in Kingston Thursday, Jan. 21.

O'Keefe Brewery has organized the clinics in conjunction with local baseball associations.

With baseball just around the corner, football has decided to come to a halt, which it will do Sunday in Miami.

The CBC Super Bowl telecast kicks off at 2 p.m.
This corner picks Baltimore to beat Dallas by two touchdowns which means you better put a few quid on the Cowboys right away.

Then Tuesday, Jan. 19, the CBC airs the annual mid-season NHL all-star game, beginning at 8.30 from the Boston Garden.

It should be a banner night for the raucous Beantown supporters, what with retired Harry Sinden making a coaching comeback behind the eastern all-star bench.

When you watch Bobby Orr show how he earns his annual $100,000 stipend, please bear in mind that Charles F. Adams purchased the entire Bruin club for $15,000 in the Twenties.

This year's all-star outing will also be somewhat of a mid-season family reunion.

The game will feature the performances of no less than three brother acts — the Hulls, the Espositos, and the Mahovlichs.

The man responsible for distributing those millions of pocket football, baseball, and hockey calendars around Belleville is Frank Enright, Crown Life's local representative.

You'd know Frank anywhere. He's the guy driving the half-ton truck full of schedules around the city.

Kinsmen Coast

Belleville Kinsmen bantams built up a 4-0 lead in the first two periods and then coasted in with a 7-2 victory over Picton Monday night.

Eric Powell and Peter Crawford scored in the first period for the winners with Bruce Sutherland and Rick Barbeau lighting the goal lamp in the second frame.

Crawford and Barbeau each added to their goal total in the final 20 minutes of play with Martin Thistel picking up the other score.

John Woodward and Rick Stever scored for Picton.

Goodfellow Big Stinger

In Northern Electric Hockey, Sunday, the Hornets stung the Dukes 8-2 and the Good Guys clipped the No Stars 8-5.

Bill Goodfellow paced the Hornets with four goals, while Rick Rosebush had both Duke tallies.

A hat trick by Bob Baitley led the Good Guys to their win while Bob Moon scored twice in a losing effort.

Mary Steals Some Glory

PETERBOROUGH (Special) — Mary O'Neill managed to steal some of the glory from Thief River Falls with a second place finish in the Molsons Women's International, a section of the Kawartha Cup competition.

The Belleville snowmobile rider trailed Pat White of Peterborough as the two women managed to break a monopoly on the top spots held by the Minnesota-based Arctic Cat team.

Mrs. O'Neill picked up a fourth in the 340 cc final and a fifth in the 399 class in the final day of racing Monday. Her second place finish on a 295 Arctic Cat gave her enough points for the runner-up purse of $500 in the women's section, bringing her total purse to almost $800 for the three days.

For Pat White, also riding an Arctic Cat, it was the second win in three years.

Arctic Cat took five firsts, five seconds, five thirds and three fourth place finishes in the three day event to walk away with the team championship.

Roger Jenssen, captain of the Thief River Falls team won the men's title finishing ahead of fellow team member Larry Colton. Among Jenssen's win was the land speed title with a clocking of 30.3 seconds over a half mile.

The second-place finish marked the first time that Mary O'Neill had competed in the event after only one year of snowmobile racing. She survived a spill in a qualifying match of the 340 Sunday en route to her fourth-place finish in the event.

When You're Smiling

Mary O'Neill has good reason to smile after the weekend's Kawartha Cup snowmobile races held at Peterborough. The Belleville rider piloted her Arctic Cat machines to a second place finish in the Molson's Women's International.

Gas House M's Deadly

Gas House Hockey league opponents dial M for murder against the Mustangs and Merchants this season.

The two top teams continued their winning ways as the Mustangs shut out Marysville 3-0 and the Merchants stopped Mulroney's 3-1.

Don Holoway, John Smith and Don Irvine backed Paul Smith's shutout puckstopping for the league leading Mustangs. The winners drew three of the game's four penalties.

Don Fish and Dave Middleton traded goals for the Merchants and Mulroney's before Carl Boomhower and Barry Marshall were able to give their team the win.

The Merchants were guilty of two of the game's three infractions.

Picton Still Making Hoop Presence Felt

Picton and Nicholson continued to make their presence felt in the Bay of Quinte COSSA basketball section taking the top spots in the Eastern section away from perennial power BCI.

The Prince Edward hoopsters were victorious in three contests with Napanee Monday, while Nicholson split a pair of games with Centre Hastings.

Steve Tripp tallied 21 points to lead the Picton bantams to a 50-16 win over Napanee, getting support from Steve Walmsley and Tim Barrett with seven points each. De Silva counted four points for the losers.

In junior action, Picton squeaked out a 37-36 win over the league's eastern entry. Bruce Ketchem showed the way with 12 points followed by Dave Culmer with nine. For Napanee it was Markotich scoring 12 points.

The first place Picton seniors wracked up their fifth win of the year by downing Napanee 40-28. Kevin Quinn was high scorer with 14 points. Bill Barrett, who had pumped in a phenomenal 52 points in a December meeting between the two schools, added nine to the winners total.

Nicholson moved to the top of the East's junior division with an 89-31 decision over Centre Hastings.

Dave Dolan (19), John Garvin (18) and Tim Marta (13) were the top Nicholson point-getters.

In midget play Centre Hastings upset the Belleville team 42-28.

Hotelmen Give Selves Some Breathing Room

Belvedere Hotelmen can breathe a little easier after last night's 3-0 shutout over the second-place Central Taxi of the Quinte Hockey League as the win gave them a three-point cushion for the top rung.

Claude Carr picked up the shutout for the Hotelmen, getting support from Larry Stewart, Gerry Jones and Jack Francis, who also picked up an assist.

The winners were assesed three penalties, one more than the Taximen.

Stinon Construction kept DCA Transfer's winless record intact by heading the cellar dwellers a 7-1 setback.

Meeks scored twice for the construction workers with single tallies going to Bruce Symons, Jim Woodcock, Paul Stinson, Dennis Ray and Dave Jodoin.

Bill Nolan had the losers' lone reply.

New Bank Formed

Communists May Compete In Money Mart

LONDON (Reuter) — The Soviet Union and its allies may be competing with Western governments and businesses on the international money market by the end of the year through the recently - formed International Investment Bank.

Although such Soviet banks as the Moscow Narody in London and the Wozchod in Zurich have been conducting a number of discreet operations over the years, loans floated by the international Communist Bank will be a major new departure.

The creation of the new bank follows a growing belief here that if the Communist world is to expand and develop its massive resources it must call on outside capital.

It also follows a generally more flexible aproach to international financing. For the first time, the Soviet Foreign Trade Bank in 1970 joined a syndicate of Western banks to support a loan. It was being used to finance the export of Soviet equipment to Brazil.

The new bank's chairman, Vitali Vorobyov, writes in the weekly Ekonomicheskaya Gazeta that its governing council will be empowered to "take decisions on issuing interest-bearing bond loans, placed on international money markets."

The bank itself will be profit-making and operate in many ways like a capitalist international financial institution but Vorobyov stressed that unlike the World Bank its members will have equal voting rights—although none will have a veto.

The International Investment Bank, which began operations Jan. 1, was formally set up in July, 1970.

Comecon—the Soviet bloc's trade and economic co-operation organization—unites the Soviet Union, Poland, East Germany, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria and Mongolia.

Despite Romania's refusal to take part so far, Vorobyov hinted there were hopes it would change its mind when he wrote that the bank's authorized capital of $1.000 million could be increased if a new member joined.

During the first two years, annual contributions from members would total $190 million, and the remainder would be paid in accordance with the development of the bank and the demand for funds, Vorobyov said.

Each country's share will be calculated according to the volume of its exports in their mutual trade.

Vorobyov said that unlike the Comecon bank the new institution would play a direct role in the creation and strengthening of the material and technical structure of the Communist countries.

Its fundamental task is to provide credits primarily for carrying out projects linked with the Comecon policy of international division of labor, specialization and co-operative production.

Special attention will also be paid to expanding member countries' raw material and fuel economies and to the construction of joint projects.

Financial sources in Moscow say they are certain that in setting up the bank the Comecon countries have a clear idea of what they plan to do, possibly down to the details, of which projects could be aided by the infusion of capital raised in the West.

The bank itself will make loans of between five and 15 years for capital construction to national banks or enterprises in member countries.

But it will also be able to make loans to banks and economic organizations in other countries under a system set up by its government council, Vorobyov said.

This would leave open the possibility that the bank could help finance projects in such non-member countries as Romania, Yugoslavia or Cuba, or even in the non-aligned world.

The bank's loans, which will carry an interest rate varying with the period for which they are made and the currency lent, will only be granted for projects coming up to modern scientific and technical specifications, Vorobyov said.

He said the Soviet Union had not joined the World Bank or other similar institutions mainly because it did not agree with "the undemocratic character of the solution of many problems."

He said the biggest contributors, such as the U.S. with its 25 per cent share in the World Bank, were often able to exercise a decisive role.

Public Banned At PC Meetings

TORONTO (CP) — The public will be barred from all seven meetings at which all candidates for the Ontario Progressive Conservative Association leadership will appear together.

Announcing this Monday night, Arthur Harnett, executive director of the Association, said only the press, delegates and alternate delegates to the party's leadership convention here Feb. 10-12 will be invited to the meetings.

"With delegates from several ridings coming to each meeting we already require space for at least 160 at each meeting," said Mr. Harnett. If the public were invited larger facilities would be required and this was too unwieldy.

The all-candidate meetings are Jan. 14 in Ottawa, Jan. 19 in Sudbury, Jan. 21 in Windsor, Jan. 26 in London, Jan. 28 in Thunder Bay, Feb. 2 in Hamilton and Feb. 4 in Toronto.

The declared candidates who agreed Monday to attend all seven meetings are: Education Minister William Davis, Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough, Mines Minister Allan Lawrence, Financial Affairs Minister Bert Lawrence and Provincial Secretary Robert Welch.

Monday night four of the five candidates preparing for Thursday's head-on confrontation in Ottawa were on the campaign trail. The fifth, Mr. Welch, planned a family dinner.

At Hamilton, Mr. Davis replied to Allan Lawrence's attack on education expenditure. Mr. Lawrence has said no single item in the provincial budget should represent more than one third of the total.

Mr. Lawrence said the education bill stands at 42 per cent and should be curbed to 33 per cent. Mr Davis told a Hamilton news conference the impression given was that education costs were on a never-ending upward spiral.

This was not so, he said.

"In fact, we are in the process of stabilizing education costs by imposing certain ceilings. These are very real controls and they are tough."

Education was also mentioned at Kitchener by Bert Lawrence as the 47-year-old Ottawa lawyer met with about 40 delegates from Kitchener, South Waterloo and South Wellington ridings. Later he spoke to Waterloo North Conservatives.

He said it was no use creating stronger local units such as county school boards and regional governments if the education and municipal affairs departments kept growing bigger.

"This trend must be reversed," he said. The cost of education must be held at its present level by cutting out such waste as flimsy research.

The schools were torn by internal dissent, the students were not learning, the system is sick, he said in an interview. His views were expressed on the eve of his campaign kick-off, to be held in his home riding of Ottawa Carleton.

Mr. McKeough spoke at London and St. Tyomas. He told a political science class at the University of Western Ontario that Ontario government policy shouldn't discourage foreign investment but rather encourage Canadian investment.

At St. Thomas he said success at the polls during the next provincial election is the "gut issue" of the current leadership race.

"Any one of us leadership candidates will make a good leader, but you must be certain that the leader picked can take us into the next general election and win."

Allan Lawrence addressed a meeting in his home riding of Toronto St. George. He is scheduled today to go to Cochrane and Sault Ste. Marie.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.

Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Disease Delights In Wearing Mask

Disease cannot be trusted. It wears a mask. Whatever the illness, it seems to delight in confusing the doctor who is trying to help his patient. Like the small child on Hallowe'en night, it dotes on hiding its real identity. For this reason, doctors are trained to be suspicious of symptoms and signs. Are they real or spurious? An example is the disease called histoplasmosis.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: At first I thought I had an attack of influenza that decided to hang on for weeks and weeks. It began with chills and fever. I had night sweats and loss of appetite. I lost weight and got tired easily. Soon I began to cough and bring up sputum. I complained of pain on the right side of my chest.

After taking aspirin without help for about a month, I decided to see our family doctor. There was no history of tuberculosis in our family, yet the doctor said he'd have to make sure I didn't have it.

X rays were suspicious. He was practically certain I was tuberculous. But he couldn't find any of the bacteria in my sputum, so he thought I'd better see a chest specialist. As he couldn't find anything definite either — although the X rays looked much like tuberculosis infection — he kept searching for the reason.

I suppose you've guessed it by now. No, it wasn't cancer either — thank God. He found I had histoplasmosis. I rested in bed on and off for a few months, took special medicines, and now I am better. I thought your readers would like to know that what seems to be a simple "flu" that hangs on may sometimes be due to something else. — Mrs. U.

Comment: You bring up an interesting and helpful point, Mrs. U. Histoplasmosis is being seen more commonly because we are more aware of it, and make the diagnosis. It's due to a fungus infection — not caused by viruses or bacteria.

This particular fungus is called Histoplasma capsulatum and it can infect the skin, too. Birds often carry this fungus. It is common in the soil. The disease is contracted by breathing the fungus. We make the diagnosis by using special skin, sputum and blood tests.

In apparently mild cases such as yours, Mrs. U., medical treatment takes care of the problem. But histoplasmosis can be serious enough to require surgical opration on the lung.

The other day I received a letter from a reader who complained of having the flu for months and wondered why it hung on so long. She hadn't seen her doctor after his first visit. I suggested an examination because uncomplicated "flu" doesn't usually last longer than a week or two.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: After I go to bed, very frequently I wake up in the middle of the night and find that my right arm is completely lifeless. There's no feeling at all in it, and I can't seem to move it. I have to grope about and find it with my left hand and then massage it until the feeling comes back into it.

It is all right during the day. It's a terrible feeling to find that your arm seems dead. I keep dreaming that it has become permanently paralyzed. Please help me if you can. I am only 15 years old. — Miss L.

Comment: At your age I doubt that there is any danger of paralysis as the reason for your complaint. Have your parents asked your family doctor to see you? Perhaps you will also have to see a consultant who will order X rays. Pressure on a large nerve by an extra rib or by a muscle sometimes causes symptoms like yours. Once the reason is found, treatment will help you.

Ottawa Plans Controls Of Imports of Clothes

OTTAWA (CP) — The government introduced legislation Monday that would give it wide powers to control imports of textiles and clothing by regulation.

The bill, given routine first reading in the Commons, also would provide lawful sanction for a federal advisory board that has already been established.

The textile and clothing board bill would give the three-man agency formal power to investigate complaints of injury or potential damage from imports and to require proposals by Canadian companies for industrial adjustments designed to improve their competitive efficiency.

It could recommend government protective action before or after examining the proposals to improve efficiency in the Canadian industry.

The government would be empowered to control the import of textiles or clothing under the bill by "special measures of protection."

They include limiting imports upon the recommendation of the new board or limiting or prohibiting imports that the government finds are entering in circumvention of a restraint agreement with a supplier country.

The board may hold hearings in public if it believes "the nature of the information to be disclosed so permits." Otherwise, hearings would be private.

Jean-Luc Pepin, trade and industry minister, appointed the three-man board Nov. 5 on an interim basis.

C. A. Annis, former federal trade official and head of the federal machinery advisory board, is chairman. The other members are Jacques St. Laurent, sociologist of Laval University, Quebec, and J. D. Campbell, retired chairman of Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd.

The board may institute inquiries on its own initiative or upon complaint by a Canadian producer about imports of any textile or clothing goods causing or threatening injury to domestic production.

The board would have full powers to call witnesses and require information.

A complaining company would be required to present a plan "describing the adjustments that the producer proposes to make in his operations . . . in order to increase his ability to meet international competition in the market in Canada" under normal tariff protection.

The board may recommend emergency protective measures by the government even before evaluating adjustment proposals.

In evaluating adjustment plans and deciding whether protection from imports is required, the board would consider such factors as international trade agreements, Canadian consumers and "the principle that special measures of protection are not to be implemented for the purpose of encouraging the maintenance of lines of production that have no prospects of becoming internationally competitive in the market in Canada. . . ."

The bill also would extend federal aid to textile or clothing workers under an adjustment assistance program.

Sydney J. Harris Says

'Equal' Is Not 'Identical'

Does anyone imagine that the U.S. Founding Fathers were so stupid that they used the phrase "All men are created equal" without knowing what it meant? In their arrogance, many modern Americans imagine so.

Ignorant or malevolent people are fond of pointing out that, obviously, no two persons are "created equal" in terms of intelligence, ability, strengths, and so forth. Do they think our Founding Fathers were so blind as not to know that simple fact?

"Equal" does not mean "identical." No two persons are identical, just as no two fingerprints are identical. People have different heights, color eyes, different physical characteristics of all sorts. In the same way, we all have different intellectual and emotional traits. Who but a total idiot could deny this?

What is meant by the phrase, "all men are created equal," is not that they are identical, but that everyone at birth is entitled to equal treatment as a person, so that he can realize the maximum of his God-given abilities.

It meant that the state, or the law, cannot arbitrarily treat one person differently from another, as foreign nations (at the time we were founded) had different laws for the nobility and for the masses.

What is shocking and disappointing, after nearly 200 years of our form of government, is that so many Americans apparently still fail to understand what "equality" means — and perversely interpret it as meaning that everyone has to be "rewarded" identically, no matter how much abilities may differ.

This straw man is too easy to knock down: but the basic idea of equality under the law is as strong and relevant today as it was in 1776. But, because of ignorant or willful misinterpretations, we are still far from this noble goal of Washington, Jefferson and their allies. Today's tories are still insisting that because men are not identical, therefore they should not be treated as equals.

In a family, however, (and a nation is only a family writ large), we know that our different children have dissimilar talents and abilities. Yet, if we are wise and loving parents, we give them all the same opportunity to rise to whatever level they can; indeed, we often give the duller or less-favored an extra lift up to compensate for their weakness or incapacity. The brighter and more fortunate don't need it as much.

This is precisely the way a nation should operate, for its own good and the good of all its members. When do you suppose we will begin?

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

Wednesday, January 13

Your birthday today: Your coming year succeeds according to your willingness to keep trying, in the face of restrictions and changes of direction. Material gains will be needed for working capital rather than casual luxury. Intellectual expression is generally unhindered in all social channels. Today's natives tend to have mystical interests, are often impractical, ahead of their times, honest.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Selling ideas, shorten routines to a lick-and-a-promise if you can. Home and marital affairs become an adventure; share an experience that later will be remembered fondly.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Get directly to the main problem. Unplanned episodes are very interesting, perhaps exciting. Do-it-yourself projects and serious study are both suggested.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Attend to technical, legal formalities. Avoid physical strain, heavy exertion — it's better to wait and get help. Older people, rules restrict you for the moment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Checking details reveals better ways of handling money, savings. Your care and consideration help others to find their way, possibly avoid unfortunate incidents.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): Conflicts of personalities and interests are to be expected. Friends are of no help, having their own concerns. Being nonchalant would defeat your purpose — stay in there pitching, involved, em[illegible].

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Serious plans are in order. A change in direction or activity might be desirable. Estimates of financial matters are down, unduly pessimistic. Cheer up!

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22): Let bygones be bygones, especially in family relations. Your time is too valuable, so select sensibly and get busy before someone else has the same bright idea.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): People disagree over almost anything, and only you can decide whether to join them. Your emotional preferences are not necessarily for the person who is "right."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The fewer opinions you volunteer in family circles, the better. Wait until you're asked. Get on with your regular work, keep schedules promptly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): Whatever financial resources are immediately available are for today's purposes. Demands come at you from all sides. Remain serene, don't take your friends' fuzzy ideas and alarms seriously.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Somebody near you draws all the attention and much of the "luck." Your role may be overlooked, but never mind, go along with it. Extra travel turns out beneficial.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Pursue the petty details of your career-work as if they were important — they are. Leave nothing to chance in communications. People who are generally excitable aren't today.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

'Jewish Question' Returned To Limelight in Soviet Russia

MOSCOW (Reuter) — The December trial in Leningrad of 10 men and a woman who plotted to hijack a Soviet plane to Sweden has brought into the open again the recurring "Jewish question" in the Soviet Union.

Officially there is no such question. The line is that all so-called nationality problems were solved in Russia after the 1917 revolution. But many Jews, both there and abroad, have different views.

The would-be hijackers—of whom 11 were convicted and sentenced and a 12th faces court martial—were nearly all of Jewish parentage, and most of them had applied in vain for permission to emigrate to Israel.

The women, 26-year-old Silva Zalmanson, told the Leningrad city court during their 10-day trial that "if they had let us leave, there would not have been this 'criminal plot'."

Probably no one knows just how many of the estimated three million Soviet Jews want to go to Israel.

According to estimates by Jews who have applied to leave, there are tens of thousands, but it is highly doubtful that many have submitted formal applications—a tedious process to say the least.

The same figure was repeated by Andrei Sakharov, a top nuclear physicist who has turned himself into a kind of unofficial human rights watchdog.

No figures are available either from the Soviet authorities or The Netherlands embassy, which handles Israel's affairs here since Moscow broke with Tel Aviv after the Arab-Israeli war in June, 1967.

According to the Jewish agency in Tel Aviv 1,000 Soviet Jews immigrated there last year, compared with only 300 who had been allowed to leave in the previous 2½ years.

As. Lt.-Gen. Grigori Plaskov, a retired Jew, put it in an article in the defence ministry daily Red Star last March: "Soviet Jews have but one homeland. They have nothing to look for in distant parts beyond the seas."

But for each prominent Soviet Jew who would not contemplate swapping his present citizenship for that of Israel, it seems there is another—less well known perhaps—who wants to leave.

The vast majority keep their views to themselves and it is virtually impossible for an outsider to assess the real strength of feeling for Israel among Soviet Jews.

But interest in Israel has certainly grown among them since the 1967 six-day war, which has been followed by a sustained propaganda campaign against "Israeli aggressors" and "zionist extremists."

Whether they like it or not, those who want to go to Israel are caught up in the mesh of Soviet foreign policy.

Obviously, the Kremlin would not want to risk antagonizing its Arab friends, who hold the key to growing Soviet influence in the Middle East, by making friendly gestures toward Israel —even if the reason for the gesture was purely an internal one.

Accusations of anti-Semitism in the Soviet Union, hotly denied by officials and by many Soviet Jews, are often made in Israel and the West.

A lack of Jewish schools is perhaps the most often cited complaint.

Even in the Jewish autonomous region, set up in 1934 on the banks of the Amur River in the Soviet far east to give the widely dispersed Soviet Jews a territorial base, there are no Yiddish-language schools.

Jewish schools existed until the 1930s in big traditional Jewish centres, especially in the Ukraine. But they were based on the religious communities—and in the atheist Soviet Union the teaching of any religion to minors is forbidden.

As an idea to attract and resettle Soviet Jews, the autonomous region does not seem to have been a great success. In the 1959 census only 14,000 of the region's 163,000 inhabitants said they were Jews.

In refuting charges of anti-Semitism, officials can draw on an impressive list of prominent Jews to back their argument that there is equality of opportunity.

There is only one Jew in the government, Deputy Premier Veniamin Dymshits, but this is not dissimilar to the position of other minorities.

In science and the arts Jews occupy many top positions, including Ballerina Maya Plisetskaya, musicians David and Igor Oistrakh, the late physicist Lev Landau and the late writer Ilya Ehrenburg, almost certainly out of proportion to their numerical strength among the population.

But Russia has a sad history of anti-Semitism and even officials admit privately when asked about it that there are unfortunate "survivals of the past."

Ship Hits Wreck Of Blasted Tanker

FOLKESTONE, England (CP) — Six bodies were recovered and 12 persons are missing today after a 2,695-ton West German motorship sank in the foggy Strait of Dover. Channel pilots believed the Brandenburg tore open its bottom on the hulk of a Panamanian oil tanker that sank off Folkestone the day before.

"We heard a crash and came on deck and within two minutes she had sunk," said one of the 14 persons rescued from the Brandenburg. They said two women passengers and two stewardesses were among the 32 persons aboard.

Pilots said the ship probably struck the bow section of the 13,600-ton Texaco Caribbean, which exploded and sank Monday after a collision with a Peruvian freighter.

The Bradenburg was carrying machinery and case goods from Antwerp, Belgium to the West Indies.

A garbled distress signal brought fishing boats and lifeboats to the area of the strait that sailors call "Piccadilly Circus" because of heavy traffic. A pilot vessel fixed buoys to the sunken stern of the Texaco Caribbean and pulled two life rafts from the Brandenburg and their occupants from the water.

Today's sinking in the Dover Straits came as shipping and government officials scheduled a conference to talk over the present traffic flow of the English Channel.

Northbound channel craft now take the French side and southbound vessels the English side —making a turn across traffic necessary for Britain-bound tankers and freighters.

'Destroy Everything' Was Langevin's Plan

MONTREAL (CP) — The Crown ended its case Tuesday against Robert Langevin, accused of seditious libel for allegedly advocating a new Quebec government by force through the use of "guerrilla" fighters.

In a signed statement to police, Langevin, 21, was pegged as the author of a plan for the violent overthrow of government.

The revolutionary plan outlined a "movement" of 3,060 members, each of whom was to procure his own weapon and ammunition and be "ready for any kind of patriotic action."

Organized and armed, the cells would proceed with Operation Destruction, aiming first at knocking out communications, electricity, railways, bridges and manufacturing plants.

"They will have to destroy everything that serves the imperialist cause," it said, "so as to wreck the economy of the province and drive out all those capitalists thirsty for money.

"The operation will begin in the rural areas to decentralize the police and armed forces. When this is done, the urban cells must organize demonstrations in the cities and put the torch to everything that is capitalist and imperialist."

With the destruction, more supporters were expected to be drawn to the revolutionary cause, paving the way for Operation Guerrilla, the kidding phase.

Industrialists were marked for death "because we declared war a long time ago on exploiters and sold-out people."

The revolutionaries would then form a "battalion" and attack "whatever is left of the enemy forces."

The "victory" phase would be "the formation of the provincial government and the Declaration of Independence."

Post Office Called Worst Mess Ever

OTTAWA (CP) — Roger Decarie, national president of the Letter Carriers' Union of Canada, says union-management relations in the post office have reached a critical stage.

"We do not want a repetition of the May-August, 1970, period," he said in a statement referring to the hit-and-run strike tactics of last summer.

He complained that decentralization of post office administration has led to the by-passing of union executives and "the worst mix-up ever" in muddled instructions and split responsibilities.

Jean-Pierre Cote, minister without portfolio in charge of the post office, was criticized by the union leader for not making his instructions stick.

"We don't know where we stand," Mr. Decarie said. "In fact, nobody seems to know where they stand, not even the postmaster-general himself. . . .

"No one wants to make decisions, regional officers couldn't care less about departmental authorities in Ottawa and refuse all instructions."

Meanwhile, in Toronto, a post office spokesman said a system of speeding up mail service to provide next-day delivery anywhere in Canada will be instituted in Toronto in the next two weeks. The system will apply only to Toronto at first and then spread to the rest of the country within 18 months.

Trudeau Said Inciting Africa

LONDON (CP) — The Daily Telegraph, in an editorial on the Commonwealth conference beginning in Singapore Thursday, has accused Prime Minister Trudeau of stirring up black African feelings over the issue of possible British arms sales to South Africa.

The Telegraph says that "every Canadian prime minister, from a safe distance, leads and incites the militancy of Commonwealth Africa and Mr. Trudeau is carrying on the tradition . . ."

The newspaper says the black African fears of South Africa must be understood.

"They are, however, emotional rather than rational, since the maritime arms under discussion have no relevance for continental use," argues The Telegraph, a supporter of the governing Conservative party in Britain.

"Irrational objections cannot be given much weight in British policy-making.

"Unfortunately, Commonwealth conferences seem almost expressly designed to make such differences loom far larger than they should."

The role of the Canadian prime minister is partly responsible for this, the paper suggests.

The Telegraph says British Prime Minister Heath should "refuse to be drawn into any over-dramatized debate in Singapore."

"If, before or at that time (when arms are sold), any countries withdraw from the Commonwealth, only a minority in this country will worry," the paper says.

"The merits of the Commonwealth as it is do not include any net advantage to Britain."

The Daily Mail, another Conservative-supporting paper, says that among most Britons "the mere mention of the Commonwealth raises a cynical yawn."

Mrs. Helen Hudson-Allen of Halifax was fined $50 or 30 days in jail Tuesday on charges of endangering public health by feeding a large number of pigeons near her home. British Police Guard Ministers

LONDON (CP) — A massive police operation to protect cabinet ministers and leading MPs swung into operation today after a bombing at the home of Robert Carr employment minister and sponsor of a controversial industrial relations bill in the Commons.

Two time bombs went off outside Carr's $100,000 Hertfordshire home—with nobody hurt—Tuesday night at the end of a day of abortive labor demonstrations against the Conservative government's legislation.

One Scotland Yard detective said the bombing was a serious attempt on Carr's life and could be the work of left-wing extremists.

Windows were smashed and other damage done to the home of 55-year-old Carr, who later picked up a bottle of milk from his refrigerator and moved into a neighbor's home with his wife and daughter. A third, unexploded bomb was found in his front garden.

Carr said: "All I'm concerned about is that no one has been hurt."

Police said that "it looks as though whoever did this was out to kill."

One bomb went off at a side door of the luxurious home. Had the Carr family rushed out the front door after this, an officer said, it would have caught the force of the second one.

Carr told reporters: "One thing I am quite sure about is that the great majority of trade unionists, however opposed to my bill, would certainly have no part in anything of this kind."

Carr's bill, which among other things would make unions subject to penalties for breaching contracts and put a rein on wildcat strikes, has been attacked strongly by the trade union movement in recent weeks.

Tuesday was decided on as a day of demonstration against it. The nine million-member Trade Union Congress asked its members to protest outside working hours, without disrupting production. The Communist party called for a day of strike.

Only Anzacs Back Heath

SINGAPORE (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau arrived today for the Commonwealth prime minisbers amid threats of an African walkout and words from Prime Minister Heath that Britain is in the Commonwealth to stay.

Trudeau, looked upon by some as a mediator in the dispute over British proposals to sell arms to South Africa, flew from New Delhi after a four-day visit to India where he said if enough nations withdraw from the Commonwealth over the arms issue, a chain reaction would start that might force others to quit, including Canada.

Heath, the Tory leader who took over the British government last June when Labor was swept from power, told an airport news conference in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, today before arriving in Singapore:

"We are a member of the Commonwealth and will remain a member."

Asked if there could be a Commonwealth without Britain, and whether Britain could be expelled from the organization, he said: "There are no rules whereby they could decide that."

The summit talks of 31 Commonwealth member countries begins Thursday and are scheduled to end Jan. 22.

The explosive question of arms sales will not be debated until the middle of the nine-day conference which will start out with a discussion of The Commonwealth in the 1970s.

Senior delegates said that India, with Canadian and Nigerian help, initiated a successful move to put off discussion of the arms question.

The agenda was set today. Some Africans had demanded priority discussion of the arms issue.

Egypt Wants Big Four To Keep Peace

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Egypt is proposing a three-point Middle East peace plan calling for a Big Four peacekeeping force under the United Nations flag, an authoritative Cairo newspaper said today.

Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad had a telephone conversation Tuesday with Mohammed El Zayyat, Egypt's UN ambassador, and presumably asked him to pass the plan on to UN mediator Gunnar V. Jarring.

Surrounded by Cabbies Thugs Welcome Police

MONTREAL (CP) — Taxi drivers, often easy pickings for holdup men, Tuesday ganged up to help police in the arrest of two would-be robbers.

Nearly 60 drivers, armed with jacks, wrenches and other makeshift weapons, blocked off an east-end street following a report that a fellow driver was being held up.

Ronald Rodgers, 43, said that two men jumped into his cab and demanded money. He radioed for help after the two men left his car and tried to escape in another taxi. Within minutes, a fleet of nearly 60 vehicles arrived to block off the neighborhood.

The men quietly surrendered.

"There's no telling what would have happened to them if police hadn't arrived on the scene," Mr. Rodgers said later.

"They were so afraid they wouldn't even get out of the taxi."

Rental Policy Will Be Set

Should different organizations be entitled to different rates when renting meeting facilities from the city recreation and arena committee?

That is the question on which committee members hope to make a ruling in the near future.

At yesterday's meeting of the recreation committee there were requests from no less than three organizations for rental of the Ben Bleecker Auditorium or for other committee facilities — all of them seeking a preferred rate.

All three organizations felt they should be given consideration for lower rates because the activities were in the interests of the community.

It was recommended that a special committee be set up to formulate a definite policy with respect to rental of facilities.

One of the requests considered yesterday was from the Belleville Kinsmen Club asking for free use of the Bleecker building next June 27 for a pancake breakfast in connection with a Highland Weekend. The committee granted the request.

Free use of the Bleecker building was also granted to the Belleville Winter Carnival Committee for staging of a teenage dance in connection with the winter carnival.

But the recreation committee drew the line on reduced rental in a request from the YMCA program director for use of the Bleecker building this Saturday for a dance. The normal $160 fee will apply.

CMA Pollution Seminar Panel

The Quinte-St. Lawrence branch of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association last night sponsored a panel discussion on pollution at the Hotel Quinte. Meeting to Discuss Renovation

What, if anything, should be done about rehabilitating Belleville's 40-year-old arena, will be under consideration next week at a special meeting of the city recreation and arena committee.

The committee will meet next Tuesday afternoon to go over the arena feasibility study prepared by architects Watson and Wiegand, and try to come up with a recommendation on what aspects of the report should be used.

Proposals covered in the report ranged all the way from taking out the view-obstructing steel posts, provision of new seating, new lighting, a new front entrance and additional canteen facilities.

If all the recommendations contained in the report were carried out, the cost was estimated at three-quarters of a million dollars.

But if the feeling of one member of the recreation and arena committee holds there is little likelihood that the expenditure on arena renovations will be anything like the above amount.

In fact, Alderman Paul Russell said he couldn't see the city doing anything with the old arena. "It would be just throwing good money after bad," he said.

But other members didn't take quite the same view, their feeling being that some renovations could be done.

Committee member Joe Cox admitted there had been some criticism of the report, which cost $2,000.

But he said the report had been necessary to determine just what could be done with the old arena.

City Manager J. R. Reynolds suggested that serious consideration should be given to carrying out some of the work recommended in the report.

Some modernization of the arena building was necessary to protect the city's investment, he felt.

No action was taken at yesterday's meeting on committee capital works requirements for the next five years.

One of the items suggested is construction of a new ice rink in the city's east end by 1975 at an estimated cost of $350,000.

Another is provision of storage space for minor sports equipment.

Both items, along with what might be done by way of renovation at the old arena, were deferred for consideration until after the special meeting on the arena feasibility study.

Committee Wants Wider Powers

The city traffic and light committee has decided that after all it should have some jurisdiction over street lighting—especially where a traffic safety factor is involved.

Several weeks ago, when an item of business involving lighting was brought up, the question was raised whether the committee actually had jurisdiction over street lighting.

It was suggested that the "light" as it pertained to the traffic and light committee referred to traffic signals only.

But now committee members are not so sure.

At Monday's committee meeting a letter from Utilities Commission Manager E. L. Burnham was read suggesting that street lighting provided for maximum safe usage of city streets and roadways.

Accordingly Mr. Burnham felt the traffic and light committee should have some jurisdiction over street lighting.

And with a second look at the matter, committee members generally agreed that from the standpoint of traffic safety the committee should be interested in street lighting.

Actually, however, the committee has no funds for spending on street lighting.

The utilities commission makes recommendations as to the installation of new street lighting, but no work is done until city council gives its approval.

Liberal Group Names Officers

BLOOMFIELD (Staff) — Roland Stalker of RR 1 Bath was named president of the Prince Edward - Lennox Liberal Association at an organizational meeting held last night at the Bloomfield town-hall.

About 40 persons attended the meeting. Robert Temple, Belleville, president of the Hastings (Federal) Liberal Association, was guest speaker.

Others seated at the speaker's table were Prince Edward county warden Allen Anderson, George Cunningham, Prince Edward-Hastings Liberal Association and Allen Ralley, retiring president.

Vice-presidents for the association named at the meeting were W. (Walley) Beevor of Ameliasburg, Erwill Huff, Napanee; Lyle Vanclief, Ameliasburg, secretary and Mrs. Bessie Dulmage of Athol as treasurer.

The meeting passed a motion calling on the executive to find a suitable slate of candidates by February 15 and to call a nominating convention shortly after that date.

Robarts Called 'Santa'

BLOOMFIELD (Staff) — Ontario Premier John P. Robarts will be remembered as "one of the great Santa Clauses of all time," members of the Prince Edward - Lennox Liberal Association were told last night in Bloomfield.

Speaking at the organizational meeting at which Roland Stalker of RR1, Bath, was named association president, retiring president Allen Ralley dubbed the Ontario premier as a "Santa Claus", stating that the Conservative government has a great grant structure.

He said that most delegations seeking financial aid have received it but warned "there is a limit to what we can pay."

Mr. Ralley applauded several programs suggested by Liberal Leader Robert Nixon, including reorganization of the department of agriculture and rural development.

He said that nothing seems to be done about agriculture in this part of Ontario. Rural living doesn't seem to be keeping up with the way city life is going.

The speaker said Mr. Nixon wanted to establish a priority for agriculture. Farmers should take a hard look at regional government proposals.

Liberal Leader Nixon, Mr. Ralley said, would present regional government as a whole new program which would not force local governments "to operate in a vacuum stripped of their power and autonomy."

Local councils now are strapped by an archaic property tax system.

Mr. Ralley was critical of MPP Norris Whitney who, he said, after 19 years as member for Prince Edward - Lennox had now isolated himself from the people.

He criticized reports that the new provincial hospital at Picton would be staffed by Conservatives and by those who remember to vote for Mr. Whitney on election day.

"I understand that Mr. Whitney may run again, but I hear he is interested in naming a replacement," said Mr. Ralley, adding that frequently in this connection he has heard the names of Picton sheriff H. J. Colliver, former Picton Reeve Bernard Hepburn, Wellington businessman Robert Boyce and Ed Rutter, past chairman of the Prince Edward board of education.

"But for those on the other side of the riding there is no hope in any way to get a member."

Mr. Ralley hoped that names from the Lennox side of the riding would be proposed one day.

The retiring association president said he was disappointed in the way politics has had to reduce itself.

He mentioned back - biting between the Liberals and Conservative parties and suggested this encourages the popularity of other parties such as the NDP.

"The party that has a program and offers an alternative to the mess the Conservatives have in Ontario is the Liberal party," he asserted.

"None of Mr. Nixon's policies has ever been shot down or laughed out at any meeting," he concluded. "The Liberals are ready to meet the Conservatives and the NDP."

An open discussion on regional government concluded the meeting.

IN MEMORIAM

HARLOW — In loving and cherished memory of a dear husband who passed away January 13th, 1964.
When ties of love are broken,
And loved ones have to part,
It leaves a wound that never heals
In an ever aching heart.
—Lovingly remembered by wife Lulu.

HILL — In memory of my dear sister, Viola, who passed away Jan. 13, 1966.
There is always a lonely heartache,
Always a lonely tear,
But there are always precious memories,
Of the days when you were here.
—Always remembered by her sister Myrtle Stanley.

HILL — In loving memory of dear daughter Viola who passed away Jan. 13, 1966.
To some you may be forgotten,
To others part of the past,
But to me you will be remembered,
As long as life shall last.
—Lovingly remembered by Mom and Ronald.

SCERRI — In loving memory of a dear daughter and sister, who passed away January 13, 1967.
Two dear bright eyes, a tender smile,
A loving heart that knew no guile,
Deep trust in God that all was right,
Her joy to make some other bright,
If sick or suffering one she knew,
Some gentle act of love she'd do,
No thought of self, but of the other,
I know He said "Well done daughter."
—Never forgotten by mother and father, sister Mary and brother Edwin.

SCERRI — In loving memory of a dear friend Lillian Scerri who passed away accidentally Jan. 13, 1967.
Loving and kind in all her ways,
Upright and just to the end of her days,
Sincere and true in her heart and mind,
Beautiful memories she left behind.
—Always remembered, Hilda.

Household Water Rate Increased 43 Cents

The Belleville Public Utilities Commission at their first meeting of 1971 yesterday, approved an increase in water rates, effective March 1.

The increase will add 43 cents a month to the basic minimum rate for every 1,000 gallons.

The new minimum rate will be $3.23, up from $2.85 and, as a spokesman for the PUC explained, "is a basic charge based on consumption of approximately 5,000 gallons per month . . . whether you use the water or not.

"The service is there to serve you, on standby. It's still pretty cheap," he said.

"It costs you an extra 43 cents for every five tons of water you use: a gallon of water weighing 10 pounds."

The approved raise is the first in two years, the last being enforced Aug. 1, 1969. The commission is hoping to maintain this rate until 1973.

"Two years is what we're aiming for."

The increase was considered necessary to cope with expenditures of $1,150,000 for a north-end reservoir, new feeder mains, and a pumping station. These interim measures, including the 2½ - million - gallon, ground - level reservoir, replace a planned major building program called to a halt when the OWRC proposed drawing water from the Great Lakes by 1975.

Also considered necessary expenditures are a new main from Sidney Street to North Front Street to service the new plaza and other local improvements forecast for a two - year period.

In a letter received by the commission, the OWRC announced that they would pay all debts incurred by the city for the new plant construction terminated by the provincial commission's new proposals.

Apple Growers Wary Of Import Competition

Two Quinte district orchardists, Harold Bonter of Ameliasburg and Eben James of Trenton, both directors on the Ontario Apple Growers Marketing Board, are attending this week's national apple growers conference in Toronto where problems confronting the industry are being discussed.

Mr. Bonter is director for Zone 8 taking in Prince Edward and Hastings while Mr. James represents the lakefront area extending from Trenton to Newcastle.

Apple growers from five provinces are in the midst of a two day discussion seeking ways to prevent the economic collapse of one of the country's oldest agricultural industries.

Delegates adopted recommendations for mutual action to combat economic factors which have destroyed foreign and domestic markets and left the industry in what one delegate called "a battle for survival of only the fittest".

The south shore of the Bay of Quinte and the lakefront area west of Trenton are the two big apple-growing areas in the Quinte district.

Earl Onderdonk, committee member on the provincial apple growers, said that most of the apples grown in the Quinte area are sold locally, but agreed that the market was being seriously affected by imports from other countries — mainly U.S.A., South Africa, Australia and New Zealand and some European countries.

Apples from USA (althougn of slightly lower quality) were selling at $1 per box lower than locally grown apples.

Even the apple juice market was being flooded by imports, according to Mr. Onderdonk. He said apple juice from Bulgaria was being shipped into Canada in concentrated form in 300-pound containers and after being reconstituted, was selling at a lower price than the locally produced product.

Orchardists in many countries were highly subsidized with apples being imported into Canada at lower prices.

A. E. Calkin, manager of Scotian Gold Co-Operatives, said in a paper prepared for the conference that the federal government could help the industry by requiring the use of apple-based alcohol in liquor, face lotions and perfumes.

He also advocated a "school lunch plan," already in use in the United States, to provide a state-supplied apple to school children. The plan might be extended to provide fruit for the infirm and the needy, he suggested.

Mr. Calkin also said the federal govenment should include apple products in any future food programs conducted by external aid offices.

Campbellford Council Sets Up Committees

CAMPBELLFORD — The inaugural meeting of Campbellford municipal council was held Jan. 11. Mrs. F. M. Rutherford is the only new member of council.

In his inaugural address, Mayor Morley Tanner asked council to establish a planning board on a two year basis to take the place of the former welfare committee, now a county responsibility.

Council members were guests of Campbellford Rotary Club at its noon luncheon, and met again in the evening.

Committees appointed and their members are: finance, Reeve Locke, Councillors Newman and Machesney; road and bridge, Councillors Sharp, Reeve Locke and Councillor Westlake; police committee, Councillors Westlake Murray and Deputy Reeve Dunk; property committee, Councillors Machesney, Newman and Rutherford; fire, water and light, Councillors Murray, Sharp and Rutherford; planning, Deputy Reeve Dunk, Reeve Locke and Councillor Westlake; industrial committee, Councillor Newman, Deputy Reeve Dunk and Councillor Sharp; legal committee, Councillors Rutherford, Murray and Machesney.

Council made a grant of $300 to help defray the expenses of a Christian Evangelism Crusade to be conducted Feb. 28 to March 7 by Barry Moore under the sponsorship of the Campbellford Ministerial Association.

Because of complaints of citizens that expansion joints on the new bridge are slippery, the county engineer is adding welding beads. Next summer more permanent adjustments will be made.

Council will give $600 for winter maintenance of the bridge.

Council passed a by-law to borrow $250,000 until 1971 taxes are received.

Because snowmobile owners are planning co-operative action on control of the machines, council decided to defer action on the matter.

Taxi operator Neil Taylor had his license renewed to operate two vehicles.

New appointments made by council to organizations were: Lake Ontario Development Association, Councillor Newman; arena board, Deputy Reeve H. Dunk, Councillor Machesney, Jack Torrance; hospital board, Councillor Murray; recreation committee, Councillor Westlake and Reeve Locke; conservation authority, Councillor Newman; local Court of Revision, Reeve Locke, Deputy Reeve Dunk, Councillors Sharp, Murray and Westlake.

Traffic Light Timing That Way on Purpose

There's a logical reason for most everything.

Take, for example, the apparently simple matter of timing the walk signals at signalized street intersections.

Monday the city traffic committee considered the complaint of a downtown professional man who wanted to know why the walk signal at the corner of Front and Bridge Streets was set so as to divide the green light time for autos.

He felt it would be simpler and much more practical to have the walk signal set before the green light for vehicles and thus reduce the waiting time for pedestrians.

But City Engineer Wilbur Purcell said there was a reason for the present timing of the walk signals at the four corners.

The reason that some south bound cars on Front Street were allowed to pass through the intersection before the walk signal came on was to help clear out cars and thus avoid excessive back-ups of vehicular traffic.

If stopped traffic built up too much it would interfere with the exit from the municipal offstreet parking lot, the engineer said.

The committee was told that already since the opening of the new Dundas Street bridge there had been a marked change in the Front Street traffic patterns and lights at the four corners had been recycled to provide for better traffic movement.

Police Chief Douglas T. Crosbie said that when the city's new traffic control system goes into operation next spring the possibility of an "all-red" pattern for pedestrian crossings at the four corners would be considered.

Y Plans Open House

The Belleville Family YMCA will open its doors Sunday afternoon to the public when it displays itself in an open house.

And it's all free.

According to YMCA officials, the doors will be open for public inspection from two to 5.30.

The YMCA staff, board members and instructors will be available to meet interested spectators and there will be demonstrations of judo, trampoline, life saving and swimming.

The public will be able to enjoy a swim in the pool, slides, displays and refreshments. There will be a draw for a free family membership.

Snow Expected

From mukluks to bikinis — that is almost the extreme to which the weather is influencing the Quinte area in its changeability.

Last night saw record-breaking temperatures in some areas near Belleville as the thermometer dipped well below zero in all parts of the Quinte District.

But the trend is not going to continue, according to the moody weatherman. Tomorrow temperatures should rise to just about freezing point.

It was cold outside last night!

In Belleville itself the mercury dropped to 22 degrees below zero. Trenton reported 20 degrees below and stated that that was a record for this date, the preceeding low point for the day being minus nine in 1957.

In Tweed and Palmer Rapids, the mercury dipped even farther, to 33 degrees below, tying a record for the date set, again, in 1957.

Other more northern centres reported below zero markings from 20 to 32 degrees as well.

But all those cars that would not start this morning and all those frozen earlobes should be well thawed by tomorrow.

The duty forecaster predicted an end to the shortlived cold snap later today and the appearance of a snowstorm, expected to dump from two to four inches of snow in the Belleville and Quinte area.

The mercury is expected to move up the thermometer until it registers 15 degrees above this afternoon. Then the snow will start to fall and the temperature will again climb to near freezing point overnight and tomorrow. Snow is expected to continue overnight.

Friday will see snow flurries and a colder trend with low points of 10 degrees above zero. Saturday is expected to be clear and cold with a low of five degrees.

And then Sunday the mercury will rise again to a low point of 20 degrees. More snow is also predicted for the Sabbath.

P.M.'s Progress

One of the saving graces of international politics for those concerned is the travel involved, as well as the exotic food and entertainment that go hand in hand with the diplomatic scene.

Prime Minister Trudeau's itinerary for example has included a visit to the ancient ruins of Taxila in Pakistan, on a rocky hillside once visited by Alexander the Great (typically, our vigorous modern conqueror of a prime minister led a straggling and probably perspiring group up the hill), and on to India for sightseeing in the Agra and Benares areas, a camel ride, a boat cruise on the Ganges and driving a locomotive at a diesel engine works.

Then there were the niceties of diplomatic etiquette with Mr. Trudeau, senior in office to Prime Minister Heath of Britain, in the place of honor on Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's right at a recital of classical Indian dances and music. And it was reported that Mr. Trudeau leaned forward in his seat to watch leading dancer Yamini Krishnamurthi in a dance depicting an Indian milkmaid offering her love to Lord Krishna, the most popular of Hindu gods.

How ludicrous, in the midst of such pleasant sidelights of the political art, to have to contemplate the possibility of the breakup of the British Commonwealth. But as we have noted already in recent days, we do not think this unique conglomerate of nations is about to dissolve. To ensure that it does not however, it might be a good idea if Mr. Trudeau could also hold some prior talks with the black African leaders who pose the threat of a split over the issue of British arms to South Africa. Since Britain appears adamant and will sell the arms as planned, the black African states will have to be persuaded that they are not for the purpose of perpetuating white domination in South Africa but for countering the Soviet naval presence in the Indian Ocean.

Perhaps there should be less talk, less politicking and more presentation of the arts of the different countries, as described above. The Africans should bring along their dance troupes and the Canadian delegation a group like Les Feux Follets. They would go far toward melting the ice.

As it is, Canada received a salutary reminder — through Prime Minister Trudeau — that we are on delicate ground when it comes to counselling other countries about race relations. In the holy city of Varanasi, demonstrators were outside his hotel drawing attention to racial discrimination against Indians in Canada. Nobody seemed certain of the authenticity of such allegations, but Mr. Trudeau admitted that "there are some injustices" in this country and it was the government's obligation to correct them.

The Prime Minister has this quality among many, that he is ready to admit to this country's inadequacies. It is a quality that stands him in good stead wherever he goes and it bodes well for Canada and the Commonwealth as a whole in these coming days of important discussion.

Children's Lib!

Children, and especially 8-year-olds, are no fools, as Toronto columnist Richard Needham indicated in a recent column.

He wrote: "I loved a recent letter in The Star by Caroline Sevigny of Willowdale, 'I am eight years old. But there is this thing I do not understand. When children like myself go into a store for a treat, or when I'm at the movies and go out of my seat for a drink or something and get in line, I wait for my turn. By the time it is my turn some grownups are behind me. I get pushed aside. The person at the counter ignores me. Children are treated like third-class people. There is only one thing to do: start a Children's Lib.' "

Well, young Caroline has a point. At the same time we have seen children of her age push their way to store counters ahead of adults. Maybe they feel it is the only way they can get attention, so adults should notice children when they are waiting for attention in shops and allow them their proper turn.

One thing that disgusts us is the parent who bawls out his or her children in public. We see it done all too often and for the most trifling of reasons.

UK Braces for Metric Conversion Headache

By FRED COLEMAN

LONDON (APM) — In tradition-minded Britain, the change to the metric system is going down like a ton of—oops, sorry —like 1,016 kilograms of bricks.

Somehow the pint-of-beer man cannot see himself ordering 0.568 litres of his favorite brew at the local pub.

Even the curvy model who appears in government posters promoting metric figures is unconvinced by the campaign. In the poster, Della Freenan's ample, bikini-clad dimensions are given in centimetres as 914-610-914. The caption advises Britons to "think metric."

Miss Freenan, however, still prefers to think of her measurements in inches as 36-24-36. Centimetres, she says, "sound so enormous that it is rather unflattering."

Public opinion polls show 57 per cent of the British people oppose the metric system and less than one-third understand it.

Yet like it or not, Britain is already half way through a 10-year changeover from the pounds, pints and inches of the imperial system of weights and measures to the metres, litres and grams of the metric system. A milestone in the process comes in February when Britain converts its money to decimal currency.

By 1975, the shape, weight and volume of just about everything in Britain is supposed to be metric. Fahrenheit temperatures must freeze away to centigrade. Calories will literally disappear as a unit of measure. Housewives must throw away their cookbooks, drivers their maps, some industrialists their machines and all must buy new ones for the new measurements. The farmer must turn his acres into hectares and cause litres to grow where bushels grew before. The list is endless.

The cost of the conversion is expected to be more than $12 billion.

The government's metrication board lists these basic reasons:

1. The metric system is easier than the present hodgepodge of measures such as the yard, based in the 15th century on the distance from a man's nose to his fingertips; the stone, which is 14 pounds, and the hundredweight, which actually weighs 112 pounds. Metric units, such as the decimal system, divide more easily by tens and hundreds. Instead of 12 inches to the foot and three feet to the yard, there are round numbers.

2. Britain is an island nation which survives on foreign trade. In the next 20 years some 90 per cent of world trade will be conducted in metric measures. Britain must go metric and join the overwhelming majority of its suppliers, customers and competitors, whether or not it becomes a member of the European Common Market.

Education becomes a serious problem.

Early this year a London hospital nurse gave a baby boy 10 times the dose of medicine prescribed, 0.25 milligrams instead of 0.025 milligrams. The baby died.

Hospitals, schools and businesses are teaching mathematics all over again to avoid such mistakes. Nearly half the nation's primary schools now teach a new subject—metrication.

Despite a mass education program, including films, records, poster campaigns and pamphlets mailed to every home, many Britons expect total confusion to reign Feb. 15, the day Britain adopts decimal currency.

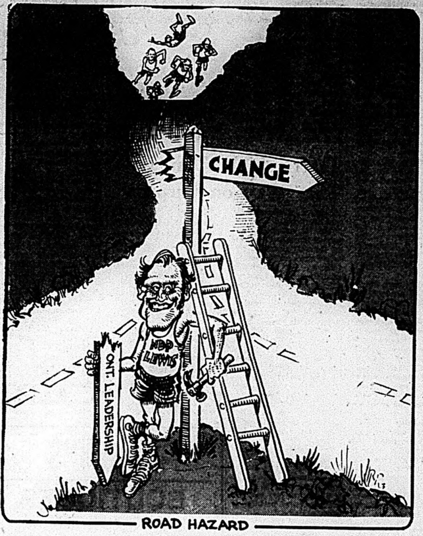
Pounds will no longer be divided into 20 shillings, each worth 12 pence. Instead, a pound will be worth 100 new pence.

White collar workers whose job it is to change money are already shuddering at the inevitable delays, confusion and arguments sure to arise when the money system changes. Postal and bank clerks, tax collectors and others have put in bids for extra pay—"worry money"—to cope with the extra headache of converting to decimal currency.

The change is going to cost money for just about everybody, a major reason behind the widespread opposition. For one thing the switch to decimal coinage will eliminate the old penny without replacing it, thus affecting prices.

Generally, export-oriented larger businesses favor metrication. Some say they can keep the changeover cost to less than one per cent of their overhead. Smaller businesses dealing with the home market resent the added costs metrication imposes on them. So do firms that must make large equipment changes.

To ease the burden, the government is converting gradually with industries that welcome the changeover making the earlier moves. One of these was the construction industry which badly needed modernization and standardization of practices.



ROAD HAZARD

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Jan. 13, 1971 . . .

The Privy Council announced in London 24 years ago today — in 1947 — that the Canadian Parliament was within its rights in passing legislation making the Supreme Court of Canada the final court of appeal. Until then Canadians had to take their cases to the Privy Council.

1953 — The USSR announced a purge of Jewish doctors.

1949 — PEI banned margarine.

1915 — An earthquake at Avezzano, Italy, killed 29,970.

1892 — Four hundred and fourteen persons drowned when the Namchow was wrecked in the China Sea.

1871 — Le Regiment de Joliette was organized.

1848 — The Hudson's Bay Co. acquired Vancouver Island.

1837 — A $1-million fire destroyed most of the business district of Saint John, N.B.

1813—British ships blockaded Chesapeake Bay.

Some Leadership Questions

The Trentonian

If William Davis wins the Ontario Progressive Conservative leadership, what then? Shall we have department of education methods applied to all matters?

If so will that mean centralized authority, with more high paid bureaucrats, and a system increasingly remote from the people?

Can the Davis policy as premier be substantially different from the Davis policy as minister of education?

When questions of policy are being discussed, these questions might well be answered.

Would McKeough as leader pursue the policies which have marked centralized assessment, with its looming unrealistic market value assessment, and consequent higher taxation?

Would McKeough as premier follow the centralization of government policy of McKeough in municipal affairs? Would democracy take a further decline as policies were announced with a take it or leave it outlook?

When policies are discussed these seem like matters worth considering.

The national poor peoples' conference is the clearest indication that there is need for organization among them.

The conflicting attitudes on details are submerged by the very real problems which the poor in Canada, as elsewhere in the world, must face when they deal with bureaucracy. It matters little whether the bureaucracy is that of the federal government or even the smallest hamlet in the country.

Without access to knowledge and experience the poor are mostly left to their lot in life. Society, through its many manifestations simply is not geared to serving the poor despite valiant efforts at various programs.

The force which is most needed is that of manpower bent on the eradication of the severe problems faced by the poor. Thus the weekend conference in Toronto was of immense importance because it is only through the poor and those associated with them in tenants' and citizens' associations that a united front can be formed to bring about the necessary changes which will improve their lot.

The obvious rough edges at the corners, displayed at the conference, are but a further indicator that the poor, more than any other segment in our society, must work harder to overcome them.

Trend Toward Youth in Ontario Politics

Brockville Recorder and Times

The "youth revolution" in provincial politics in Canada appears to be gaining ground. In most provincial elections recently, the men elected premier have been definitely on the young side — Premier Bourassa in Quebec and Campbell in Prince Edward Island are both 36. Premiers Hatfield in New Brunswick and Schreyer in Manitoba are in their early 40s. Now it appears that Ontario, too, is to fall in with this trend.

It comes as a bit of a shock to hear men in their 50s described as the "Old Guard" but that was the term used by Frederick Cass, Speaker of the Ontario Legislature and Member for Grenville - Dundas, when he announced the other day that he would not run in the next election, expected this year.

"This particular parliament was one that got caught in the change of the times, and I'm referring to members of all parties. It was very noticeable that they were not conditioned for the general change in thinking, in morals. I would think there is going to be a new look in the house after the election," Mr. Cass said.

Mr. Cass' decision against running again — at the age of 57 — was not an isolated event. Already four other prominent Conservatives have announced that they are stepping down and other members of all parties are reportedly thinking along the same lines. Among those definitely leaving the Legislature are Highways Minister George Gomme; Edward Dunlop, the blind war veteran; Ada Pritchard, the woman member from Hamilton; and W. Erskine Johnson, of Carleton riding. There have been rumors that Attorney - General Wishart and Public Works Minister Simonett are also contemplating retirement.

Mr. Cass says he believes that the "Old Guard" in Ontario politics is on the way out and that after the next election, the legislature will be filled with "younger members more attuned to the demands of the '70s." Ontario's next premier seems certain to be a young man. The top contenders to replace John Robarts as Conservative leader are 41 - year - old William Davis and 47-year-old Bert Lawrence. Liberal leader Robert Nixon is in his early 40s and the NDP's Stephen Lewis is 32. Mr. Cass' view of a Legislature full of "youngsters" after the next election is probably a pretty accurate forecast.

Two hockey teams in connection with Bridge Street Church Sunday School, the "Never Sweats" and the "Ivory Domes" played a fast game at the arena, the result being 3 to 2 in favor of the former team. During the first period no goals were scored. In the next period Townsend scored two goals, and Ritchie Arnott scored once for the "Never Sweats", and Strachan scored two goals for the "Ivory Domes". George and Curry played well in the nets.

Epitaph for the Beatles

Jack Batten in
The Globe and Mail

The Beatles were in almost every way originals. "They were fast talking, jiving, laughing," Mick Jagger said of the Beatles recently, "and they weren't behaving the way everybody else behaved." And now they seem, as a group, somehow old - fashioned and out - of - date. Now McCartney's court action comes as a relief, not a tragedy, and we're pleased to turn the Beatles aside.

But they had their marvellous day, especially in their music. . .

Beatlemania set in, but the Beatles themselves were already moving on to new musical territory. Lennon and McCartney were influenced by, and in turn influenced, Bob Dylan. Thus the Beatles went into their folk rock period. They wrote songs with splendidly tight, succinct lyric poetry, full of social consciousness and more countrified rhythms and harmonies.

Folk rock opened their minds to a dozen new influences, and in their third phase they took on a tremendous eclecticism. Ballads (as in Michele), baroque (Yesterday), the East (Norwegian Wood) — they all turned up in the Beatles' bursting new music, and the period culminated in one superb album, Rubber Soul.

In their last albums, particularly the superb Abbey Lane, they applied all their skills and magic to good old rock'n'roll, and they made it something fresh, new and shining.

And that, if McCartney had his way, marked their final statement. The last time all four Beatles worked together in a recording studio dates back more than two years, an occasion celebrated in the film Let It Be. Each Beatle has, of course, put out solo albums, but they have been, by and large, musical disasters. McCartney's was lightweight, Starr's incompetent, Lennon's Narcissistic; only Harrison's left an impression of solo strength and talent.

Lennon's most recent solo album did, however, contribute what may be the epitaph to the Beatles. The album was recorded early in the fall of 1970, long before McCartney's legal action calling for the Beatles dissolution was begun. But in the lyrics of one song called God, Lennon seems to anticipate and applaud the end of the great group:

The dream is over
What can I say?
The dream is over
Yesterday
I was the dreamweaver
But now I'm reborn
I was the walrus
But now I'm John
And so dear friends
You just have to carry on
The dream is over.

Ma Si-Hon, Violin and Tung Kwong-Kwong, Piano

Chinese Duo to Appear

For the first time in many years, the Community Concert Association has had to bring in substitute artists because of the illness of a scheduled performer.

The husband and wife team of Ma Si-Hon, violinist and Tung Kwong-Kwong, pianist, will appear Thursday night at BCI auditorium at 8:30 p.m.

They replace Benno and Sylvia Rabinof, whose appearance was cancelled due to Mr. Rabinof's illness.

Ma Si-Hon and Tung Kwong-Kwong were both celebrated musicians in China. They came singly to the United States in the last years of the 1940s, settled in Boston and began to appear in duo recital in 1954, the year that they were married.

They have played at the Berlin and Salzburg festivals and are making their sixth successive North American tour. They also operate a music school for youngsters in the Chinese community in New York city.

Mazinaw Start Proposed

Members of the Mazinaw Property Owners Association are worried over the pollution problem and feel that the Mazinaw Lake area should be the starting point of any provincial program to control pollution in recreational areas.

David L. Harcourt of Belleville, chairman of the pollution control committee of the Mazinaw Property Owners, in a letter to Ontario Premier John Robarts, says it is the contention of many of his members that the place to start anti-pollution measures on a watercourse is at its headwaters rather than at the point of outflow.

He said he would rather see money and effort devoted to the initiation of a program to control water pollution caused by the outflow of septic tank wastes and other effluent sources which are contaminating recreational waters.

Half a million dollars was spent by the Ontario government last summer to visit 4,700 cottages in mid-Ontario recreational areas to detail each individual waste system and it is proposed that another 10,000 cottages be visited next summer at a cost of $1 million.

A meeting for discussion of pollution control possibilities is scheduled to be held in Toronto on Thursday at the Public Health Engineering Service in Toronto.

Attending the meeting will be the representatives of the pollution committee of the Mazinaw Property Owners and government department personnel.

Only Anzacs Back Heath

Trudeau was seen off at the Delhi airport by Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, with whom he discussed Tuesday the threat to the future of the Commonwealth

Trudeau clearly reached a wide measure of agreement with Indian leaders on many topics—including the desire of both countries to prevent a breakup of the Commonwealth on the arms issue.

Heath wants to provide the South Africans with naval arms to help counter what he says is growing Soviet naval threat in the Indian Ocean. Trudeau and Mrs. Gandhi feel there is no immediate Soviet threat in the area.

Mrs. Gandhi is reported to have told Trudeau during private talks that if Britain does decide to sell arms to South Africa, not only could the Commonwealth break up, but peace in Africa and the rest of the world would be endangered.

Britain is believed to have support only from Australia and New Zealand on the arms question. New Zealand is reported to be reluctant.

Trudeau twice mentioned the possibility of Canadian withdrawal from the Commonwealth Tuesday.

He told students at Nehru University that if a certain number of states—he did not say how many—withdraw, a chain reaction might set in. In such a case Canada might "want to be as pure as the others."

At a news conference he said that if a sufficient number of countries withdraw, "India, like Canada and like many others, would be in a difficult position if this chain reaction were to begin."

Informants said Trudeau was indicating that Canada would not continue as a member of any all-white Commonwealth or even a larger group which would have no significant role or purpose.

Trudeau said Canadian and Indian representatives will seek "an accommodation between diverging views" at the Singapore conference.

As for British fears of a Soviet buildup in the Indian Ocean, Trudeau said:

"Canada is far removed from this area of action but my reflections are that the threat, if it exists, certainly is not immediate

"In the long run, I must confess I can't get too excited, because it seems to me that in any kind of major war it (the Indian Ocean) wouldn't be a telling factor in the destinies of mankind.

"If there is a real war between the major powers, I suspect that atom bombs would be going off in other parts of the world and not too many will be wasted in the Indian Ocean.

"If the Soviet Union were to develop naval strength in any significant way in this theatre . . . the opposing force would be more likely to come from the United States than from the United Kingdom or South Africa."

Senior delegation officials from five continents met today to map out the conference agenda, with African countries certain to press for an early hearing on their objections.

The African lobby for priority discussion on the whole range of southern Africa problems will be met by counter-moves for attention to Asian affairs at this first Commonwealth conference held in Asia.

Asian leaders have made it clear that while the issue of British arms for South Africa will remain in the spotlight they want Asian affairs discussed just as thoroughly.

Trudeau Criticized

shows sympathy with the African attitude. . . .

"Canada and even Australia are fed up with being Americanized. Why don't they start linking their trade with the black Commonwealth?"

The Times says few Commonwealth leaders will be happy if Heath simply tells them he is not yet ready to say whether Britain will sell naval ships to South Africa.

Such leaders as Trudeau "will be left deeply disturbed about the future of the Commonwealth," The Times predicts.

The British intention to sell maritime arms to South Africa goes against the advice of the "highly influential" Canadian prime minister and the similarly-qualified Prime Minister Indira Gandhi of India, the paper maintains.

"It is surely not in Britain's own national interests to incur so much ill in return for so small a gain as the sale of a few frigates," The Times adds.

OPP Constable Dies in Wreck

NAPANEE (Staff) — An OPP officer stationed here was killed at 10:30 yesterday morning when Canadian National Railways westbound extra freight 5091 sliced his late-model car in half, strewing debris for more than 80 feet from the 4-track level crossing to the north of town, on Highway 41.

Constable Jan W. Lutgendorff, 32, of RR 7, Napanee, off duty at the time, was returning to town in his private car from the Napanee OPP Detachment offices when the accident occurred.

Napanee Police Chief J. J. Paquette reported that Constable Lutgendorff was pronounced dead by the coroner when his body was extracted from the wreckage.

No autopsy was performed but an inquest will be held.

He was to have written his examination for promotion to corporal yesterday afternoon.

Born in Holland, he settled in the Stirling area. A 7-year veteran of the force, he was previously stationed in Sharbot Lake.

He is survived by his wife Betty and two daughters, Amey, 8, and Angela, 6.

Turnip and Apple Casserole Serves Six

By MARY MOORE

The fault lies with cooks if their children wrinkle their noses when turnip is served for dinner. This economical, flavourful Canadian vegetable can be dressed up to make it into party fare. I did just that and today I am giving you two turnip (or rutabaga if you prefer) recipes that you should make and clip and file in your vegetable folder.

TURNIP AND APPLE CASSEROLE (serves 6)

1 medium-large turnip
1 tsp. salt (first amount)
1 tbsp. butter (first amount)
1½ cups pared, sliced apple (3 medium)
¼ cup light brown sugar (first amount)
1-8 tsp. cinnamon
2 tbsps. butter (second amount; room temperature)
1-3 cup light brown sugar (second amount)
1-3 cup flour
. tsp. salt (second amount)

Wash, slice, pare and cook turnip with first amount of salt in boiling water to barely cover, covered, until tender. Drain and mash well with 1tbsp. butter. Spread half in bottom of shallow casserole. Mix together apples, brown sugar (first amount) and cinnamon and spread half over turnip. Repeat. Mix together to make a crumbly mixture the 2 tbsps. butter, 1-3 cup light brown sugar, flour and second amount of salt. Sprinkle all over top. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. 35 minutes OR at 350 deg. Fahr. for 1 hour.

CREAMED DICED TURNIP (serves 6)

4 cups diced (½") turnip
4 tbsps. butter or margarine
3 tbsps. PLUS 1 tsp. flour
½ tsp. salt.
½ tsp. MSG
⅛ tsp. pepper
⅛ tsp. nutmeg
2 tsps. sugar
2 cups hot milk

Cook turnip dice in boiling water till tender. Drain. Make sauce by blending butter, flour, salt, MSG, pepper, nutmeg and sugar and stirring in hot milk until thick. Add drained, diced turnip and heat through. This holds well or reheats in top of double boiler if you want to prepare it in advance. This is one of the best turnip recipes I know and the children ate it and liked it.

WEDNESDAY

A Tempting Combination

Canadian turnips are economical and a low-calorie vegetable. To add to its dividends it is high in Vitamin C. So try Mary Moore's new recipe for Tunip and Apple Casserole and give a turn and nip to your dinner.

Successful Living

Counselling Aids in Future

By DORIS CLARK

I get a constant stream of letters from young peole who are trying to decide on their life's work. The vocational counselling we have in our Canadian schools can sort out a person's aptitudes and talents and point the way toward the type of higher education he can take. For that we are grateful.

But counselling of this kind cannot be expected to do more than point a person in the right general direction. So many things are involved in the choosing of a career — personality, intelligence level, finances, family set-up and responsibilities.

Part time work in the real world for a while, or a summer of employment at something he finds interesting, can be far more effective in helping a student choose.

Several students I know have taken a year off between high school and university in order to work and find out more about themselves and the work world.

Dear Doris: I'm 54, not too fat in general, but I find that my legs are getting heavy and my abdomen thick. Yet I haven't much flesh on my arms and chest. When I do gain weight it settles lower down.

I do exercises every day but they don't seem to help. Perhaps they are not the right ones.

I keep house on a farm so I don't have much time to sit around. — Wrong Shape.

Dear Shape: Let's face it, as we grow older the weight does seem to redistribute itself in the wrong spots. Heredity has something to do with just where the extra pounds land.

The leaflet "Be Figure Perfect" gives exercises for chest and shoulders, tummy and thighs, and they will help to rearrange things. Then there's another good tummy flattener called the "pump":

Lie flat on your back on the floor and lift the feet to a 30-degree angle. Hold them there for 10 seconds, then raise to a 45-degree angle and hold again. Lower very slowly

• • •

Dear Doris: I am a widow of 21 and want to ask about wedding plans. I think it should be small and very quiet, and I was wondering if I could have a home wedding I would have the minister's wife play the piano and after the ceremony we would have pictures taken at the studio.

Then back to the house for a quiet lunch with my parents, my two daughters, the minister and his wife plus our attendants.

Would it be proper to have the minister proose a toast or just when could we have a little wine? If there is a toast, does the groom reply, and does the bride drink the toast? — Widow.

Dear Widow: My leaflet "The Second Wedding" gives you some pointers for just your kind of occasion. A home wedding can be lovely.

Right after the lunch serve the wine or punch. The minister or a family friend (perhaps one of the attendants) prooses a toast to the bride which all but the bride drink. The groom replies, and if he would like to he may then propose one to the bridal attendants.

The main thing is to keep the atmosphere happy, informal, relaxed.

(Leaflets mentioned by Doris are available to readers for 10 cents and a large six - cent - stamped, self-addressed envelope, unless otherwise specified.)

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

not this

Daughter: "All the girls in my crowd get to have car dates if they have boy friends old enough to have licences to drive? Why can't I go with them?"

Mother: "Well, I don't know if the boys are careful drivers — but I guess you can go this time. . . ."

Mother: "Dad will drive you and Max to the party if his parents can't. Fourteen is too young to be going with the older crowd on car dates. Most of the 16-year-olds get to stay out quite late and we want you home by 11."

Parents have not only the right, but the duty, to decide if an activity is safe or wise — and to refuse to permit their young children to participate.

Expensive Designers Cut Prices for the First Time

NEW YORK (AP) — This spring, women will be able to pick up a Norman Norell dress, starting at about $550 to $600 — instead of $700.

Coats, slacks and suits will be reduced accordingly.

Norell, among the most expensive designers in the business, has cut his prices for the first time.

"I'm delighted," said the 70-year-old Norell after his spring show Monday.

"Our prices were getting terribly high," he said. He called the cost cut his "answer to boutique collections."

The reductions were made possible by a change to speedier production techniques. Workers will be paid by each piece they complete, instead of by the week.

"We're not going to give up quality," said Norell, adding that the new plan will allow for more accounts.

Sure enough, Norell's day clothes were as luxurious looking as ever, but he has turned to the tailored sporty look in a big way. Simple, open-collar blouses tucked into poker straight skirts a few inches above the ankles. These were covered with soft wrap - and - tie jackets — among Norell's favorites. He called them "little jersey sweaters" and put them over slacks as well.

Colors were clear and solid — reds, blues, greens, and white and black.

Big applause came for his evening clothes — cut full instead of straight-like his dresses with full taffeta skirts, in school girl ribbon plaids.

His embroidered, pleated dresses were the ultimate fullness and they also remain the ultimate in price, probably more than $2,000.

WEDDING

GOGGIN — VINTNER

On Saturday, Jan. 2, 1971, Rev. Young officiated at the candlelight ceremony in Glebe United Church, Toronto when Miss P. J. Vintner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Vintner, Keighley, England was united in marriage to Charles H. Goggin, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Goggin, formerly of Elgin - Albert County, New Brunswick.

The bride was given in marriage by her former employer Mr. Ben Corke of Belleville. She came here from England 15 years ago and was a window dresser during this period. She wore a white floor length wool crepe dress trimmed with white mink with matching cloak with white mink trim around the hood. She carried a bouquet of white carnations interspersed with golden sprayed holly and clustered gold cones.

The maid of honor was Miss Meave McKinstey of Toronto who wore a pant dress of green and gold brocade and carried a bouquet of flowers mingled with golden holly.

Don DelGreco attended the bridegroom, while the ushers were Lee Goggin and Barry Grey, all of Toronto.

Ann Landers

Hair Styles Conceal Identity of Youths

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have nothing against long hair, sideburns, beards, and moustaches, but I do wish kids who have gone in for these radical changes in appearance would reintroduce themselves when they encounter adults who haven't seen them for a year or two.

This past week I was embarrassed three times by friends of my son who came up to me and I did not recognize them. One had grown a full beard and moustache. His hair was down to his shoulders. The last time I saw the boy he was pink-cheeked and had a crewcut. Another lad had his long hair tied in a ponytail. He, too, had grown a moustache. He was wearing steel-rimmed glasses and a wide brim hat that covered his face.

ANN LANDERS

Don't these kids realize how different they look? One of the boys hinted that I had passed him up on purpose.

Please print my letter and take us older folks off the spot. Thank you. — HELLO MR. WUTZYERNAME.

DEAR HELLO: Here's your letter and I second the motion. It has happened to me too. Incidentally, it's good manners to identify yourself by name when you encounter someone you haven't seen recently, even if you haven't grown a beard or a moustache. It can save embarrassment for both parties.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a divorcee with a crushing problem. Three months ago I met a man who had many qualities my ex-husband lacked. We became very close. I saw Lew at least four times a week. We shared everything. I was sure he would ask him to marry him.

Last week the bomb fell. Lew said we were getting too serious and he wants to "cool it" and date other women. He hasn't called me in six days.

I can't get him off my mind. He's all I ever wanted. I am heartsick and lost. Don't tell me to forget him. I can't. What I need is some down-to-earth advice on how to get Lew to marry me. I'm counting on you. — JILTED IN CONTRA COSTA.

DEAR JILL: O.K. don't forget him. Sit around and cry a lot. Don't eat. Don't sleep. Play the role of the tragic reject. Get people to feel sorry for you. After a while you'll be as sought after as a case of small pox. Lew will run a mile when he sees you coming and you will have eliminated yourself from the picture permanently.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband owns his own business. His office is in our home. I do his bookkeeping and I answer the phone.

The telephone starts to ring as early as 6:00 a.m. It doesn't stop until midnight. I can stand the early morning and late night calls, but I cannot stand the calls that come during supper. This really drives me up the wall. My husband is a gentle soul who hates to cut people off, so of course everyone takes advantage of him. I don't understand how his customers can be so inconsiderate. Everywhere in America people eat supper between six and seven o'clock. (For the rich it's probably later.) Every night this week our supper has been spoiled by the telephone. Last night I put his spare ribs back in the oven three times. When he finally got ready to eat they were all dried out. What's the solution? — HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE IN RIVERSIDE.

DEAR H.B.P.: Ever hear of a wall jack? It disconnects your phone and this could be the solution for those 6:00 a.m. and midnight calls as well as the dinner interruptions.

Operation Results in 222-pound Weight Loss

EDMONTON (CP) — Farm wife Mary Vert lost 222 pounds—without going on a diet.

The method? A modified small-bowel-bypass operation.

The operation was performed at Edmonton's University hospital, one of more than 120 since 1964.

Dr. Peter Salmon, the surgeon who developed the method, said he believes the procedure produces the most lasting weight loss with minimum side effects.

Mrs. Vert, who had the operation three years ago, goes horseback riding, dances, swims and wears pant suits—things she'd never dream of doing when she weighed 376 pounds. Today she weighs 154 pounds.

"I feel so much better now," she said. "I have no backaches. I can work as long as I want to without being exhausted."

Mrs. Vert said she was always "overweight and clumsy" since she was 14 years old "when it was really important not to be."

She yearned to dance but couldn't.

"Now I really dance up a storm whenever I can."

Mrs. Vert lives on a farm 14 miles northeast of Lloydminster, Sask., 150 miles east of Edmonton on the Alberta-Saskatchewan boundary.

One of the major advantages, from her point of view but not necessarily from that of her husband, is that she now can walk into a store and buy clothes.

"It was hard at first, because I was so weak from the weight loss, but I had the support and sympathy of my whole family, and this is the way it has to be."

Dr. Salmon said that by bypassing or "shunting out" 80 to 90 per cent of the small intestine, normally 20 feet long, food stuffs, such as fat, are more slowly digested and in this way the calorie intake is curtailed.

"The bowel is excluded, but not removed, which allows it to remain idle and in this way there is the advantage that the normal intestine can be re-established if desired."

It has been necessary to reconnect only four of the 120 patients who have undergone the operation since 1964. Three had nausea which interfered with normal consumption of food and the fourth was returning home to India where the operation is not used.

The operation used here was established by extensive experience in the research lab and examination of the experience of a few other centres that have performed this type of surgery.

Dr. Salmon has operated on patients from 16 to 65 years of age. Cause of obesity usually is overeating. But each body works differently and overeating is not always the cause.

"Observation shows that there are tendencies in almost all of the patients to maintain a loss of weight, initially induced by the operation, during the first year up to the third. But this weight loss may continue up to four years and then stabilize."

Two-thirds of the patients now are within 20 pounds of their ideal weight. Nine patients have had pregnancies since the operation with no difficulties. An odd sidelight to this was that all gained less weight during their pregnancies than most women usually do.

Mrs. Vert and her husband, Gerald, have five children ranging in age from six to 21 and three foster boys aged 4, 3 and seven months.

She has always been active. She milks cows at 6 a.m., stacks bales of hay, tends her own garden, does her own preserving and food freezing.

Before the operation she was bothered constantly by backaches.

"I was desperate. I tried every diet going, but then I would lose weight for a week. One big Sunday meal and I would gain more than I had lost during the week."

Want to Quit Smoking? ---Living in Newfoundland Might Help

By ART JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Newfoundland's economic climate is unfavorable to cigarette smokers.

In fact, Newfoundlanders now pay up to 35 per cent more for cigarettes than do smokers in British Columbia, where cigarettes are cheapest and the provincial tax is lowest.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press found that cigarette prices vary widely from province to province, depending on provincial taxes and competition among wholesalers and retailers.

Cigarette retail prices are going up by one cent a package or more in all provinces this month. The major cigarette manufacturers raised their prices to wholesalers in December.

In some cases only the increase was passed on to the consumer. but in others additional charges were added. The price increase was about one cent a package at the manufacturers' level but for consumers it is often two cents a package.

Wholesalers and retailers cite increases in rent and other costs of doing business.

The price for a pack of 20 now is 60 cents in Newfoundland compared with prices as low as 47 cents in Vancouver. The pack of 25 costs up to 73 cents in St. John's while the large pack can be bought for 59 cents in Vancouver.

The cost to wholesalers—including federal taxes—works out to about 35 cents a pack of 20. Transportation costs will affect the price delivered to wholesalers. Duty-free outlets, such as airport concessions, pay about 12 cents for a pack of 20.

Denis Sullivan of the Halifax wholesale firm of C. E. Choat and Co. says Maritime wholesalers have for years simply matched manufacturers' increases.

"But, this time," he says, "we're trying to get something, too."

Nova Scotia wholesalers increased cigarette prices to retailers by two cents for a package of 20. The manufacturers' price increase was 43 cents per 1,000 cigarettes, which works out to .86 cents for a pack of 20.

"I don't know whether we'll get away with it or not. Somebody may get weak knees and we'll have a price war."

B.C. is the only province which does not have a cigarette tax levied at the wholesale level. The province has a five-per-cent sales tax for most consumer items and this adds two cents to the price of a pack of 20. The low price of 47 cents includes the sales tax.

In other provinces a cigarette tax is added at the wholesale level and sales taxes may be added when the smoker buys a pack over the counter. In Newfoundland, for example, the sales tax is seven per cent.

The tax added at the wholesale level is 10 cents for a pack of 20 in Newfoundland; 6.4 cents in Alberta and Saskatchewan; and eight cents on a pack of 20 in the other provinces, except B.C.

Competition makes prices relatively low in Ontario and Quebec, considering that the provincial tax is higher than in B.C.

Mr. Sullivan says there is a price war in these two provinces.

Wholesalers in Toronto and Montreal describe their positions as "competitive."

Prison Suicide Rate Alarming

OTTAWA (CP)-Jean-Pierre Goyer, making his first comments in the Commons since replacing George McIlraith as solicitor-general, said Tuesday he was astounded to find out how many suicides were committed in federal penitentiaries last year.

The situation is "certainly cause for alarm," he said, and he has been looking into it.

There were 19 suicides in federal penitentiaries last year.

Asked by Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena) whether there would be an investigation into the whole penitentiary administrative system, Mr. Goyer said the system is not in an emergency situation and expressed the fullest confidence in his administrators.

Indian Fights Schools

OHSWEKEN, Ont. (CP) — An Indian father is challenging on religious-grounds the authority of Ontario's educational establishment to educate his children The family adheres to the Long House faith, the ancient religion of the Iroquois.

Alex Jamieson, a 39-year-old Cayuga Indian who lives in a rented farmhouse in this community eight miles southeast of Brantford. has kept his four school-age children at home since mid-October.

With his wife. May, 32, who was born a non-Indian but became one by marriage under provisions of the federal Indian Act, Mr. Jamieson has begun a fight he says he has little prospect of winning.

This week, he expects school officials to serve him with a notice ordering him to send the children to school. Mr. Jamieson says he will not obey the order.

"When I throw some feed into the trough and watch the pigs trying to grab as much as they can from each other, I think to myself: That is what they are trying to teach my children in school—an animal way of life."

Mr. Jamieson said he knows "it would be disastrous" for the provincial education department, which handles education of Indians under a system of per-capita grants from Ottawa, to "establish a precedent in our favor."

Mr. Jamieson, a part-time lecturer at the University of Buffalo in New York State, said he is prepared to go to jail in support of his beliefs.

The Long House religion stresses peace based on the teachings of an Indian prophet named Handsome Lake.

Townsend Writes Best-seller

LONDON (AP) — Peter Townsend, whose romance with Princess Margaret made news in the 1950s, is back in the headlines as a best-selling author.

His 455-page Duel of Eagles depicts the conflict between British and German airmen in the Second World War.

The book first appeared in France, where it sold well. The London edition, published at $6.60, is in its third printing. Next week Townsend will be in New York when Simon and Schuster bring out an American edition.

Townsend at 55 is still much like the slim and personable fellow who once captivated Margaret. The Queen's sister called off her romance with Group Capt. Townsend in 1956, and in 1960 became the bride of Anthony Armstrong-Jones, now Lord Snowdon.

Townsend married Marie-Luce Jamagne, an attractive Belgian tobacco heiress, in 1959, when she was 19.

Liberals Want Probe Into Layoffs, Strikes

TORONTO (CP) — A commission should be established to examine all layoffs, strikes, transfers and technological changes affecting employment in the province, says a provincial Liberal policy paper released Tuesday.

The paper, to be discussed at the party's policy conference Jan. 22-25, said the commission of representatives from the government, labor and management, "is the best method of alleviating problems caused by technological change."

The paper was released by Liberal Leader Robert Nixon who said it would be mandatory under this method that strikes, layoffs, plant transfers or shutdowns and technological changes be reported to the commission well in advance.

The commission would sit continuously and would attempt to negotiate settlements between disputing parties and would make its findings public, Mr. Nixon said.

"But it would not be given any arbitrary powers. What we lack now is any substantial initiative on the part of the provincial government in stepping into labor disputes and I think the commission would overcome this.

"The public interest can no longer tolerate long and disruptive labor disputes, characterized by lack of communication between the parties involved and an onlooking frustrated general public suffering as a result of a deadlock it is powerless to resolve."

Steel Mill Urged for North

GUELPH (CP) — A new steel mill proposed for a site near Lake Erie should be built in Northern Ontario instead, says Ian Deans.

The New Democratic Party member of the Ontario legislature for Wentworth, referring Tuesday to a new Steel Company of Canada plant proposed for Nanticoke, 30 miles southwest of Hamilton, told an education seminar:

"The whole unemployment picture in Northern Ontario is a major problen for the province and I see nothing happening to solve it."

Also speaking at the high school seminar were James Breithaup, Liberal MPP for Kitchener, and David Stevenson of Hamilton, substituting for Provincial Secretary Robert Welch.

Timber Stripped In Park

CALGARY (CP) — Lumber companies are stripping Wood Buffalo National Park in northern Alberta of much of its timber and the long-term leases under which they operate do not require them to plant replacement trees or stimulate regeneration, a provincial official said Tuesday.

George Rogers, a national parks regional forester, confirmed the statement and said lumber companies, after the Second World War and in the early 1960s, signed long-term timber leases with the government that do not require them to replace what they cut.

"We won't be making any more agreements like that."

However, the lease of Swanson Lumber Co., the one firm now working in the park, does not expire until 2007 and by then "I'd be surprised if they haven't taken all the lumber out," Mr. Rogers said.

Frank Ladouceur, Metis Association president at Fort Chipewyan, the closest settlement to the park in northeastern Alberta, said "there are areas of the park that have been stripped almost bald."

He said the firm has been taking about 15 million board feet of lumber out of the park during each of the last two years and plans to harvest as much as 20 million this year.

The provincial forestry official, who declined to be named, said the accepted practice in cases where reforestation is not feasible is to order the company to turn over the soil after the area has been cut to stimulate natural regrowth.

Davey Says Apathy Foe Of Media

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator Keith Davey (L—Ontario), chairman of a special study of information media in Canada, said Tuesday that the greatest threat to the free flow of information lurks in popular apathy about the state of the press and broadcasting.

"In my opinion, the so-called silent majority poses the greatest threat to freedom of the press," he told a meeting of the National Press Club. He suggested that public apathy might encourage erosions of freedom.

He defined the apathetic majority as "an alarmed populace, unable to sort out the challenge to society from those who report it"—a trend reflected in criticism of some reporting about the Quebec emergency late last year.

Speaking a month after publication of the three-volume report by his special Senate committee on the mass media, Senator Davey said the results he hoped for most would be sustained public interest in the state of the media along with more critical self-examination inside the news media themselves.

Senator Davey said he was responding to the question he has been asked most often since the report was published—what kind of action will the government take and when?

"I don't know what the government is going to do, but I am optimistic," he said.

But the response of the public and the media was more important than any action the government might take on such committee proposals as establishment of a loan fund for new publications, a review board to guard against excessive concentration of media ownership and the withdrawal of special tax privileges for advertisers in Time magazine and Reader's Digest.

"The real question is not what the government is going to do, but what are you going to do with this report?"

The Library Corner

By O. D.

VANCOUVER by Eric Nicol.

Vancouver is a city of great physical beauty and wealth. Already the city is noted for the number of talented persons it has given to the arts, including Mr. Nicol, newspaper columnist and author of this book. It is a witty, superbly documented chronicle of all aspects of Canada's most youthful city.

THE WARTIME JOURNALS OF CHARLES A. LINDBERGH by Charles A. Lindbergh.

The first few pages of his journals written 1938-45, reveal the breadth of Colonel Lindbergh's involvements and observation "I must teach my children to keep this civilization we are building from deadening their true senses" . . . Dinner at Lady Astor's home and ball afterwards. The King and Queen were there" It is a most engrossing diary.

THE EVADERS by Edmund Cosgrave.

The evaders are eight Canadian World War II airmen who either bailed out or came down with their planes over occupied Europe. Local sympathizers took them in, and through the complex network of the Resistance the men escaped. Their helpers usually ran greater risks than the airmen; once an evader was safely delivered out, his danger was over, while the collaborators would go back to repeat the mission for a dozen others. Nearly 30,000 helpers were caught and killed in France alone during the war.

SCHOOLING FOR YOUNG RIDERS by John Richard Young.

This book is, among other things, a true, subjective account of the selection, breaking, and schooling of one particular pony big enough to qualify as a small horse. It is a book primarily for young riders who aspire to become real horsemen and horsewomen. Much useful information is included on bits, saddles, seat, equine psychology and other aspects of horse-training.

THE GOOD NAMES by H. Montgomery Hyde.

The author presents an account of twelve cases of defamation which had been tried in English and Irish courts during the past century. The extraordinary characters involved include Oscar Wilde's mother, Liberace, Winston Churchill, Whistler and Ruskin.

BLUENOSE, QUEEN OF THE GRAND BANKS by Feenie Ziner.

Bluenose was the great Canadian schooner, which defeated all comers in the International Fishing Schooner Races. This book tells how Bluenose was built to be one of the fastest ships of her kind and how she earned her living by catching fish on the Grand Banks of Newfoundland. It describes her special relationship with the men who sailed her and relates her many brushes with disaster.

THE BRITISH — PORTRAIT OF A PEOPLE by Anthony Glyn.

The essence of the British spirit is captured perfectly in this wise and witty exploration of the mind and heart of a nation. The British: Are they cold, reserved, steeped in tradition and ceremony, obsessed with gardening and sport? Or are they swingers, trend setters in fashion and ideas, creators of new morality? "The British" is an affectionate, amusing book and demolishes fallacies and misconceptions and presents the British as they really are.

"Same old trouble... We expressed opposing theories about my minimum daily requirement of nicotine and alcohol."

Seaway Report Studied

OTTAWA (CP) — A consultant's report on the St. Lawrence seaway, including its financial difficulties, now is being studied by the government, Transport Minister Don Jamieson told the Commons Tuesday.

Mr. Jamieson said when the government has completed its assessment of the report he will try to make it public as soon as possible.

Canada to Bar Abby Hoffman

OTTAWA (CP) — Immigration Minister Otto Lang confirmed Tuesday night that Abbie Hoffman will be refused entry to Canada from the United States.

Mr. Land said his department will continue "to err on the side of leniency" in deciding who should be admitted to Canada either as visitors or immigrants.

But, in clear-cut cases where a person is clearly not eligible to enter the country—and he indicated Hoffman is one such case—the laws will be strictly enforced.

Mr. Lang was commenting in an interview on his department's refusal to admit Hoffman to allow him to appear on a television show, Under Attack.

Hoffman, one of the Chicago Seven, was scheduled to be interviewed tonight at the University of Western Ontario. He was then to go to Halifax to speak to students at Dalhousie University.

Canadian immigration laws forbid entry to persons convicted of a criminal offence and those belonging to subversive organizations.

Mr. Lang said he did not want to comment on individual cases.

But in Hoffman's case, he was asked by his officials whether, if Hoffman was rejected entry at the border, he would sign a minister's permit allowing him to come in.

"I said no, I won't," said Mr. Lang.

There was no new policy on American revolutionary leaders who seek to come to Canada to make speeches. All would be dealt with individually and measured against laws now on the books.

Told that Hoffman has said he will come to Canada regardless of the refusal, Mr. Lang said:

"I don't know what he means by that. If he chooses to flunt the law, then we will see how well our enforcement of it is."

Hoffman is on the prohibited list because of a conviction in Chicago for violating the anti-riot section of the 1968 United States' civil riot act.

He and six other defendents became known as The Chicago Seven in their tumultuous trial. All seven were held in contempt for outbursts during the sensational trial.

Price War Probe Urged

OTTAWA (CP)—Liberal MP Robert Kaplan (Don Valley) called on the government Tuesday to investigate the price war among grocery chains in Ontario to determine whether it is designed to drive small store owners out of business.

The request was met by a response from Corporate Affairs Minister Ron Basford that the director of the combines investigation branch would investigate if he felt the price war infringed on the law.

The minister rejected the suggestion put forward by George Hees (PC—Prince Edward-Hastings) that the director be ordered to investigate.

Reform Program Outlined

TORONTO (CP) — Bert Lawrence, Ontario financial and commercial affairs minister, hit the campaign trail for the provincial Progressive Conservative party leadership Tuesday and hit it hard.

He kicked off his campaign in Ottawa with a policy speech he admitted may go against the grain of party consensus and cohesion, and wound up the day 500 miles away in Sault Ste. Marie where he presented plans to avert what he called "northern rural slums."

He'll be followed into Sault Ste. Marie today by Allan Lawrence, minister of mines and northern affairs, who spent Tuesday visiting convention delegates in Cochrane.

Allan Lawrence will continue his campaign tonight in Kitchener. In Toronto, a spokesman for his campaign said he will likely change tack from his emphasis on education policies to other areas of provincial concern in his speech tonight.

Bert Lawrence will arrive here today to go over the same ground as Provincial Secretary Robert Welch who spent Tuesday in private meetings with Toronto delegates. Mr. Welch will be in Ottawa today to meet delegates

Bert Lawrence advocated regional economic development, as did Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough when he spoke to delegates in Cornwall and Brockville Tuesday before heading for North Bay and Owen Sound today.

Education Minister William Davis, regarded by many as the man most likely to succeed retiring Premier John Robarts, also had a busy day on the hustings.

He met delegates in Windsor and Leamington and held a news conference in Sarnia. Today, he meets delegates in St. Thomas, Chatham and Strathroy and will hold another news conference in London.

In Ottawa, Bert Lawrence said he was filling "a vacuum in the leadership campaign" by proposing sweeping government reforms

These included:

—Combining the highways and transport departments into a portfolio responsible for highways, airways, air strips and new developments in rail transportation and rapid transit;

—Expanding the agriculture department into a rural affairs department and expanding the Ontario Municipal Board and making it responsible for total land use;

—Creating an urban affairs department to look at city and suburban life.

He also urged a royal commission study into the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission and a review of education costs.

In Sault Ste. Marie, he told delegates the government has developed "a great economic machine" in southern Ontario and said the key to future growth is to expand this into the rural areas.

He said steps should be taken to make the best use of natural resources in the north, or Ontario will end up with "northern rural slums."

Mr. McKeough also said economic expansion must be speeded up in rural Ontario. He told Cornwall delegates recommendations for regional development must be acted upon quickly because slow growth is the primary problem in the eastern section of the province.

He said the solution rests in the government's provincial development program "but it must be given the guts to do the job."

"Well, I see you got my note!"

International Body Plans Drive on Pollution

OTTAWA (CP) — The International Joint Commission Tuesday was reported seeking the power to curb pollution on the Great Lakes.

A recommendation that it be given such authority was understood to be contained in a report of the IJC scheduled to be made public in Ottawa and Washington soon, possibly Thursday or Friday.

The unanimous report, certain to rekindle old controversies about responsibility for and steps to deal with pollution, is the product of an exhaustive six-year study conducted by the IJC at the request of the parent Canadian and U.S. governments.

It was learned that the document incorporates tough anti-pollution recommendations contained in last year's third interim report by the six-member, mixed-national body.

But perhaps more controversial will be a recommendation that a board be established to co-ordinate joint Canada-U.S. programs in water pollution control for the lakes.

Such a recommendation appeared in an earlier report by two international advisory boards set up by the commission within its terms of reference from the federal governments.

However it did not find its way into the commission's interim report last April, though other recommendations of the advisory boards did.

Now, it is understood to have re-appeared in the final commission report. But the document handed the two governments just before New Year's is believed to go further and suggest that the proposed board be formed under the aegis of the IJC itself, rather than independently.

In the plan advanced by the advisory boards, the proposed group would be empowered to set water quality objectives and ways to attain them; recommend legislation affecting the Great Lakes; develop programs to prevent spills of pollutants and cope with spills that occur; and carry out monitoring and surveillance.

The idea of an international board with teeth to fight pollution touches delicate questions of provincial and state autonomy.

Together with specific anti-pollution measures recommended in the report, it also affects certain local vested interests. For instance the laundry detergent industry is centred in Ohio, one of eight states bordering on the Great Lakes.

Phosphates from detergents have been blamed for much of the pollution that has made Lake Erie a dying lake. Another heavy contributor is sewage.

Ontario Plans to Halt Pollution by Sportsmen

SUTTON, Ont. (CP) — Ontario government officials are planning an all-out war against sports fishermen polluting Lake Simcoe, a department of lands and forests biologist said Monday.

Elmars Skobe said exhaustive testing of Lake Simcoe fish revealed they pose no threat to health from either mercury or DDT contamination, and stated provincial government departments will do everything possible to stop further pollution of the lake.

To check further pollution, the biologist said lands and forests officers, inspectors from the Ontario Water Resources Commission and area investigators from the health department will keep a close watch on ice-fishermen during winter months.

In addition, lands and forests officers from the Maple district headquarters will assist in patrolling the lake, making spot checks of fishing huts during their six daily patrols.

About 4,500 fish huts are expected to be examined for signs of pollution during the winter.

The Public Land Act provides for fines of up to $500 for persons convicted of polluting waters or ice areas.

Shulman Plans to Keep Quiet in Future--But Hits OHSIP

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Morton Shulman, disillusioned by the outcome of a recent judicial inquiry into provincial police affairs, said Tuesday he'll stay in politics a while longer, but rest his crusading lance.

"I've decided to make a compromise that will make everybody unhappy, I'm sure," the New Democratic Party member of the Ontario legislature for High Park told a public meeting.

"I'll stay in the legislature. But I'm going to abandon my tilting at windmills and stand back."

Dr. Shulman's decision followed a round of meetings Monday with top NDP officials. He announced his political plans after throwing away a speech on organized crime at a lecture sponsored by the Inner City Angels, a group involved in urban education.

Dr. Shulman, whose one-man crusades have often rocked the legislature since he was first elected in 1967, said he also plans to stand for re-election in the next provincial election, expected this year.

However, he expressed strong misgivings about "the system," Ontario party politics and even his own NDP.

Relaxed after a recent jaunt to the Galapagos Islands, Dr. Shulman denounced the partisan nature of the legislature—a place that attracts "the mediocre and the less-than-mediocre."

"It's a sort of mental institution-type system," he said. "Anything that is brought up by an opposition member must be defeated, regardless of its merit.

"I've found great difficulty in going along with the system—everything we say is great, everything they say is terrible. We're not much better when they bring in an idea."

Discussing his own party, Dr. Shulman said there is "a surprisingly large minority within the NDP that doesn't want the NDP to take power—they fear it."

This element does things that seem "almost suicidal" during election campaigns and manages to turn back the party from the brink of victory.

He said the back benches of all parties in the house are occupied in many cases by persons with "low IQs."

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Morton Shulman said Tuesday the Ontario Health Services Insurance Plan sends back 170,000 erroneous claims a month across the province.

The New Democratic Party member of the Ontario legislature for Toronto High Park told a public meeting he had obtained a copy of a confidential report on claims—processing by OHSIP prepared last month by Crown Life Insurance Co., one of 40 insurance firms handling the Ontario plan.

The report, he said, showed that 11 per cent of all claims filed through the provincially-operated OHSIP were erroneous and had to be returned and redone

"The cost of the stamps alone each year is up in the hundreds of thousands of dollars," Dr. Shulman told 250 persons at a lecture sponsored by the Inner City Angels, a Toronto group interested in education.

He said the problem lies in the multiplicity of insurance companies that handle OHSIP coverage. There should instead be just one insurer—the government itself.

Priest Accused of Kidnapping Plot

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal grand jury has named Rev. Philip Berrigan, the imprisoned anti-war Roman Catholic priest, as mastermind of a bizarre plot to blow up heating ducts in government buildings and whisk away presidential adviser Henry Kissinger.

The indictment, returned Tuesday in Harrisburg, Pa., against Father Berrigan and five others, alleged that Kissinger, President Nixon's adviser on national security affairs, was to be kidnapped last February one day after the conspirators planned to set off explosives in heat tunnels connecting federal buildings in Washington.

The plot outlined in the indictment closely resembles a scenario sketched for a Senate subcommittee by FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover last Nov. 27.

Father Berrigan and his brother Rev. Daniel Berrigan, Hoover said, were part of a group called the East Coast Conspiracy to Save Lives that planned to blow up underground wires and ducts and kidnap "a highly placed government official."

... Iceborne Against the Bay of Quinte Horizon at 70 Miles Per Hour

Sailors' Delight When Ice Is Right

Story and Photos by IAN ROBERTSON, Staff Reporter

Three Belleville tars recently began sailing regularly every weekend on the Bay of Quinte.

No, they're not members of some new, strange, Polar Bear Club, but then their craft don't resemble conventional sailboats.

At one time, the Bay of Quinte sported one of Canada's largest ice - boating fleets. But of a North American total of approximately 4,000, only three ice craft can be found here now.

The sleek, home-built boats constructed by Harold Seldon, Don Adamson, and Bruno Rissi of Belleville, at a cost of between $300 and $500, can reach speeds of up to 100 miles an hour with very little wind.

Starting early in the morning, the three men, Mr. Rissi's son Peter and youngsters like Peter and Stephen Artt gather below the Belleville Cemetery where the craft are stored. A fire is started, to provide frequent respites after cold sails.

Goggles, heavy mitts, face masks, parkas or snowmobile suits and heavy footgear are donned; sails are hoisted and with a brief running launch, the craft gather speed.

At first, the speed is slow and steady; as the wind catches the sails, the speed increases and sitting on the hard boat surface, even on cushions, there is no mistaking the skipping, sometimes bone-jarring ride over uneven ice.

A chattering and crackling sound in the crisp air comes from the bouncing metal runners (called skates) and the biting wind soon makes its presence felt.

Long into the late afternoon they sail, returning again and again to the ice, their faces gradually taking on a red, healthy sheen. Not until the sun sinks on the horizon, do these sportsmen call it quits.

The most dangerous hazards in iceboating are the cracks in the surface and any open water. Mr. Adamson explained that the boats "stop dead" if they are caught in these hazards.

Mr. Seldon, 67, a 30 - year veteran iceboater, related one harrowing escape.

"I was travelling on the ice with a passenger, when I saw what I thought was clear ice ahead.

"Well, it turned out to be clear water and when we went in, the boat kept travelling, hitting the ice on the other side.

"My passenger went into the air and I shot under the ice."

As a parting shot, Mr. Seldon offers some advice,

"You don't have to be crazy to enjoy ice-boating . . . but it sure helps."

Rebuffed by NFL, San Antonio Owner Does Northern Exploring

HOUSTON (CP) — Henry Hight's San Antonio Toros, dropped out of the Continental League last year, couldn't get into the National League this year, and plan to apply to the Canadian Football League next year.

Hight, an industrial supplier and automotive dealer, purchased the Toros four years ago when they were in the Continental League. The entire division broke with the Continental League last year and set up the Texas League.

And Hight, who bills his club as "the winningest team in professional football," is incensed because San Antonio —"the 13th largest city in the United States"—can't get into the NFL, a circuit comprising 26 cities.

He's convinced the reason is that San Antonio is not part of a major television market area.

He put his proposal to join the CFL to commissioner Jake Gaudaur, here for the convention of the American Football Coaches Association.

Gaudaur said he could see difficulties, but told Hight that if he was serious, to make formal application.

"The NFL will move into Canada eventually," Hight said in an interview. "Why not beat them to the punch and expand into the U.S.?"

He said the NFL owners "don't care where the teams are, it's the advertising market they're after.

"And your 20 million people would support three NFL teams."

Hight says Gaudaur told him "it would kill the CFL" if the NFL expanded into Canada.

"The NFL can just go around the Canadian league and do to you what it did to me, saying 'Your game isn't good enough'," Hight said.

"But if the Toros—and we've won 69 and lost nine the last four years—move into the Canadian league, it might scare the NFL just a little and delay things."

Hight admitted there were problems he hadn't ironed out yet.

"Your rosters, for one thing."

In the CFL, each club is allowed to carry 32 players—14 American imports and 18 Canadians.

"We might have a problem getting that many Canadians, but look at it the other way—down here, you'd be the import."

And whereas he had visualized a string of 50,000-seat stadiums across Canada, he was surprised to learn that no stadium holds that many and several accommodate considerably fewer.

Hight sat through a showing of the Grey Cup film and while he was polite about the calibre of play, he was appalled by the condition of the CNE Stadium field in Toronto.

The proposed move to Canada wouldn't come this year, but Hight did not lack for innovations in the meantime.

"We've got a lot going for us down in San Antonio," Hight said.

"We plan to play spring ball. We will go into camp March 1. With that one move, we'll do away with all competition.

"Think of the stadiums we'll have available. And the players—think of the players we'll be able to use. Our season will end in June, the NFL camps open in July.

"I've got two boys right now that I've sold to Buffalo. They'll play for me in the spring and be in great shape when they report to their NFL club."

Walton's Blood Not Thicker Than Water

TORONTO (CP) — Blood is usually thicker than water, but in the case of Mike Walton, his relationship with Toronto Maple Leafs is far enough removed from the bloodline that he would prefer a change of surroundings.

Walton, with his lawyer Alan Eagleson, held a news conference Tuesday and called on the Toronto team to speed up its efforts to move him to another National Hockey League city.

The 26-year-old Kirkland Lake, Ont., centre, left the team Dec. 2 suffering what he claimed, and what was eventually confirmed as, a depressive illness. He hasn't practised or played since.

He was suspended by the team, ordered reinstated by NHL president Clarence Campbell, and was declared unfit to play again in a Toronto uniform by Dr. Ronald Stokes of the Clarke Institute of Psychiatry, an independent specialist appointed by Campbell.

These events, leading up to Tuesday's news conference, were outlined in a statement prepared by Eagleson. The statement also suggested Leafs were asking too much in return for his services.

Walton is married to the niece of Leaf president Stafford Smythe, who felt his ailing centre was accepting bad advice.

"If Mike had come to me, as his uncle-in-law or whatever I am, I could have given him better advice. . . . Not about his contract; I mean about playing hockey," said Smythe.

Dr. Stokes's medical report, however, implied Walton's problems stemmed from his relationship with the Smythe family.

Walton said he'd lost his desire to play, was despondent, had difficulty sleeping and "I was being rude and unkind to many of my friends. . . ."

"Many of my team-mates felt that I wasn't carrying my share of the load . . . that I was hurting the team."

Walton said Jim Gregory, Leafs' general manager, was making an honest effort to trade him but that the Toronto organization wanted too much in return.

Smythe said he was aware of the pressures of being a part of the Smythe family.

"I haven't experienced his problems," said Smythe, "but I have experienced the pressure and it's no surprise that he can't take it."

As for Walton's value, Smythe said it was Eagleson who established the player's value. Eagleson engineered Walton's $40,000 annual salary and the Leaf president said the club wants to be compensated at "equal value —whether it would be a $40,000 player or two 20s."

Vancouver Canucks were known to have bid for Walton, but Bud Poile, Vancouver general manager, said Tuesday his offer did not include any player on the Vancouver roster.

Smythe said he was not aware of any specific deals Leafs had rejected since Gregory has the final say, but he was aware that several were being discussed. He said he planned to discuss trades with Bruce Norris, Detroit Red Wing owner, while attending the Super Bowl game in Miami and the NHL all-star game at Boston.

Wants Out

Centre Mike Walton, with the help of lawyer Alan Eagelsone Tuesday outlined for reporters his position with Toronto Maple Leafs and called on the National Hockey League club to speed its efforts to move him out of the city. Walton read a prepared statement in which he recounted his dealings with the team since he left the lineup early in December suffering from depression. (CP Wirephoto)

Rangers Bump Boston By Clipping Canucks

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

New York Rangers gained a notch, St. Louis Blues held steady, and Toronto's Jim McKenny, who didn't even play, lost a point in National Hockey League happenings Tuesday.

The Rangers slipped into first place in the East, a point ahead of Boston Bruins, by clipping Vancouver Canucks 4-2. St. Louis continued chasing Chicago Black Hawks in the West with an 8-2 win over California Golden Seals, and the Maple Leaf defenceman had his only goal of the season disallowed.

New York, who have dogged the Stanley Cup champion Bruins all season, now have 64 points but have played one more game.

The Canucks opened and closed the scoring and were in the game through the first 40 minutes, although being outshot 29-12.

Then New York's Walt Tkaczuk went to work. The 24-year-old centre, born in Emstedetten, Germany, notched the winner at 6:18 of the third period with his 13th of the season, then set up the insurance marker by Bill Fairbairn with a great individual effort.

Jim Lorentz, ex-Bruin farmhand, scored twice for St. Louis as the Blues continued to pad their second-place total in the West, nine points behind Chicago and 14 ahead of Philadelphia Flyers and Minnesota North Stars, tied for third.

Lorentz, used sparingly by the Bruins last year although he had been the scoring leader and most valuable player in the Central League the previous year, scored goals No. 13 and 14.

He was traded to the Blues in the off-season for St. Louis' first choice in the 1970 amateur draft.

Goal No. 13, at 16:12 of the first period, proved the winner as the Blues held a 3-2 lead and added two more in the second.

McKenny was credited with his goal in a Jan. 6 game at Toronto which was the equalizer in a 4-4 tie with Minnesota.

After the game, however, he said team-mate Garry Monahan should have been given credit since his (McKenny's) stick missed as the two players swiped at the puck in front of the North Stars' goal.

Ron Andrews, director of publicity and statistician for the NHL, said he was only made aware of the situation by newspaper reports of the game.

Although it was initially felt Toronto probably hadn't followed usual procedure to have the goal changed, it was learned Leaf captain Dave Keon had approached referee John Ashley at McKenny's request and Ashley had informed the timekeeper of the change.

Brian O'Neil, NHL's director of administration, said the situation was "obviously one in which communications from ice level to the scorer's location were misinterpreted."

McKenny, meanwhile, will have an opportunity to get back in a goal-scoring way tonight when the high-flying Leafs, who have lost only one and tied one of their last 15 games, entertain California in one of three scheduled fixtures.

They may, however, be without the services of centre Norm Ullman, whose right instep was hit with a shot by linemate Paul Henderson during a workout Tuesday.

A medical report cleared the way for Ullman to play, but a similar injury kept him out of a couple of games when he played for Detroit several years ago.

In other games tonight, Buffalo Sabres travel to Chicago, and Pittsburgh Penguins are at home to Los Angeles Kings.

SANDIEGO (AP) — National Basketball Association owners voted 15 to 2 Tuesday to consider bringing charges against the Seattle SuperSonics for signing Spencer Haywood, the American Basketball Association's Most Valuable Player as a rookie at Denver last year. A U.S. district court judge in Los Angeles Friday continued for 10 days an order restraining the NBA from endorcing its rule that a college's player's class must have graduated before he can sign with a member pro club. Haywood's class at Detroit will not graduate until June.

HOUSTON (CP) — Joe Restic, who traded his chair as head coach of Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Canadian Football League for that of Harvard in the Ivy League, says he has beckoned to his former Hamilton assistants Al Bruno and Carl Schuette. Here for the convention of American Football Coaches Association, Restic said Tuesday: "I've told them they have a job with me if they want it. It's up to them to make up their minds. I didn't put any time limit on it."

NEW YORK (AP) — Two associates of Sugar Ray Robinson, former middleweight and welterweight boxing champion, named the fighter in a $1-million libel suit filed in Manhattan Supreme Court Tuesday. George Gainford, a manager, and Harry Wiley, a trainer, charged in court papers Robinson and sports writer Dave Anderson libelled them in Sugar Ray, a biography published last year. Gainford said he was libelled in the book by words intended to mean he was "guilty of a crime in that he allegedly had been corruptly influenced to fix a fight or fights."

Wilkens Watched While Lew Won

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — While Milwaukee Bucks' Lew Alcindor was clinching victory with a three-point play with 48 seconds left Tuesday night, little Lenny Wilkens sat on the West bench.

But news men voted him the most valuable player of the 21st National Basketball Association East-West All-Star game.

The crowd of 14,378 and a national television audience watched Wilkens, 6-foot-1 and smaller than 27 other All-Stars, rally the West wit driving lay-ups in the second and fourth quarters in the 108-107 victory.

Wilkens led all scorers with 21 points, followed by Alcindor's 19 and 15 by Chicago Bulls' Bobby Love, also of the West.

The East was paced by Atlanta Hawks' Lou Hudson and New York's Knicks' Willis Reed, with 14 each.

Alcindor's fall-away field goal in the middle of the key, on which he was fouled led to his free throw and a three-point play, giving the West a 108-105 lead.

Culhane's Late Foul Shots Help Nicholson Upset Tigers

The "luck of the Irish", coupled with some clutch foul shooting by Tim Culhane carried the Nicholson seniors to a 56-55 win over previously unbeaten Trenton High School in their Bay of Quinte COSSA hook-up last night.

Nicholson had used a tough man - to - man defence to hold Trenton to 20 points at half time while scoring 29 themselves.

The Tigers, winners of four straight games this season, bounced back with some accurate foul shooting in the final quarter to pull to within one point of the home team.

A bucket by Trenton guard Don Farrell with 10 seconds remaining in the game put them ahead 55-54 and appeared to sow up the contest.

But with three seconds left Nicholson's Tim Culhane drew a foul and converted both the free throw and a subsequent bonus shot to give his team the one - point win.

Culhane paced the winners with a 22 - point game followed by Bill Hurley with 17 points.

Greg Brown was high scorer for Trenton with 15 points, two more than Les Nicholson.

In the junior game Nicholson moved two points ahead of BCI in the eastern section with a 67-47 victory. The win was their fifth in as many games.

Centre John Garvin's 16 points paced the winners followed by Dave Dolan with 11 points. Don Armstrong had a 20-point night for Trenton.

The Trenton midgets gained their team's only win of the night by topping Nicholson 40-36.

Kanalias had 25 points for the winners with Joe Edwards hitting for 16 in a losing effort.

Betsy's Coach Miffed

MONTREAL (CP) — Surprised as much as annoyed over criticism levelled at his coaching abilities, Canada's national ski team coach Peter Franzen said Tuesday that world ski champion Betsy Clifford has a lot to learn.

"I had a long talk with Betsy just before she left," said Franzen. "The doctor (Berger Kanor, of Montreal, who serves as manager of the team) and I asked quietly just why she wanted to go home."

Miss Clifford of Ottawa returned home from Europe Sunday.

"It sounds funny to me," Franzen said in a telephone interview with The Gazette from Grindewald, Switzerland, when he was told that Betsy, through her father John, said this week that she could not learn anything from Franzen and was indeed coaching herself.

"Betsy talked about problems at home," said Franzen.

"We asked her if she wanted to go home because she didn't get on with anyone from the team or if she didn't like the coaching. She said 'no, no' very definitely there was nothing like that wrong."

"She still has so many mistakes. She needs as much coaching as the other girls.

Franzen indicated that Betsy would race next at Monafon, Austria, in a meet which starts next Monday.

Deuces Pat Hand For Frontenacs

KINGSTON (Special) — Three deuces proved to be a winning hand for the Kingston Frontenacs in their Tuesday night Eastern Ontario Junior B tilt with the Trenton Golden Hawks.

MIKE HALL

The winners counted a pair of goals in each of the three periods to notch their tenth win of the season, a 6-2 verdict over the last - place Hawks

Loose play in their own end cost Trenton a chance to pick up their second win in 19 starts after playing to a 2-2 tie with the third-place Frontenacs until the mid-point of the second period.

Goals by Jeff Howard and Mike Hall in the second period had erased a 2-0 Kingston lead, but the Frontenacs stormed back for four unanswered tallies.

Hall continued to spark the Mark Woodward-Howard-Hall combination for the losers with the unit posing the major Trenton scoring threat, Woodward assisted on both goals, while Howard added an assist to his score.

Tony Minaker turned in a strong performance between the pipes for the losers as Kingston held a 58-29 shots on goal advantage.

Peter Utman and Rick Wright played hard hitting games on the Golden Hawk defence.

The winners picked up 11 of the 19 penalties dished out by referee Keith McDonald.

JOHNNY UNITAS

Colts Will Open Up

MIAMI Fla. (AP) — Quarterback John Unitas promised Tuesday that Baltimore Colts would "be wide open" on offence for their Super Bowl appearance against Dallas Cowboys Sunday.

"It won't be any different than all year, though," said the 15-year National Football League veteran. "We've used the double wing, the flood . . . you can't get much more open than we've been."

No matter what adversity he runs into any game-incompletion, interceptions, or whatever-Unitas said, "I never get to the point where I stop throwing."

"When you stop throwing, you give the defence an easy game," he said at a news conference.

Bills Ponder Move West

BUFFALO (AP) — Owner Ralph C. Wilson Jr. of Buffalo Bills says he wants some definite answers to stadium questions before he decides to move the National Football League team to Seattle.

Wilson, a millionaire Detroit businessman, met in Seattle Tuesday with King County (Wash.) executive John Spellman and other local officials to discuss the "very serious" possibility of moving the club to the west-coast city.

Wilson told reporters he wanted a firm answer within 60 to 90 days as to whether Erie County, of which Buffalo is a part, would build a new stadium; preferably an open air, 80,000-seat facility for the Bills.

He set the same deadline for Seattle officials to work out a lease agreement for interim use of the University of Washington's 58,000-seat stadium and its expansion to 65,000 to 75,000 seats.

The owners of the 26 NFL teams begin their annual winter meeting in Palm Beach, Fla. March 25, midway through Wilson's deadline period. At least 20 of them must approve any move by the franchise.

The Bills have played their home games in 46,000-seat War Memorial Stadium since their inception in 1960.

Wilson noted that Erie County legislators first began consideration of a $50-million domed stadium in 1967 and they "are no further along than they were two years ago or four years ago. . . ."

Disputes over location, management and rising costs have caused the delay.

A $40-million domed stadium also is envisaged in the Seattle area, but a problem of location has delayed construction.

Buffalo mayor Frank A. Sedita termed Wilson's threatened pullout "incredible."

"We spent large sums of money renovating the stadium," he said.

Must Be Tough with Owners: Kapp

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — Quarterback Joe Kapp says pro football club owners "all try to browbeat you."

"You've got to be tough with the club owners to get anything," said Kapp, talking to reporters after appearing Tuesday before a federal grand jury investigating the National Football League.

The Boston Patriots' passer had nothing to say, however, about his testimony before the grand jury.

"I don't think I should make comment on what was said in there," said Kapp. He said he was not afraid of reprisal by Patriots' owner Billy Sullivan, but conceded it would be highly imprudent to talk since he still makes his living as a player.

"We talked about my career, that's all I can say," Kapp said. The 32-year-old quarterback played out his option in 1969 as he led Minnesota Vikings to the NFL title and won the league's most valuable player award. Previously he starred in the Canadian league with British Columbia Lions and Calgary Stampeders.

Kapp became a free agent after the Vikings refused to meet his contract demands for the 1970 season and he signed with the Patriots on Oct. 2.

Kapp's lawyers had threatened legal action against the NFL on grounds Kapp was blackballed. Several clubs who needed quarterbacks showed no interest in him after he became a free agent last May 1.

Ron Kramer, former tight end with Green Bay Packers and Detroit Lions, also testified.

He said he was not asked about individual players or alleged blacklisting in the league, but was asked "general questions about the rules and regulations of the NFL."

'Sell' Urges Hees

OTTAWA (CP) — George Hees, former Conservative trade minister, feels the government should stop preening itself over the swollen export figures for 1970 and get down to selling goods that mean more jobs.

In Commons debate Tuesday, Mr. Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings) granted that a 15-per-cent increase in exports last year looked very good indeed.

But he suggested that a breakdown of the exports figures he had obtained earlier in the day from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics was less encouraging.

Exports of raw materials increased to $4 billion during the first 11 months of 1970 from $3 billion in the similar 1969 period, a jump of 31.1 per cent. Exports of slightly processed goods increased to $5.6 billion from $4.8 billion, a 15.6 per-cent rise.

But the increase in exports of finished goods, which provide proportionately more jobs, was only 4.8 per cent, to $5.6 billion from $5.3 billion, he said.

Mr. Hees's conclusion: Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin should "stop spraining his wrist by patting himself on the back every time he refers to a figure that shows an increase in our total exports because these increases are constituted mainly by increases in sales of raw materials which every country wants and which require no selling whatsoever."

His attack came as the House considered a government bill—later given second reading and sent to committee—to increase the financial ceilings on the Export Development Corp.

Debate on the bill amending the Export Development Corporation Act was opened by Bruce Howard, parliamentary secretary to Mr. Pepin.

He argued that it is necessary specifically as a result of Canada's export success—particularly in the field of "technically sophisticated goods."

The corporation, reorganized in 1969, provides financing for foreign purchases of Canadian goods and also insurance for Canadian investments abroad.

Mr. Howard said the bill would increase the corporation's capitalization to $100 million from $50 million, and authorize a new ceiling on long-term loans of $850 million, an increase of $250 million. The new ceiling on insurance for foreign investments would be raised by $100 million to $150 million.

The insurance aspects of the corporation drew the fire of John Burton (NDP—Regina East). The Saskatchewan economist cautioned Canadians not to become involved in the "new investment imperialist scramble for financial colonies" which has already resulted in an anti-Canadian backlash in the Caribbean.

Toronto Liberal Steve Otto (York East) called the measure "a pathetic little bill" that could not help Canada maintain an active position in world trade. He offered the example of Japan which promotes private trade and investment with large-scale government aid to Japanese countries.

From Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin came a hint of a move towards more protective policies. He warned that the defeat of a restrictive trade act in the U.S. Senate could not obscure a trend to protectionism.

Hospitals Are Being Used More

OTTAWA (CP) — Cervical cancers up 63 per cent, gall bladder and pancreas treatment up 25, psychoses and psychoneuroses up 20 to 40 per cent—those were big contributors to the soaring use and cost of hospital care in the 1960s.

These samples from the first federal government study to relate hospital use and disease records start to explain why the cost of hospital care climbed so steeply—from an estimated $996 million in 1961 to $1,714 million in 1966.

That amounted to an annual hospital care bill of $85.70 in 1966 for every man, woman and child, up from $55.33 in 1961. It is considerably more than that by now, it is estimated.

More extensive analysis has begun to see why, for example, hospital treatment for cancer of the cervix in the uterus jumped 63 per cent. The statistic is based on discharges and deaths.

Hope Laughs About Marijuana -- But Fears It

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Bob Hope to baseball star Johnny Bench: "It's a great sport, baseball. You can spend eight months on grass and not get busted."

Vietnam audiences of United States servicemen roared with laughter, and the evidence can be seen on Hope's television special Thursday night.

Bob Hope doing marijuana jokes for the troops?

"Yes, I know a lot of people are shocked," said the comedian during a break in editing the NBC show down to 90 minutes.

"I didn't talk to the military brass about doing it; I just went ahead. I think it's better to get this thing out in the open. Then it can be treated as the problem it is."

A Hope aide remarked that one general was queried for his reaction. "This man deals in the news," said the general, "and pot smoking in Vietnam is news."

"Sure, they smoke pot in Vietnam," Hope commented. "But it was never a problem until this year

"That's because the guys have nothing to do. Before, when soldiers got bored they said, 'Let's have a drink.' Now they sit around the fire and light up.

"But look—when I was a young man, we'd go knock on a door on 57th Street in New York and go into a speakeasy to get a drink. Liquor was illegal then, and that was our kick."

Does that mean Hope favors legalizing pot as well as liquor?

"Oh, no!" he replied quickly. "I've talked to too many doctors about it. I know it's not good for you."

He even admitted to have smoked pot himself.

"It was when I was in vaudeville," said Hope. "I tried it and it scared me.

"It made me sexier—and I thought I was already sexy enough."

Hope now plans to make a 15-minute film to warn the troops about the use of pot.

Hope returned from his seventh Christmas in Vietnam as hawkish as ever—"We've got to save that nation, and the rest of Southeast Asia."

This year he will again be playing college campuses, which are notably dovish. He was asked how he pleases both audiences.

"I've never had any trouble at the college," he said. "There are a lot of students who agree with me that we're too big a nation to turn our backs on a country like Vietnam."

Hope put an end to rumors that the 1970 trip might be his last to Vietnam.

"Sure, I'll go back," he said.

All In Family Is Panned

NEW YORK (AP) — All in the Family, CBS's new situation comedy series about a blue-collar bigot and his family, had its premiere Tuesday night. It had a laugh track, but instead of being funny, it was a half-hour of vulgarity and offensive dialogue.

The series concerns the family of Archie Bunker, a loud-mouthed, short-fused man whose bellowing is reminiscent of Jackie Gleason in the original Honeymooners, but he is without Gleason's redeeming charm. His wife is a silly, naive woman who wants peace at any price. A gushing daughter and her husband, a college student, live with the parents. The latter was the subject of Archie's most insulting remarks.

The idea of the series, it was explained by a voice at the beginning, is "to throw a humorous spotlight" on prejudices. The spotlight was there but there was little humor and considerable embarrassment in listening to Archie's ranting about race and his belching loudly while eating.

Carroll O'Connor plays the bully boy and Jean Stapleton has the thankless role of his submissive wife.

CBS followed the premier with a timely report on the mercury scare. The program presented experts who were reassuring about the quantity of mercury in some food fish but they discussed the more serious aspects of mercury's contribution to environmental pollution.

Correspondent Daniel Schorr interviewed scientists studying the problem and officials concerned with solving it. the scientists explained that the villain is methyl mercury, created when industrial waste containing mercury is dumped in water where the mercury is changed through bacterial action.

Methyl mercury is then absorbed by plankton which is eaten by small fish, thus entering the food chain ending with man.

One scientist estimated that a person would have to eat four pounds of tainted fish daily for a year for initial effects of poisoning. Others said intensive studies are under way to find evidence of the effect of long-term consumption.

Cousteau Has Another Hit

NEW YORK (AP) — Jacques Cousteau's adventurers inspected a fleet of sunken ships and Jack Webb's law-and-order heroes were on the trail of murder Monday night, a combination that provided a most satisfying evening of television viewing.

The latest chapter in the wanderings of the Cousteau team of undersea explorers, seen on ABC, carried them to the lagoon of Truk, a small Pacific island which was a Japanese naval base. A U.S. air attack in 1944 sent some 50 ships to the bottom—a color film of the attack was effectively integrated into the program. Cousteau and his divers took a look at about three-quarters of the fleet, now a coral-covered, rusty graveyard.

The undersea photography, work of Cousteau's son Philippe, was especially effective. They were concerned about the absence of the larger inhabitants of the lagoon—lobsters, groupers and moray eels. Cousteau finally concluded that the two-day bombardment more than 25 years ago had destroyed them, a footnote on the waste of war.

There also was some eerie footage which Philippe described as "a sight of hell"—a room full of bones and skulls of trapped crew members.

Conspiracy to Kill, the NBC World Premiere program, kicked off a series of new made-for-TV film features on Monday nights. It was the step-by-step unraveling of a complicated homocide. As with Dragnet, producer Webb turned out a rather complete, realistic cast history.

Robert Conrad played a conscientious deputy district attorney who after getting a conviction of a druggist for shooting a would-be hold-up man, has second thoughts about the truth of testimony by his star witness.

Padding to fill the two hours was handled with interesting characters.

Entertainment Roundup

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton will star together in a new film scheduled to go before the cameras in Mexico this spring, a spokesman for the couple said Tuesday.

Called Hammersmith is Out, it will be directed by British actor Peter Ustinov.

Burton has the role of a maniac, named Hammersmith, who escapes from a mental hospital. Miss Taylor is a roadside cafe waitress who gets involved with him. Ustinov will have the role of a psychiatrist.

The spokesman, John Springer, said the color movie will be co-produced by companies owned by Burton and Ustinov.

Although the story is set in the United States the film will be shot somewhere near Puerto Vallarta, Mexico, where the Burtons have a home.

CORONADO, Calif. (AP) — The United States Navy gave Bob Hope its highest civilian award Tuesday in a dockside ceremony.

The comedian, taking his medal from Navy Secretary John Chafee, said in a reference to income taxes: "I can't tell you what a thrill it is to get this piece of gold back from the government."

In receiving the navy's Distinguished Public Service Award, Hope was cited for his trips to service hospitals and overseas bases for the last 30 years.

He also was handed the wooden steering wheel from the retired hospital ship Hope.

LONDON (AP) — British-born film director Alfred Hitchcock is to make his first movie in Britain in 20 years—again on the theme of multiple murder.

Entitled Frenzy, the film will be a thriller with echoes of a case concerning Neville Heath, the suave sadist who mutilated and murdered two women in Britain in the late 1940s.

Hitchcock, who has served up some of the goriest and most spine-chilling shockers with an air of unholy glee, remarked:

"I hope it won't be too shocking, though all murder is. I hope to intersperse it with bright characters."

Hitchcock's last film in Britain was Stage Fright, starring Marlene Dietrich and British actor Richard Todd.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Inc. has turned the corner from its deficit operations the last two years with a $2.19 million net income from the first 12 weeks of fiscal 1971, the movie company reports.

MGM said Monday net income for the first quarter, 1971, ended Nov. 21 was $2,508,000, up from $328,000 for the same period last year.

The firm said it was the best quarterly results since early 1968.

Insurance May Be Lost

Farmers who allow snowmobiling on their fall wheat acreage are in for a sad surprise if there is winter kill and they make claims to insurance companies for damage.

F. E. Goodyer, supervisor for the Crop Insurance Commission says adjusters will probably refuse claims for winter kill if they see snowmobile tracks on the wheatland.

Mr. Goodyer says snowmobile damage to winter wheat is definitely not covered and the commission will not be liable.

When running over snow-covered fields snowmobiles compact the snow and this causes icing in the spring and chokes off the wheat.

The damage often resembles winterkill which is covered by crop insurance.

Going and Coming

Manitoba Progressive Conservative leader Walter Weir (left) will not be in the running when his party holds a leadership convention in February, which was called following rumblings of discontent with Mr. Weir's leadership. However, the provincial Liberal party seems to be getting new life from its new leader, I. H. Asper (right), who was chosen party leader in October. (CP Photo)

Speaker Urges Closer Ties

PICTON (Staff) — Area director to the Ontario Chamber of Commerce board, Hugh Murray, Belleville, Monday urged members of the Prince Edward chamber of commerce to capitalize on the benefits of open communication with the Ontario chamber.

Mr. Murray, guest speaker at a luncheon meeting held at Prince Edward Yacht Club praised the Prince Edward chamber for its many activities. "This is one of the most active chambers I know of in Ontario," he commented.

He outlined the role of the Ontario Chamber of Commerce and added that he feels it does not receive enough recognition from local chambers. Mr. Murray suggested that all local chambers should more closely examine reports and policies prepared by the Ontario chamber and forward formal endorsements of Ontario chamber motions meeting with local approval.

Mr. Murray reminded chamber members that Ontario chamber president Mark Kellow has observed, "The chamber could better fulfil its ultimate duties to its local members by becoming more involved with the Ontario chamber." The speaker also mentioned several recent achievements of the provincial chamber including a detailed study on the declining respect for law and order and consultation with the Canadian ramifications of the White Paper on Taxation.

Mr. Murray's remarks encouraging closer liaison between local chambers and the Ontario chamber were a special feature of yesterday's regular meeting of the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce and followed its slate of usual business.

First Meeting In Tyendinaga

The 1970 inaugural meeting of the Tyendinaga council was held Monday at the township office in Melrose. Council members took the oath of office from Township Clerk William Walsh.

Four of the five members on this year's council — Reeve Carman Gibson, Deputy Reeve Leonard Walsh, and councillors George Blatherwick and Charles Long were re-elected to office in December's election. The one new councillor is Kenneth Juby, of Shannonville.

Reeve Gibson, will be a candidate for the post of county warden when Hastings county council holds its inaugural meeting next week.

Taking Sleeping Pills Makes Sleeping Harder

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — A Stanford University researcher says insomniacs who try to solve their problem by popping sleeping pills actually could be making it worse.

Sleeping pills can actually cut down on the amount of sleep and lead to an abnormal type of sleep that may be harmful over long periods, Dr. William C. Dement, director of Stanford's Sleep Disorders Clinic, said in an interview.

"People using a lot of sleeping pills end up sleeping badly," said Dement, who has studied sleep habits for 18 years.

He said pill-poppers develop a tolerance for more and more pills—usually barbiturates—which can bring on a drug abuse problem.

Also, he said, the pills interfere with normal sleep processes such as the brief dream period that occurs normally about every 90 minutes and is accompanied by rapid eye movements. Researchers refer to it as REM.

Dement said he has found in experiments with volunteers that interference with REM sleep can cause mental changes as well as sleep abnormalities.

"When suppressed, it comes back with tremendous force," he said. "The person has nightmares, is overly intense, displays excitability."

He cautioned, however, that the use of pills should not be stopped suddenly.

"Withdrawal never should be sudden, because nightmares, severe anxiety and even convulsions could result," Dement said.

He told of one patient who used up to five barbiturate pills a day and slept an average of five hours 40 minutes. The number of pills was reduced over a period of weeks, and two weeks after the patient had stopped them entirely, he was sleeping seven hours a night, Dement said.

The "mean sleep time for adults" is 7½ hours, Dement said, but five hours is normal for two per cent of adults. Another two per cent need more than 10 hours.

Troops Endeavor To Open Lifeline To Phnom Penh

SAIGON (AP) — Spearheaded by 140 armored cars, more than 13,000 South Vietnamese and Cambodian troops launched a drive from north and south today to reopen Phnom Penh's lifeline to the sea, South Vietnamese headquarters announced.

Only minor contact was reported in the initial stages of the operation aimed at clearing Cambodia's Highway 4, which runs from the capital 115 miles southwest to the country's only deepwater port, Kompong Som.

The highway has been cut for nearly two months by North Vietnamese troops who control two passes through the Elephant Mountains, Pich Nil, 60 miles southwest of Phnom Penh, and Stung Chhay, 25 miles farther south.

Spokesmen said one force was moving south from the direction of Phnom Penh, while another was pushing north from Kompong Som. South Vietnamese marines were reported five miles northeast of Pich Nil, while Cambodian units were reported to have reached Trapeang Kea, about 40 miles south of the northern force.

Toilet Training

YORK, England (CP) — Candidates for driving licences have been banned from using toilet facilities at a test centre here. Authorities say the facilities aren't sufficiently large to accommodate the candidates. But driving instructors in York complain that the lack of toilets is leaving some students unduly nervous at the wheel, thus hurting their chances of passing the test.

Top Oil Producing Nations Have Price Demand Rejected

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Oil talks between 10 major world oil producers and Western oil companies have broken down, a communique said today, posing a threat to 85 per cent of supplies to the Western world.

The collapse of the crucial talks came Tuesday night with participants even declining to set a date for further discussions.

The talks—about new posted prices—involved Iran, Iraq and Saudi Arabia representing the Organization for Petroleum Exporting Countries and Western oil companies representatives.

The Saudi Arabian oil minister, Zaki Yeman, and the Iraqi oil minister, Saadun Hammadi, both flew home early today.

Iranian Finance Minister Hamshid Amuzegar, speaking for exporting group, said oil company representatives "refused to talk, and even avoided setting a date for possible further meeting."

Amuzegar said the talks had been "fruitless." The 10-year-old OPEC is composed of Iran, Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Qatar, Abu Dhabi, Libya, Algeria, Indonesia and Venezuela. Together they meet 85 per cent of non-Communist world's oil demands.

At their meeting last month in Caracas, Venezuela, it was decided to demand a new posted price and boost taxation to 55 from 50 per cent.

OPEC threatened "concrete and simultaneous action by all member countries" if the demands were not met.

Replying to a question whether OPEC members would cut their supplies if the companies failed to set a date for further discussions, Amuzegar said that this will have to be decided by an OPEC general meeting already called for next Tuesday.

Asked if OPEC planned sanctions, he reiterated that all members are "united" and that they will take "simultaneous action."

Amuzegar said OPEC members are not satisfied with their return on their oil.. Noting that prices in Britain, France, Belgium and the Netherlands have gone up 59 cents a barrel, the Iranian finance minister said only 10 cents of the increase went back to the producing countries.

Transportation costs are 21 cents a barrel higher, he said, but this still leaves 28 cents a barrel for the companies, and OPEC members consider this too much.

He said consuming nations' governments received five times the tax revenue from oil that the producing nations get. Oil costs the consuming countries $3.50 a barrel, he said, and it is sold for $12-$14 a barrel.

The price has remained static in oil-producing nations since 1960, he added, while the value of the dollar has dropped 27 cents.

Companies represented at the talks were British Petroleum, Standard of New Jersey and Iranian Oil Participants Ltd., a consortium of those two and other American, Dutch and French companies.

Rural Planning Urgently Needed

RIDGETOWN, Ont. (CP) — The trends toward emphasizing the need for urban development in our society "tend to override or actually ignore the urgent need for comprehensive rural planning" a University of Guelph professor said here Tuesday.

Dr. Norman Pearson, chairman of the centre for resources development at the university, told farmers industrial society traditionally thinks of land planning in terms of negative contri and the subordination of the rural world to urban needs.

He said the urban power is such that rural regions are drained of their local population and traditional functions. The rural areas are physically reorganized in terms of water management, power development, forestry, farming and recreation to serve city dwellers.

Jordan and Guerrillas Try To Settle Their Differences

AMMAN (Reuter) — Representatives of the Jordanian government and the Palestinian Arab guerrillas met here again today to try to resolve differences behind the latest outbreak of gun clashes.

A few shots were heard in Amman early today following a government-guerrilla call for an immediate ceasefire and stores remained closed.

In Beirut, the Al Fatah guerrilla information office said government troops were still shooting in various parts of Amman at midnight Tuesday night but the commandos would not return the fire.

A Fatah statement said Jordanian authorities were trying to perpetuate a crisis, and the commandos wanted to help restore stability to the capital.

A security spokesman in Amman said two women were killed and a woman and a policeman wounded in shooting incidents Tuesday.

But there was no confirmation of reports that 12 guerrillas and civilians were killed and 17 wounded during an exchange of fire in the Masarwa area of Jebel Amman Tuesday afternoon.

Today's meeting between the Jordanian government and the Palestine resistance movement follows five hours of talks Tuesday night.

Guerrilla sources said Jordanian troops, supported by tanks and artillery, resumed attacks on northern commando positions at Aqraba, Al Rafid and Saham villages Tuesday afternoon, the fifth day of fighting in north Jordan.

The Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine vowed to wage a relentless underground battle to shatter the regime of King Hussein.

The front reiterated a resolve made Monday to fight and foil what it described as a bid by the king to liquidate the guerrillas and thus free his hand to go it alone in concluding a separate peace treaty with Israel.

Hussein, who is in London for medical treatment, conferred Tuesday night with Bahi Ladgham of Tunisia, the chief Arab mediator in the Jordanian crisis.

One in Hundred Hurt If Wearing Two Belts

DETROIT (AP) — A General Motors safety researcher says nearly all car occupants who wore both shoulder and lap belts during accidents he studied escaped serious injury.

In a study presented to the Society of Automotive Engineers in Detroit, Wilton D. Nelson of the GM safety research and development laboratory found that in 160 accidents where one or more occupants of a car was wearing both shoulder and lap belts, 99 per cent of the belted riders escaped with no injury or only minor injuries.

Ninety-six of those accidents were serious ones in which injuries would normally be expected, he said.

In the accidents studied, he said, only two persons wearing both belts were killed. In one case, the driver was killed when the hood crashed through the windshield and struck him.

In the other, the car rammed a tree, tearing off a door and the tree actually struck the driver.

Nelson said studies have shown that only between 2½ and four per cent of all drivers involved in accidents were wearing both belts.

Swiss Ambassador Expected To Be Freed Soon in Brazil

RIO DE JANEIRO (Reuter) — Swiss Ambassador Giovanni Bucher was only a few hours away from freedom today after 37 days as a hostage of left-wing guerrillas.

The stage was set late for the final act in the long drawn-out drama when his captors pledged to free the 57-year-old diplomat unharmed once 70 Brazilian political prisoners being exchanged for his life were safe in Santiago, Chile.

The guerrilla guarantee was contained in a message found Tuesday night in a copy of the New York Times at the Thomas Jefferson Library on Rio's fashionable Copacabana Beach. The library is run by the U.S. Information Service.

The government did not formally acknowledge receipt of the message.

Most observers expected confirmation to come in the form of a go-ahead order for the 70 political prisoners to take off for Chile in the Brazilian airliner which has been standing by for the last few days at the airport here.

Once the airliner with the prisoners arrives in Santiago—it is a three-hour 40-minute flight—then freedom for Bucher should not be long in coming.

In three previous diplomatic kidnappings in Brazil—of U.S. Ambassador Charles Burke Elbrick, Japanese Consul Nabuo Okuchi and West German Ambassador Ehrenfried von Holleben—the guerrillas chose the early evening rush hours for the release.

One of the guerrilla conditions for Bucher's release was that news of the arrival of the 70 in Santiago and pictures of the arrival scene should be published in Rio on the basis of international news agencies' reports.

The trip to Santiago will cost the Brazilian government a total of $27,000 including the extra pay for 34 policemen who will escort the prisoners to exile.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.

Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Boy Says Drugs Aren't 'With It'

Here is an interesting, informative letter from a teenager on the drug problem. We are able to see it from the viewpoint of one on the other edge of the generation gap.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Your column on LSD was very interesting; another source that has influenced my opinion that drugs are "not with it" any more.

I am 19 years old. I have been around plenty of dope in the past three years. This is inclusive of all but heroin. I've seen "friends" go down, go up, get wired, get mellowed, and fly from here to Andromeda and back — on drugs that change in purity from one sale to another.

I have had access to all of the material that can send you anywhere you want to go. But I kept it to grass and "whites," until I discovered that this was not worth it. I discovered that I could get "higher" on life, on the love of a good girl, and on my music. It's called the "natural high."

About this time I imagine all the Heads and Dopers are putting this letter away and saying it is rubbish. That's because they are too scared to come down long enough even to look over the possibilities of a natural high.

Young people are finding out that drugs are passe. That yoga, Buddhism, and the natural high are the best things to come along. Ironically though, both drugs and yoga have been around for about the same amount of time.

I know, from experiencing both sides, that the natural high is better, cheaper, and strictly legal. The girl whose letter to you was signed "wish I'd stayed home" is young and thank God she learned then. She had guts enough to say no! Bravo!

And it is hapening more and more. Please believe that I haven't written this letter just to see it in print. I've written it from the heart because I'm deeply involved with fighting the dope problem. I have a girl friend who fights right by my side. Together we try to communicate with people. Sometimes we get through. Not as much as we'd like, but at least there's progress.

We think that young people are turning from drugs. With enough exposure in print and on TV, these facts could reach more kids, and perhaps save some from taking that first puff, pill, or whatever. I know there's change in the air. But not enough.

This is why campaigners like myself need the help of people like you who have influence. It is obvious you have wide circulation and respect. Please continue to be one of the few sources of truth left.

If I did not admire what you are trying to do, and didn't think you could help, I would not have written such intimacies. Thank you sincerely (Signed T.)

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: What's so bad about having heart trouble? I worry because I don't have it. It's an easy way to die. Early to bed and early to rise may be all right for old folks, but it makes a man miss all the fun before he dies and makes him want to hasten the journey to join all the others who have gone up to the skies. So I go to bed when I please and get up at my ease. I'm not afraid to die. — Mr. F.

Comment: I've heard you fatalists before. But I'll let you in on a secret. I've found you're the first to plead, "Help me! Help me!" when you're really in danger of dying. When not in immediate danger it's easy to be a philosopher.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Belief in God Irrelevant

At about the same time, a month or so ago, a Boy Scout was being refused his Eagle badge, and a small child was ordered by the court to be returned from the couple who wanted to adopt her. In both cases, the reasons were "not believing in God."

Nothing could be sillier — or, basically, more irreligious — than bestowing or withholding secular privileges because the recipient did or did not "believe in God," whatever that phrase may happen to mean.

A prelate at a conference I was attending once said to me, "If the average Catholic knew what the Pope's conception of God was, he might very well consider him an atheist." This is how much people's ideas of God can vary, even within the same nominal religion.

Anybody can say he "believes in God"; anybody can think he believes in God; it costs nothing, and makes them feel good. And, under this cover, the most ungodly and most unchristian acts can be committed with a clear conscience. History is distressingly replete with such incidences, not the least of which were the infamous "Crusades" (which violated everything Jesus taught), in the name of Christendom.

Conversely, many who would call themselves "unbelievers" live and work in the spirit of brotherhood that sanctifies their unbelief.

Jesus understood this perfectly, in his parable of the man with two sons, who went to the first and said, "Son, go and work in the vineyard today." The son answered, "I will not," but afterward he repented and went. He went to the second son and asked the same; the son said, "I go, Sir," but did not go. "Which of the two," asked Jesus, "did the will of his father?"

It is by their fruits that we know them, not by their professions of belief. The Eagle Scout who declared himself an unbeliever (possibly because his parents were) had shown himself, by his conduct and deeds, to be a "religious" person, whether or not he believed in it. And the couple in New Jersey, who wanted to adopt the child they had cared for since birth, showed "loving-kindness" all too rare these days.

It is not a question of whether you believe in God so much as it is a question of whether God believes in you — that is, do you live your life in a way that a loving and just God would approve of? This is the essence of the religious attitude, not the forms or the prayers or the canons of belief; and this is precisely the attitude Jesus tried to bring to the legalistic and ritualistic Judaism of his time.

"Not every one that saith to me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven." Including millions who "believe in God" as a comfortable substitute for doing His will.

Militant Jews Alter Their Role

NEW YORK (AP) — "Never again!" cries the militant Jewish Defence League, determined to eradicate the Hitler-era image of Jews going to their deaths without a struggle.

The JDL's current role in the movement against alleged Soviet anti-Semitism is a long way from its days as a vigilante group protecting Jews in slum neighborhoods of Brooklyn.

"If people want to think of us as goons, I guess that's OK," says Rabbi Meir Kahane, founder and national chairman of the JDL who was arrested by police Tuesday. "Maybe that will help destroy the stereotype of Jews as patsies."

In recent months, JDL members have battled police, invaded the offices of Soviet agencies in New York and Washington, protested the appearance of Russian dancers and conducted demonstrations against the treatment of Soviet Jews.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For January 14

Your birthday today: You begin a busy year of serious challenge, competition, added responsibilities. You now learn to cope with tensions, emergency situations, short countdowns for major decisions. Experience also teaches you to withhold unnecessary comment. Your most productive path is to nourish your inner nature through meditation and prayer. Today's natives are inclined to be blunt-spoken, steadfast, militant personalities.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your impulse to haste and waste needs inner discipline. A competing person wishes to see you disconnected from your driving energy. Don't be thin-skinned.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Meet your obligations promptly, without hullabaloo. Attempts to push people into deals stir resistance, not results. Excitement in your group is fun, but doesn't get anything done.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Somehow control your temper and your tongue since it affects your career. Spending gets out of hand if you start it. Plan a solitary evening with a pastime.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Let money matters ride along without revision today. A story is circulating which you shouldn't believe. Make your views known, but without emotional pressure.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): Shake loose from inhibitions, strive for cheerful extrovert experience. Unexpected home or family expense is likely, also impulse buying that exceeds your budget.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): In today's complexities, take first things first and muddle through. Emotional tensions are generated by others' differences of opinions; try to soften any impact on yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22): Seek efficiency with orthodox methods in your work. Friends are off on notions you don't understand and much comment is likely. Reconciliation is within reach this evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The more you do, the more it seems you must do. Keep output within your means. A bid for a raise is unwise now. Your remarks are too blunt for some tastes; hold them down.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Pace your efforts to fit settled plans and don't rush. Impulse spending could upset your budget, checkmate a lengthy journey. Be cautious with mechanical things, vehicles.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): Almost any issue can create disagreement. Temper does not help judgment; stifle the impulse, let the longer view override the sting of the moment.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): A stronger personage differs with your theories. Friends are not quite committed in the dispute. See the differences and cope with them. Action without consideration is not desirable.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): This busy day is full of variety, strange sights, unplanned encounters. Overconfidence, haste are potentially troublesome, but subject to your control.

MRS. C. E. TUFFEY, 104 Woodridge Cresc., Ottawa
CAME MAXI DISCOUNTING AT LOBLAWS AND SHE CAME OUT AHEAD.

Comparing Loblaws MAXI DISCOUNT food prices with prices at the other food stores, Mrs. Tuffey says, "I think on a good many items Loblaws are cheaper—quite a bit cheaper in some instances. . . . Also I think their quality is very good—it's a nice store to shop in. The thing that caught my eye first of all was how nice Loblaws looks from the outside and then when I came in, the thing that impressed me at the very beginning was how lovely it's kept—the fruit and vegetables for instance are just shining and sparkling and I for one am quite taken by this. I haven't been shopping Loblaws for very long—but overall I find the quality excellent—and the prices . . . Well, I think there's quite a saving to be had here now."

F. Allore Resigns, Hearing Is Ended

'Sensible and Fair' Settlement - - Judge

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

The hearing into the suspension of separate school superintendent F. B. Allore terminated this morning with Mr. Allore's resignation.

The resignation took effect on its acceptance by the Hastings and Prince Edward Separate School Board last night.

Both parties, former and present trustees and staff and Mr. Allore, agreed to release each other from all legal responsibilities as a consequence of the suspension.

This means no civil suits can be brought by either party in consequence of events that occurred during Mr. Allore's employment or after his suspension.

The board agreed to pay Mr. Allore's salary for a year following the date of his suspension May 8, 1970. Since he had already been paid until Sept. 1, 1970, the sum remaining to be paid totals $9,048, take home.

Judge A. R. Campbell of Kingston, appointed by Ontario order-in-council to conduct the hearing, said both parties had "brought the matter to what is to me a sensible, practical and eminently fair conclusion".

The hearing, begun Dec. 21 in Kingston and resumed Monday morning at Hastings county court house, was adjourned until today at the request of solicitors for the board.

At its resumption this morning, Willard Esty of Toronto, board solicitor, said he had received instructions that completed the matter raised by Mr. Allore's solicitor, John Wintermeyer, Monday morning.

"The matter is terminated, the inquiry is no longer required,", Mr. Esty said, and read Mr. Allore's resignation.

He then read documents signed by Mr. Allore, trustees and senior staff members, in "personal and private capacity" releasing all legal liability.

Mr. Wintermeyer told the hearing it was not prudent for him to comment further, but the settlement would benefit "those most directly involved—the children".

He added his appreciation for "the patience, compassion and understanding" of Judge Campbell in the matter.

Before he terminated the hearing, Judge Campbell said he was gratified that the matter had ended with the voluntary compromise of the "unfortunate differences that have existed in recent months".

"I am personally happy that the unpleasantness of a hearing of formal evidence can now be completely dispensed with," he added.

"I congratulate members of the 1969-70 board and the 1971-72 board, as well as Mr. Allore, for their participation in events of recent days that have brought the matter to a sensible and fair conclusion," Judge Campbell said.

Later, Judge Campbell told the press that the essence of the dispute between the board and its superintendent was public business. But, he said, the public "has had nothing hidden from it due to the publicity given by the newspaper".

"The Allore case was frankly and openly stated in the brief he presented at the meeting called by his supporters," Judge Campbell told The Intelligencer.

"The board maintained its own counsel," he added.

Mr. Allore released a written statement to the press.

"The mutual settlement reached by myself and the board is in the best interests of the students in the schools," he said.

"I would like to take this opportunity to express my appreciation to all parents, citi-

Parley Faces Crisis

Agreement to Disagree Is Least That Will Do

SINGAPORE (CP) — Leaders of 31 countries opened the first Commonwealth conference in Asia and heard the host country warn today that failure to settle their differences over British arms sales to South Africa could lead to the destruction of the family of nations.

"If in the end consensus is not possible, we shall have to decide whether we can agree to disagree," Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew said at the start of a nine-day Commonwealth summit, the first held outside London.

"If we cannot contain our present differences over the proposed arms sales, then it is unlikely that the Commonwealth, as at present constituted, can long endure."

The plans of Britain's Conservative government to resume arms sales to South Africa is the stormiest question facing the conference. Some African nations have threatened to quit the Commonwealth or take economic sanctions against Britain if the arms deal goes through.

British Prime Minister Heath stuck to his guns on the eve of the conference, saying during a stopover in Malaysia that Britain must help South Africa counter a steadily mounting Soviet naval threat in the Indian Ocean.

Heath said Lee's opening address had set the stage for the talks "admirably."

At a press reception after the first summit session, Heath said the thoughts of Prime Minister Trudeau on the possible effects of a mass walkout to protest the arms proposal are not of concern to Britain.

Trudeau said Tuesday in New Delhi that if a number of countries leave the Commonwealth should Britain go through with the arms deal, the movement could set off a chain reaction, forcing Canada to break away.

"That is for Canada to decide," Heath said.

In drawing up the conference agenda, senior delegates tried to avoid an immediate clash over the South African arms question by making it the fourth item to be discussed, behind such topics as the world economic situation and the future of the Commonwealth. But there were reports that Zambia and other opponents of the arms deal might press for an earlier discussion of the question.

As the leaders assembled for the opening meeting, Heath sat by himself. Other prime ministers and presidents chatted animatedly around the 25-foot oval table in the Singapore Conference Hall, a modernistic, teak-

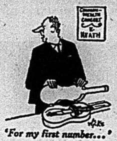
Number Of Idle Rises



'For my first number...'

OTTAWA (CP)—Unemployment jumped sharply last month to an estimated 538,000 from 476,000 in November and 383,000 a year earlier, with men over 24 — mostly family breadwinners — bearing the brunt.

The manpower department and the Dominion Bureau of Statistics said in a joint statement that the jump was "a normal seasonal increase," but there was an above-average increase in unemployment among mature men.

The increase in unemployment among young people—aged 14 to 24—was smaller than average last month, though it had risen markedly the previous month.

The increase last month sent both unemployment figures higher. The actual rate, as a percentage of the labor force, rose to 6.5 for December from 5.7 in November and 4.7 in December last year.

The seasonally-adjusted rate, calculated to take into account the holiday season and other factors which tend to upset the monthly count, rose to 6.6 per cent last month from 6.5 in November. It had been falling for three months, despite higher monthly estimates of the numbers of men and women without jobs.

The figures are compiled by DBS on the basis of a monthly survey of 30,000 households, and interpreted in the joint report by the manpower department.

The employment picture in brief:

	Dec. 1970	Nov. 1970	Dec. 1969
Labor force	8,329	8,400	8,095
Employed	7,791	7,924	7,712
Unemployed	538	476	383

Unemployment rose in all regions of Canada except British Columbia.

In actual terms, it rose to 8.3 per cent of the labor force in the Atlantic region, from 6.3 in November and 7.2 in December, 1969. Other increases were to 8.4 per cent from 7.2 and 6.7 in Quebec, to 4.7 from 4.0 and 3.1 in Ontario, and to 5.3 per cent from 4.7 and 3.3 in the Prairie provinces.

Unemployment in British Columbia fell to eight per cent of the labor force last month from 8.6 in November, but this was still sharply higher than 5.5 per cent in December last year.

British Envoy Still Captive

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (Reuter) — Police expressed growing doubts today that their search for British ambassador Geoffrey Jackson and his terrorist kidnappers would be successful.

Despite the detention of about 600 suspects since Tupamaro urban guerrillas snatched the 55-year-old diplomat at gunpoint Friday, police said no trace of him or his abductors had been found.

But troops and police kept up their house-to-house search as British diplomatic troubleshooter Oliver Wright, who flew in from London, prepared for more top-level talks with the Uruguayan government on efforts to obtain Jackson's release.

Wright was believed to have relayed to Pierano London's misgivings about Uruguay's tough line with kidnappers.

President Jorge Pacheco Areco has consistently refused to bargain with the guerrillas who still hold Brazilian Consul Aloysio Dias Gomide and U.S. agronomist Claude Fy.

They were kidnapped five months ago.

Four Caught Trying To Enter Parliament

LONDON (AP) — Police captured four men trying to break into the House of Commons today only hours before the cabinet reviewed security measures against political extremists who bombed the home of Employment Minister Robert Carr.

Aided by tracker dogs, 30 policemen searched Westminster Palace, the home of Parliament, after the arrests. They found glass-cutting equipment.

A custodian first spotted two men at the foot of Big Ben, the landmark timepiece that booms the hours above Parliament. He grappled with the pair while a third man dived through a window into a palace storeroom.

A Commons police officer joined the struggle. Police found the third man, dazed, in the storeroom and later arrested a fourth man, who drove off in a getaway car, across the Thames.

Police spread a cordon around Parliament Square while police launches sped along the shores of the Thames.

Special Branch detectives of Scotland Yard began a study of a new, tough security program. They will have to man whatever plan is adopted by the cabinet.

Under special scrutiny by detectives investigating the Carr bombing was a militant organization called The Angry Brigade.

Carr's Georgian-style home was blasted by two powerful time bombs late Tuesday night. He and his family escaped uninjured.

The angry Brigade last month claimed responsibility for an explosion at Carr's ministry.

The bombings Tuesday, and another in December, accompanied a wave of Communist-inspired worker protests against the Conservative government's anti-strike legislation. Carr is responsible for pushing the Industrial Relations Bill through Parliament.

Sedition or Literary Exercise?

Crown to Appeal Langevin Acquittal

MONTREAL (CP) — The Crown was expected to appeal today the acquittal verdict in the seditious libel case of Robert Langevin, 21-year-old student charged in connection with Quebec terrorism.

Langevin smiled with relief Wednesday when acquitted by a 12-man jury on a charge of publishing seditious libel on or about Oct. 11, 1970.

But Bruno Pateras a Crown prosecutor, told a reporter later he would appeal the decision today.

Meanwhile, Langevin, a junior college student from suburban Longueuil, was to reappear today for trial on three related charges.

Also scheduled to appear today in connection with the outlawed Front de Liberation du Quebec was Jean Boisjoly, accused of seditious conspiracy, illegal possession of firearms, membership in the FLQ and communicating statements on behalf of or as a representative of the FLQ.

Michel Lamarre; Langevin's lawyer, did not contest the Crown's contention that Langevin was responsible for "writing and distributing" a plan for the violent overthrow of the Quebec government.

But he argued that it was the work of an "impressionable" young man and "should not be taken seriously."

Evidence showed that Langevin wrote the plan for revolution in a school exercise book and gave it to a friend, Come Leblanc, also being held on FLQ charges.

Two other persons were present when the plan changed hands, but it was not determined in court whether they saw it

There was some argument over the wording of the charge —specifically the expression "distributing". The jury returned to Court of Queen's Bench for clarification and Mr. Justice Roger Oulmet said it is not defined in legal terminology and wondered whether it applied to the passing of a document to one person only.

Referring to a dictionary definition of the word, he said:

"I hope that those responsible for drawing up charges against an accused will use legal terminology in the future."

In his original instructions to the jury, Mr. Justice Ouimet told them they had to decide whether tc plan for revolution was "a literary exercise" or a seditious libel as charged.

He said Langevin should benefit from any reasonable doubt.

Chairman and Vice-chairman

Inquest Jury Recommends Compulsory Flares, Flashers

An inquest jury last night recommended that all army vehicles be equipped with flares and flashing lights to safeguard against accidents.

The recommendation was part of a verdict linking the death of a Kitchener father of six with a mishap involving a stalled, unlit militia truck more than a year ago on Highway 37 north of Belleville.

James Wesley Nevius, 33, was injured when his pickup truck collided with the rear of the militia vehicle, operated by the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, at the intersection of Thurlow township's third concession.

The delay in holding the inquest was caused by complicating factors surrounding the death of Mr. Nevius, a construction worker.

Mr. Nevius was released from Belleville General Hospital the day of the mishap — Dec. 22, 1969, — after laboratory tests and X-rays revealed no apparent injury.

Nearly three weeks later he was admitted to hospital in Kitchener for surgery on a bowel injury. He died Jan. 14 while being prepared for a second operation after his condition deteriorated.

The inquest jury last night blamed Mr. Nevius' death on peritonitis and hemorrhaging "due to a bowel rupture believed to have been caused by the accident Dec. 22."

The inquest, called by Coroner Dr. John Stock, was given this outline of events:

The military three-quarter-ton truck was enroute to pick up militia men for a winter training course at the Belleville armory when it stalled at the intersection before 7 a.m. Dec. 22.

Its driver, Robert David Renouf, 20, said he tried to restart the motor, but its batteries were weakening. To conserve power he switched off the truck lights, with no results. He saw a transport approaching and diverted it round his vehicle.

Noticing a pickup truck halted at the intersection he went to its occupants seeking help to push the stalled vehicle off the road. As he was talking to them, the pickup truck driven by Mr. Nevius drove up the highway and collided with the rear of the unlighted militia truck.

John Sherry, unit transport officer with the Hastings and Prince Edward regiment, said the militia truck was equipped with four-way flashers. However, these do not operate when the truck's lights are switched off.

"It's a safety device, I suppose, because of blackout driving," said Mr. Sherry.

The truck was not equipped with flares.

After the mishap Mr. Nevius, complaining of a pain in his pelvic area, was taken to BGH where he was examined by Dr. W. T. Hipwell, the physician on emergency call, and Dr. H. A. Mustard.

Mr. Nevius appeared normal, with no signs of shock, abnormal blood pressure on internal bleeding.

A urinalysis, X-ray and laboratory tests were made to check for internal bleeding and revealed no injuries.

Dr. Mustard said he felt Mr. Nevius should be observed further but — it was Christmas week— the man wanted to go home.

A bowel injury, explained Dr. Mustard, sometimes might not be immediately evident and its detection might need constant re-examination of a patient.

Both doctors, however, said they warned Mr. Nevius to check with a physician when he returned to Kitchener.

Const. Gary Phillips, the OPP officer who investigated the mishap, saw Mr. Nevius the same day before the man returned home to Kitchener.

While Mr. Nevius complained of a pain in his stomach, he "seemed to be fine."

"He seemed quite well as a matter of fact," said the officer.

Dr. Gerald Lansky, a Kitchener surgeon, said he operated on Mr. Nevius Jan. 8, after the man complained of rectal bleeding. Surgery revealed two lacerations in the main bowel which had become infected. The bowel was resectioned and Nevius "did quite well."

But five days later the bleeding returned and he was placed in intensive care and given transfusions.

The next day, said Dr. Lansky, Mr. Nevius' condition had considerably worsened. The man died while surgery was being prepared.

The jury recommended that "all trucks, including army vehicles, be compelled to carry flares, and be equipped with clearance lights and four-way flashers with independent switches"

Kroeze Elected Board Chairman

The new chairman of Hastings and Prince Edward Roman Catholic Separate School Board last night called for teamwork in the pursuit of equality of education for the children in the system.

Ben Kroeze, vice-chairman of the previous board, was elected 1971 chairman at the board's inaugural meeting at Nicholson Catholic College.

With a mystery - shrouded public hearing into board affairs scheduled to reopen the next morning, and a lawyer and former trustees waiting in the wings to go into closed debate with the newly constituted board, Mr. Kroeze began his address by remarking that "we know the first two years were difficult, to say the least."

"But I don't believe this board to be unique," he said "We started with experience on local school boards. But it is entirely different to be drawn together in one board. We now have the foundation and framework for a good school system."

Mr. Kroeze said that financial assistance from the province leaves much to be desired, but he promised to try to improve the situation.

"For two years we operated under a committee system and it didn't improve the operation of the board," he noted.

He proposed that the new board operate under a standing committee system, with temporary committees to be set up to handle specific issues as the need arises.

He promised to work toward close relations between the board and principals and the board and teachers.

"Only by communicating and all working as a team will we be able to provide quality education for our children," he concluded.

Paul Fleming, new to the separate school board but a former member of Hastings county board of education where he represented separate school supporters, was nominated by Joseph Chapelle, another new trustee, for the office of chairman.

When Mr. Kroeze was announced the winner of the two - way contest, Mr. Fleming moved that his election be considered unanimous.

Mrs. Lillian O'Connor of Marmora, beginning her second term on the board, was elected vice-chairman. Zdenek Kvarda of Belleville and Rev. Walter Hamilton of Picton were also nominated for the position, but Mrs. O'Connor scored a clear majority on the first vote.

Basement Entry In Break-ins

Belleville City Police are investigating two daylight break-ins discovered yesterday in private residences involving similar characteristics.

Chief Douglas Crosbie said that break-ins occurred in a Valleyview Crescent residence and a Parkdale Drive residence between the hours of 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

An engagement and wedding ring set valued at $350 was taken from the home of Gerald Calbury of 5 Valleyview Crescent. Centennial coins worth $4 were also taken.

Approximately $2.50 in dimes from a child's bank was stolen from the home of Douglas Young, 33 Parkdale Drive.

Both homes were entered by forcing a basement window.

zens, employees and trustees with whom I have had a fulfilling relationship over the past six years," the statement continued.

"My family and I shall find solace in the memories of this liaison and of the many kind and charitable people we have known."

Former trustee Robert Lucy of Belleville who consistently voted against the suspension of the superintendent, said that the mutual settlement satisfied him.

He noted that the resignation enables the board to seek a replacement for the superintendent.

Newly-elected board chairman Ben Kroeze said that Mr. Allore's resignation would not require department of education ratification. The suspension did require ratification, and this was withheld by the department. The public hearing was called by the department to inquire into and report on the suspension and provide the minister with information on which to base a decision whether to ratify the suspension or request the board to re-instate the superintendent.

Mr. Kroeze said after the hearing that the board would now advertise for a superintendent.

"But," he added, "No one will be available until next September."

Present in the courtroom this morning were Mr. Kroeze and trustee Rev. Louis Casartelli, four former trustees, four spectators and board business administrator Edgar Paquet.

Dissension Marks Inaugural Meeting

Separate School Board Members Appear to Agree to Disagree

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

The unmentioned subject uppermst in everyone's mind interrupted the inaugural meeting of Hastings and Prince Edward Roman Catholic Separate School Board last night at Nicholson Catholic College.

Newly sworn trustees skirted "the Allore situation" and the stalled public hearing into the suspension of their superintendent, resumed this morning at Hastings county court house.

But the appearance of the board's Toronto solicitor and three trustees of the former board who were defeated in the December election caused an abrupt adjournment of the meeting.

The approximately 25 spectators present to see the 12 trustees sworn in were left to sample the refreshments alone, as administrators, former and present trustees and the lawyer sealed themselves off in a private room.

But the sudden leave-taking was preceeded by 1½ hours of dissension that gave an indication of the unsettled state of separate school affairs in the two counties.

A split board shaped up before the eyes of spectators as the five new trustees argued every item of business point by point with the seven old-guard members of the 1969-70 board.

New trustees are Edward Courneyea of Tweed and Paul Fleming, John Granville, Joseph Chapelle and Zdenek Kvarda, all of Belleville.

Points of difference were policies, (or the lack of them), agendas (especially the items omitted from them), and closed meetings (specifically, the large number of them).

Signs of rough times to come were immediately apparent when the newly-inaugurated board was asked to approve minutes of the last meeting of the old board Dec. 29, 1970.

Mr. Chapelle interjected an objection.

"We don't know what went on at that meeting," he said. "Is it not the custom that new members be invited to the last meeting of the old board?"

Ben Kroeze, later elected as chairman for 1971, said board meetings are always open and the newly elected trustees could have attended.

(No public notification of the Dec. 29 meeting was given. The last advertised meeting of the separate school board was Dec. 22.)

Three new trustees, Chapelle, Granville and Courneyea, abstained from voting on the minutes on the grounds that they had no idea what they concerned.

Paul Fleming, formerly a trustee on the Hastings county board of education, then rose to ask if the board's bylaws and policies were available in handbook form. He said he spoke on the basis of his experience with another board, where trustees were provided with bylaws and lists of schools, their principals and their enrolments.

Mr. Kroeze replied that bylaws and policies were interspersed throughout the minutes of the board for the last two years. It would be one of the first jobs of a committee to bring them together, he indicated.

C. G. Mersereau, the board's supervisor of program, who has acted as its main academic administrator since the suspension of superintendent F. B. Allore last May, said a list of all resolutions had been compiled and would be passed out at the next meeting.

Rev. Louis Casartelli of Maynooth reminded new trustees that all such information was in the board office and it was up to them to "go in and see."

The next item of business brought Mr. Chapelle forward again in objection. It was a routine motion naming the board officers — a chairman, vice-chairman, secretary and treasurer.

The item, noted Mr. Chapelle, was not on the agenda, and "how can you expect members to vote on it on the spur of the moment?"

Several trustees said it was a routine motion to appoint signing officers.

"Then why was it left off if it is routine?" countered Mr. Chapelle.

"I suppose it was forgotten," replied the chairman.

Although Mr. Chapelle asked that the vote be held over until the next meeting, the motion was eventually passed.

Chairman Kroeze proposed a procedure for recording board actions and asked for a vote approving it.

The procedure calls for all motions to be written out by the mover and seconder and confirmed by the signature of the chairman and secretary; for all proceedings of meetings to be recorded on tape and in shorthand; for transcripts to be made of all tapes and the transcripts kept on file; and for a summary of all transcripts to be presented to trustees at the following meeting as minutes for approval.

It was Mr. Chapelle's turn again. He asked who had compiled the procedures and was told they were those used in 1970.

"They are the procedures of the old board," said Mr. Chapelle. "They should not be brought up without being on the agenda so we are prepared for them."

Mr. Fleming agreed with Mr. Chapelle. But, he said, the board had to have initial rules, and if those approved at the inaugural meeting were unsatisfactory they could be changed later.

The procedures were adopted by majority vote.

MORE

But Father Casartelli defended the authors of the incomplete agenda.

"I remind you that the old board ceased to exist on Dec. 31 and the new board did not take effect until a few minutes ago," he said. "With no one responsible; what did you expect?"

The remainder of the meeting was spent discussing meeting dates. New trustees learned that the board's custom was to hold one regular public meeting, and one "executive meeting" closed to the public each month.

Father Casartelli told new trustees that the executive meeting is a planning meeting, "because no fruitful meeting can be held without preliminary work".

"Items of business can be discussed at the executive meeting, thought about in the meantime and then presented for action at the regular public meeting," he said.

He proposed an executive committee, comprised of one trustee from each of the board's six zones, who would present business at the closed meeting and make recommendations.

He said all trustees were entitled to attend the executive committee meetings.

With an executive committee preparing the agenda for the regular monthly meeting, he said, it is not left to one individual to "put up whatever business he wants".

"We need time to size one another up," he said. "The executive meeting is the place to do this."

Mr. Kvarda called for a public meeting Jan. 19 to get on with the business of the board.

Mr. Fleming agreed.

He proposed that the chairman, secretary and treasurer make recommendations at the public meeting on those items they considered should be debated in closed session. The board would then vote on the recommendations.

The motion to make the Jan. 19 meeting public was defeated, with only trustees Chapelle, Courneyea, Fleming and Kvarda voting in favor.

Mr. Kvarda noted that "It is a big presumption that a committee of the whole (closed) meeting is necessary once a month.

"The public is made aware essentially of what is going on — but it has to wait a couple of weeks to hear it," rebuted Austin Scott of Trenton.

"I'm not in favor of any of these meetings being closed," reiterated Mr. Fleming. "It's time we opened the doors."

But before the vote was taken again, Mr. Fleming was reminded of another complication in the separate school board's functioning.

The fire marshall has restricted attendance in the basement board room to 20 people. Because a new meeting place large enough to accommodate the public could not be arranged before Jan. 19, trustees finally decided to hold the meeting in private.

Before breaking off to consider last year's unfinished business in caucus, trustees decided that the board's regular public monthly meetings will be held the first Tuesday of each month, beginning Feb. 2.

Focus on Singapore

The preliminary sparring is over and the Commonwealth countries are now getting down to actual talks in Singapore. There is this bogey about the sale of British arms to South Africa, but it is likely that common sense, and practical considerations, rather than raw emotionalism, will prevail ultimately, and that as a consequence the Commonwealth will survive.

For one thing, black Africa is not united in its determination to block the U.K.-South Africa deal. Let us look at some of the bread-and-butter reasons — at land-locked Lesotho for example whose prime minister, Chief Leabua Jonathan, has offered to serve as a go-between in settling the dispute. Formerly the British protectorate of Basutoland, and surrounded on all sides by South African territory, the 12,000-square mile kingdom with its population of less than a million has close ties with the republic. Dr. Anton Rupert, a leading South African industrialist and founder of an international tobacco group, is its honorary industrial advisor and several enterprises have been established since independence in 1966; one of these is a carpet weaving plant which exports to Canada among other nations. Before this fledgling industrial program got under way, Lesotho's principal income was derived from remittances by thousands of its citizens employed mainly in the goldfields of South Africa.

A medical program was also established when some of South Africa's leading medical specialists offered their services free in Lesotho. Under a scheme initiated by Dr. Rupert in 1968 more than 150 specialists render services in Lesotho, and medical students also assist there as well as in the neighboring states of Botswana and Malawi. In another South African aid project, some 200 Orange Free State farmers ploughed about 3,600 acres of land in two days of voluntary work in Lesotho.

Another black African state with which the republic maintains close links is Swaziland, on the border of Mozambique, and which may be expected to take a neutralist stance on the arms issue. South Africa also has an ally in Malawi's powerful leader, President Hastings Banda; he is one of the few black leaders to support the arms sale because of the Soviet presence in the Indian Ocean. On the other hand, Botswana's Sir Seretse Khama, who was in Johannesburg a couple of years ago for medical treatment and subsequently met Prime Minister Vorster, goes into the Singapore discussions opposed to the arms sale and in favor of self-determination for South Africa. As may be seen then, there are many facets to this conference, many points of view even among the black nations. As ever, self-interest and economics will be powerful factors in the deliberations.

Road to Moscow

Here is a thought for Prime Minister Trudeau when he finishes in Singapore and gets around to thinking about his coming, rescheduled, visit to the Soviet Union.

It is Soviet playwright and screen writer turned secret policeman Yuri Krotkov speaking — at the U.S. Senate's investigation into Soviet spy activities: "I am sorry to say to you western people this basic thing, this axiom: when you are coming to the USSR, you must control each of your moves, each of your actions."

Testifying under the name George Karlin which he now uses, the former KGB agent told of the role women play in Soviet intelligence operations. Dubbed "swallows" by the KGB they belong to what Karlin described as a "colossal institute of co-opted Soviet girls with different appearances, different talents."

It seems that some had been detailed to make the acquaintance of members of the Canadian embassy staff, among others, but our people were not having any of that nonsense. In any event, we are sure the Prime Minister will entertain no illusions about Trudeaumania having any following in Moscow. There may have been females seeking his autograph in Pakistan, but in Moscow he may be lucky if he gets polite applause. As for the swallows, they likely have long since taken off for Russia's sunny south. As a VIP moreover, Mr. Trudeau will surely be spared the attentions of the KGB — although who knows, there may be the odd microphone lurking in the corner of his bedroom!

Winnipeg's Ed Osler on Warpath

Less Power for Toronto and Montreal Is His Aim

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA—Enough is enough, and finally Winnipeg Liberal Edmund Boyd Osler has had it with what he protests is the almost complete domination of the Government — and so, of Parliament — by Toronto and Montreal.

Not by the two cities proper themselves, but by their sprawling metro areas.

And instead of just sitting there and complaining — as do so many other MPs, of all parties, who do not come from "Big T." as Toronto calls itself, or Montreal with no nickname — Ed Osler is trying to get something going to loosen, if not break the stranglehold on federal power of the twin megalopoles.

He proposes changing some of the rules of the game of party politics as it is played on the floor of the House of Commons, to give MPs from Small City, Home Town and Rural Canada something more than the faint voice they have in whatever direction Parliament exercises.

Specifically he wants the freeing of MPs to vote as they feel on all legislation and Government policy proposals.

The idea is pretty far-reaching.

But realist Osler has a built-in safeguard for it that he hopes just might make it more acceptable to the Government.

It would work like this . . .

. . . if the Government were defeated on a piece of key legislation or an issue involving fundamental policy, it would not necessarily be the end of the administration.

. for there would be the option open to the Government to offer a non - debatable motion of confidence.

. that way, an MP could vote against a particular piece of legislation with which he disagrees for regional or other reasons, but at the same time support the Government on its general policies.

The Government would still have the right or option to accept the particular defeat on the individual piece of legislation as an expression of want-of-confidence, or ask for the confirming vote of confidence.

Any party's real discipline springs from the Prime Minister's exclusive right to seek dissolution and go for a general election — which, suggests the inventive Mr. Osler, would keep a tight curb on any reckless voting and compel every MP to think twice on every vote.

Such a change of rules too drastic as to be unrealistic, unbelievable, and so, utterly unacceptable?

Perhaps, if it had not been the even more unbelievable change in rules worked by former Prime Minister Lester Pearson who, when defeated in Parliament on a budget bill — until then bringing only automatic ouster and an election — conned the Conservatives into giving him "time out" and the Creditistes into going for "second counts" on the first vote.

So if that could happen — and did — cannot just about anything?

But why would it all be desirable, or even necessary, in Ed Osler's visionary eyes?

Because from the very outset of Confederation, he is convinced, the constitutional dice were loaded for Ontario and Quebec

Since then, year after year, more and more, they have been re-loaded still for Ontario and Quebec, but especially for the great and still-growing metropolitan agglomerations of Toronto and Montreal.

In the Government caucus, notes Ed Osler who, coming from Winnipeg, might be expected to have the "Big Metro" view of things, Toronto has 25 MPs and four Cabinet ministers, and Montreal has more than 30 members and seven in Cabinet including the Prime Minister

The West? Count 'em, only 13 Liberals. So who listens to them? And that is the whole West, Prairies and Coast.

And the Maritimes? Seven.

So what happens?

Canada suspects Ed Osler, reduces to Montreal Island and its south shore with maybe a fringe of the Eastern Townships and to "Big T" which reaches around the industrial rim of Lake Ontario from Oshawa through Burlington, to Hamilton and beyond.

Ottawa?

Bytown - on - the - Rideau, and since that dynamo in skirts, ex - Mayor Charlotte Whitton left City Hall, better known, especially in the Jean Marchand conception of the National Capital, as a suburb on Hull.

Regional interests — all the rest of Canada, from Oshawa north and west to Vancouver Island, and from Montreal east to the tip of Newfoundland — get lost in the great federal hangup of concern over the well - being of the two megalopoles.

Or, as Ed Osler, the scion of a wealthy and aristocratic Manitoba clan, so elegantly phrases it, "we all get screwed."

He has gone on to the Commons Order Paper with a resolution calling for a House study of his free vote proposal to "unscrew" the country.

Senate in Study of Constitution

Vancouver Sun

The drug, media and women's lib road-shows are hard acts to follow, and the special joint committee of the Senate and Commons on the constitution of Canada, whose very title induces drowsiness, seems to know it.

Even in this age of participatory democracy, there's a special folksy come-to-meeting twang to the ads announcing the committee's hearings in Vancouver that fair tugs the heart.

Just come in out of the cold and sit a spell if you haven't anything to offer, the committee pleads, as if it goes without saying that after sex, mind-blowing and managed news a topic as devoid of kicks as the constitution isn't going to attract many live ones.

If this reading is right, it would be too bad. Even if federal roadshows like this one do no more than educate our lawmakers to the fact that the public is miles ahead of them on almost every critical issue, we may be about to play host to the most significant forum of them all.

Because — prophetically — at the top of the list of questions on which the committee would like a "friendly exchange of views" is the future of our cities.

The provincial government apparently isn't deigning to make a submission or, if it has one up its sleeve, the joint committee's advance party hasn't heard of it. The city of Vancouver, on the other hand, has prepared a brief which is expected to be approved by council on Wednesday for presentation to the hearing. If it says little that hasn't been said before, this is no fault of Alderman Art Phillips and the special city council constitutional status committee. The problem of our cities has never been a lack of known solutions but a lack of action on implementing them.

Cities should be "recognized as a proper third level of government with clear-cut fields of legislative authority and taxing powers."

There it is, in a nutshell. And because, constitutionally, the municipalities are wards of the provinces, it will require constitutional measures to free them from the rural-biased grip of the provinces in order to meet effectively their immense and rapidly-growing problems.

Clearly, provinces such as B.C. aren't readily going to share anything with anybody. But recognition of the civic partnership must come, and it will come sooner if forums such as the Senate-Commons committee are told loud and clear the sort of Canada that the people want.

"Open Line" Programs

Editor,

The Intelligencer.

Open line programs on the radio can be very interesting and informative if conducted well by the right person. People like to know what others think.

The main role on such programs is usually played by the moderator, who is also the undisputed "boss." He who holds the "mike," controls the conversation. If differences of opinions persist, the moderator should not insist to be right every time, nor should he try to be the judge, nor have the last word. There is nothing more boring than a self-righteous person who is unable to take any contradiotory opinion.

For instance, when a caller explains the reason why Britain's lifeline should not be threatened by Russia, the man should not be interrupted with such remarks as: "What about our own experts, are they all wrong?" He should be given a chance to answer before being cut off, even if only to say a few words, such as, for example: "What about the British experts, are they all wrong?"

A good conductor deserves public support, but the public also deserves fair play.

Canadians Have Better Protection

Bankruptcy Hit More Than 100 U.S. Brokers in 1970

By IRVING C. WHYNOT
Canadian Press Business Editor

More than 100 brokerage houses in the United States disappeared during 1970 and many investors found their money and stock certificates tied up for long periods of bankruptcy proceedings.

Such failures are unlikely in Canada, says Babson's Canadian investment letter, but investors should still beware of an "it-can't-happen-here attitude."

"The traditional advice remains the best: Keep personal control of your own money and certificates. Obtain delivery of certificates and keep them in a safety deposit box at a bank or trust company.

"Withdraw idle money from free credit balances in brokers' accounts and put it to better use. Don't buy on margin."

The relative strength of the Canadian brokerage business is best demonstrated by the fact that no investment house went into bankruptcy during the year while in the U.S. an estimated 25,000 investors had their assets frozen by bankruptcy proceedings.

Canadian firms didn't weather the market glut without problems. A rule of thumb is that Toronto Stock Exchange members need a daily volume of three million industrial mining shares to make a profit.

Trading during the first half of the year dropped 50 per cent from 1969 levels and brought some cuts in staff and pay cuts for senior personnel. Trading in late July was of ten below a million shares a day.

President John Kimber of the TSE says that in the eight months to the end of October more than half of the exchange's member firms suffered losses.

"The exchange's close surveillance of the capital position of members and prompt action by member firms to recognize problems and take corrective action helped prevent any serious problems of solvency," he said.

"The membership as a whole appears to have come out of the period of slow and declining markets in excellent shape."

Another reason Canadian brokers weathered the storm better than their American counterparts is a difference in the capital structure regulations for brokers in the two countries.

Partners in U.S. firms may use personally-owned securities to buy into firms. In Canada, partners must use cash although they can use securities as a collateral for a loan.

Babson's says "the wisdom of the Canadian policy was borne out in the recent decline."

"Despite all the regulations and supervision, clients with large free-credit balances in a brokerage house could find themselves in difficulties if a member of the TSE went under," says Babson's.

"If a house were to find itself in difficulty, clients' free-credit balances and securities . . . could be tied up for a lengthy period."

Just in case the worst does happen, Canadian investors have another bulwark against personal loss. The four major Canadian exchanges and the Investment Dealers' Assocation set up a national contingency fund of $1.5 million to protect clients of member houses against loss during a bankruptcy.

Even if the loss topped $1.5 million, the five participants have the authority to make extra levies on their members for additional money.

"Regulations and practices will likely be tightened up under the more hawk-eyed scrutiny of critical investors and less tolerant public authorities," Babson's says.

"Nevertheless, personal possession of one's own certificates and money remains the safest policy."

Trenton Group First in Quinte

TRENTON (Staff) — Public support is so great that a branch of the Association for Children with Learning Disabilities will be established here.

More than 80 people attended a meeting in the Lions Club hall last night to discuss the prospect of organizing to help perceptually handicapped children.

Mrs. June Bailey of Trenton, one of the meeting's organizers, termed public response to the idea "remarkable" and concluded that a branch will be set up here.

Support for the new branch comes from three groups — parents, the medical fraternity and teachers, 17 of whom attended last night's meeting.

Addressing what will be the Trenton ACLD, Mrs. Dorothy Blakely of Belleville special education consultant for the Hastings County School Board, pointed out that the group here is the first of its kind to be formed in the Quinte area.

"There is a way for these children to learn, it is just a matter of trying to find the way" Mrs. Blakely said.

She explained that the Hastings County Board of Education now considers special education programs a priority item and a solid start has been made to give proper attention to such children.

"If we can keep the student - teacher ratio down and have improvement teachers to help them, this would help a great deal," she said.

A summer course in special education will be held in Belleville during the year to introduce more teachers to methods of dealing with the perceptually handicapped and another course at the intermediate level will be held at a later date.

There are four special education classes in Trenton currently. "We have not got enough but they are increasing in number," Mrs. Blakely added.

One Trenton teacher in the audience stated that it has been her experience that "many parents will not go to the school to discuss it (their child's learning handicap)". A Stirling teacher retorted that this was not the case in her village.

Mrs. Bailey concluded that "not only the children need special education but the parents and teachers too. It is essential to keep up communications".

Winterama Sunday

TRENTON (Staff) — The town's second annual Winterama snowmobile races will be held this Sunday at Bain Memorial Park.

Thirty races will be held during the afternoon over a quarter-mile course on the Bay of Quinte.

Participation in racing events will be determined by the engine capacity of the vehicles.

Weather permitting, a para-jump display by members of the Trenton Skydivers Club will open the day's activities at 1 p.m.

Two other special events will be featured on the Kiwanis-sponsored program — a relay race between teams of four snowmobiles over a two mile course and a competition race by members of the local news media.

A refreshment booth will be set up in the park and horse-drawn sleighs will give free rides to children.

Public relations man for Winterama, Don Webb, says, "snowmobiles are often abused but Winterama provides an ideal opportunity to have them used properly".

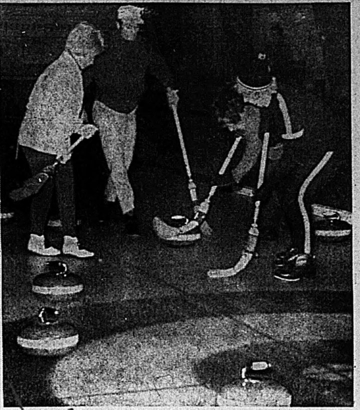
Water Rate Boost Is Five Cents

The Belleville Public Utilities Commission charges a basic minimum water rate of $2.85 per month to householders.

For every 1,000 gallons consumed over the basic amunt alowing use of up to 5,000 gallons, the consumer will be charged 43 cents.

This is an increase of five cents over the old rate of 38 cents per 1,000 gallons.

The new rate will go into effect March 1.



Tests His Work

Clarence "Shortie" Jenkins, the man who keeps Trenton Curling Club ice in top shape, is also an avid curler. As skip of one club team, he directs fellow members as they sweep a rock into the house.

Arena Heating Adjusted

Recent complaints about the frigid temperature during hockey games at the Belleville arena have had results.

Committee members feel they would never be able to satisfy all customers, but a new schedule setting out the times and sections during which heat will be on at the arena has been approved for a trial period.

Spectator complaints generally have been that the arena temperature is too cold, but on the other hand the players, especially during senior hockey games when crowd body heat serves to warm the air, complain that it is too hot.

Also in some sections, the electric heaters have been warm enough to start melting the ice.

Recreation director Lorne Williams noted that most of the complaints about the lack of arena heat come from elderly residents.

He suggested that a policy might be worked out under which these people could be sold seats in specific sections where the heat would always be on.

Drug Seizure One of Largest

A Belleville man was remanded in custody yesterday in provincial court on charges of possession of narcotics under the Narcotics Control Act.

Charged with possession of one half pound of marijuana was Stephen Edward Dunning, 24, of 263½ Foster Ave.

Police also found 62 tablets of an as yet unknown substance following a search at the Foster Street residence. Members of the Belleville City Police and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police were involved in the search.

Chief Douglas Crosbie said that the drugs were "one of the department's largest seizures."

Westerners Brought Curling to Quinte

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

TRENTON (Staff) — The ice is in top shape at Trenton Curling Club now and the big events of the year will soon get under way.

Three major bonspiels are slated for the next six weeks - the Molson's Mixed this coming weekend, the ninth annual Bay of Quinte Mixed (January 28-31) and the Bay of Quinte Mens' (February 26-28). Both the Bay of Quinte bonspiels will be hosted jointly by Trenton, CFB and Belleville clubs.

Curling has been popular in Trenton for about 14 years. However, interest in the old Scottish sport has mounted considerably over the period.

The sport got started locally at the air station in 1956, when the first rink in the Quinte area was opened there.

Curling enthusiasts from both Belleville and Trenton used the forces' facility until 1958 when club rinks were built in each of the municipalities. The curling club here was built in conjunction with the town golf club, a feature of Trenton sporting life since 1927.

Support for curling in the region was due to the presence of people from the Western provinces at the airport and in town, curling club spokesmen say.

"They spread the word and you can see what happened" one local curler said.

Trenton curlers have won some distinction. Last season, senior men from the King Street rink took top honors in their Ontario Curling Association division that includes such communities as Peterborough, Cobourg, Belleville and Kingston.

What distinguishes the Trenton Curling Club more than anything else is the condition of the ice itself.

Preparing and tending the ice is the job of Clarence "Shortie" Jenkins who doubles as greenskeeper for the golf club during the summer.

Mr. Jenkins contends that the sand base used on the Trenton rinks is superior to to the concrete used elsewhere.

Ice was laid here over a two - week period beginning September 28 and it is now "true and keen — the best ice in Ontario" one member reports.

Once a week, each of the four sheets of ice is scraped down in a lengthy process. Additionally, the ice is dragged daily and the frost removed.

Keeping an ice surface in top condition is an art. Shortie Jenkins feels that knowledge of the game is essential to the job.

A curler himself, he says that "a person should be a curler to be an icemaker".

Trenton's curling club has a wide range of league competition spread throughout the winter weeks.

There is mixed curling on Wednesdays and Fridays, mens' on Tuesdays, business mens' on Tuesdays, business womens' on Mondays, ladies' on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Industrial leagues also use the Trenton ice during the week. These have been organized for eight years and have grown considerably.

If local industry favors curling, local students do not. No junior program is conducted by the club.

Harry Richardson, the club's curling director, said that local high school students had shown little interest in the game but "we would like to get them out."

Trenton curlers are enthused about this competitive season — 175 are out on that ice "faster than ever — the best in Ontario."

Plans Being Made For Quinte Fair

This year (1971) is the 150th anniversary of the Quinte Exhibition and plans are already under way for special attractions to mark the fair's century and a half of progress.

At their annual meeting held at city hall last night, fair board members were told that attempts are being made to line up a "space age" personality to officially open the fair to be held August 17-21.

Attempts are also being made to have the famed RCMP Musical Ride as a feature fair attraction, while Conklins will bring in an old-time midway for the enjoyment of fair-goers.

Fair Manager Everett Gowsell said this year's midway would feature several "old-time" rides, as well as contemporary attractions. Also there would be a few "way out" rides for the space age enthusiasts.

Reports from the various fair committee heads were heard at last night's meeting.

The financial report showed a total of 34,988 paid admissions for last year's fair, while total traffic, including all non-paid admissions was said to have been 82,791—the highest in the fair's history.

Last year's fair was also a financial success.

Fair manager Gowsell said the fair last year "finished in the black", with an amount of $10,000 being set aside for payment of the board's second half comitment of $20,000 toward the costs of the Ben Bleecker Auditorium. Also the board's capital reserve fund for building purposes has been increased by approximately $7,000.

Mistakes Only Useful If One Learns from Them

By DORIS CLARK

Don't re-invent the wheel: it's been done. Needless advice? Not if you keep doing the same stupid things over and over.

Mistakes are natural, but only useful if you can learn from them. As in wheel re-inventors or mistake re-makers. — Bob Ludwig, — Idea Clinic, Vancouver.

• • •

Dear Doris: As a teen-ager I was very fat and didn't get any dates. When I was 16 I met X who was five years older than I and we soon got engaged. When I got a job in an office I met Y who was my age and I thought he was great. Yet when I went home I was still engaged and through family pressure I went through with a marriage.

Our marriage has never really worked. We fight a lot. Now I have met a boy younger than I and I think I love him.

When I get home at nights, I find X has messed up the house, muddy tracks on the floor, ashes overturned. I am irritable and dissatisfied and I feel I have a very dead marriage.

How long does a person have to be separated before she can apply for a divorce? — Ready to Scream.

Dear Ready: Sounds like a comedy of errors. Because you were fat you took the only boy who was interested. When love came along you were afraid even then to make your claim for a happy life. It seems almost inevitable that you would meet other young men who would attract you.

DORIS CLARK

Grounds for divorce now include "marriage breakdown," whatever that is taken to mean. One of its possibilities is separation for three years.

You'll need a lawyer to help you avoid difficulties over property or the custody of your boy. Once you leave your husband you can file suit for divorce.

• • •

Dear Doris: I go out with a half-breed. If my parents knew this they would kick me out of the house. His father and mother have broken up and his brothers have a bad reputation.

My parents think he is wild but he is not. He is one of the nicest guys I know and I have been going out with him for two years. I am 16 years now and I can't stand to go without seeing him.

In four years he wants to marry me. We'll know for sure then. — Needing Help.

Dear Needing Help: Aside from the question of nationality and clandestine dating, 16 is simply too young to be going steady with anyone. You will be more likely to "know for sure" if you find out what other boys are like.

Believe it or not, your ideas will change and mature. A completely different person may be waiting for you to show up in his life.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Step by Step Method in Making Headcheese

By MARY MOORE

When callers walked into our kitchen that day asking "What's cooking?" I would answer "Just lift the lid of the deep well cooker." Then I would watch as their eyes popped on seeing two pig's eyes staring and a snout pointed up at them. They slammed the lid back on and fast.

Although she is an opthalmologist I knew my niece Beverley did not have time to investigate a pig's eye to say nothing of its whole head which she had acquired after a suckling pig Christmas party. So I took it on.

I should explain that the 19-lb. piglet was too big for the host's oven so he lopped off its head before roasting and gave it to Beverley after the party.

Determined headcheese-makers (and there are plenty in Canada) can follow this method step by step. Those who do not want anything to do with a pig's head but do want headcheese can make theirs by substituting fresh port hocks (see below).

HEADCHEESE

1 quart — 5-cup-mould)

Head from 19-lb. piglet (OR 4 lbs. pork hocks)
1 bay leaf
1 tsp. salt (first amount)
2 tbsps. chopped onion (OR bottled flakes)
2 tbsps. (2 envelopes) plain gelatine
1½ tsps. salt (second
⅛ to ¼ tsp. pepper
⅛ tsp. garlic salt

My pig's head was split at the base but tongue was still attached.

Wash head and lower into soup kettle. Add bay leaf, salt (first amount), onion and cold water to barely cover. Bring to boil, reduce heat to simmer and cook covered five hours, turning head over at half-time. Cool in cooking liquid. Lift out head onto utility tray. Strain and chill liquid.

Carefully and patiently remove all meat from head discarding bones, ears, rind and all fat. Liquid will jell when chilled and make it easy for you to skim all fat that gathers on top. Do the same if you use pork hocks instead of head.

Chop meat including tongue finely. I had two cups packed and three and one-half cups skimmed jellied broth.

Measure out one cup broth and to it add the gelatine and heat stirring to dissolve gelatine. Add remaining broth and the salt (second amount;, pepper and garlic salt and chopped meat. Stir to blend well. Turn into 1-qt. mould and chill until firmly set. This turns out beautifully and slices excellently and serves seven or eight. I served ours with mustard pickles.

Ann Landers

Money Does Not Sweeten Sorrow

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Several weeks ago you used Rose Kennedy as an example of great courage. You expressed admiration for "this woman of indomitable spirit who refuses to be defeated." I'd like you to know there are thousands of women in this country who have had plenty of tragedy in their lives but who didn't have a hundred million bucks to help sweeten their sorrow. Money can go a long way to calm the nerves and heal a broken heart.

ANN LANDERS

It burns me up the way rich people always get praised for handling adversity. Whoever said money talks knew what he was talking about. — NO KENNEDY WORSHIPPER.

DEAR N.: If you believe money can sweeten sorrow you have a great deal to learn about life. The rich mother who loses a child does not suffer less because she has money. Heartache is no respector of bank accounts.

How many mothers, rich or poor do you know who have lost a daughter in a plane crash and three sons — one in the uniform of his country and two who were murdered by assassins? And how many 80-year-old women do you know who have the magnificent carriage, the diginity and the indefatigable energy of Rose Kennedy? In case you have the idea that I am speaking up for a friend you are wrong. I have never met Mrs. Kennedy.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: With divorce epidemic in this country, millions of stepmothers and stepfathers are facing problems virtually unheard of 25 years ago. I have read so many letters in your column recently dealing with this dilemma that I would like to tell you how I solved mine.

I was one of those protective mothers who took my son's side every time he had a disagreement with his stepdad. Our home was a battle zone. Finally I took a good look at the situation and I saw a boy growing up with no respect for authority. I also saw a clever kid who was getting what he wanted by playing on my guilt because I had deprive dhim of his natural father. I realized he had succeeded in driving a wedge between me and my husband and in the end, we would all be losers.

I decided to let my husband discipline the boy and I vowed to stand behind him — right or wrong. Sometimes I go into the bathroom and just stay there to keep from interfering. The results have been remarkable. The boy and his stepdad now get along famously. My son is no longer testing limits to see how far be can go. I am no longer being used as a battering ram and a refuge.

This last year has been my happiest. The boy is happier, too. My husband feels like a father and the head of the house. It was not an easy lesson to learn. My only regret is that I didn't learn it sooner. — TOGETHER AT LAST.

DEAR TOGETHER: A letter from someone who has solved a problem is far more meaningful than advice from Ann Landers. Thank you for writing.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The correspondent who signed herself "Natalie" is a lucky lady. She described her children's granny as a no bra, platinum blond swinger who wears 20 pounds of costume jewelry and spends her time is beauty salons. My children have a granny and a gramps who have been drunk for 30 years. This pair of kooks has ruined every holiday as far back as I can remember.

One day will you please devote a column to alcoholism disguised as "social drinking?" — MARION, OHIO.

DEAR MARION: I have and I will do so again. Alcoholism has wrecked more marriages, careers and healthy bodies than any single element known to man.

Family Dinner Held To Mark 50th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Slingerland hosted a family dinner party recently at the Hotel Quinte, Belleville to mark the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary.

The bride of 50 years ago was the former Minnie Elizabeth Lyons and she was assisted by her sister Laura Wannamaker who was her attendant at that time. Best man was the late Ted Slingerland, brother of the "bridegroom" and for this special event George Wannamaker of Deseronto assisted.

Their son, Lawrence was master of ceremonies for the proceedings and the blessing was said by his brother-in-law Gerald Cherry. A few brief remarks were given by Cecil Canham, brother-in-law of the "bridegroom" and George Lyons of Deseronto, brother of the "bride."

Following the dinner they left in a shower of confetti enroute to their daughters, Mrs. Gerald Cherry of Belleville, where all enjoyed a wine and cheese party.

The next day Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Slingerland of Acton, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Cherry of Belleville and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Berner of Lockport, N.Y., were hosts and hostesses at an "Open House" at the residence of the honored guests in Frankford.

Guests were served by grandchildren Sandra, Debra, Kathy and Margaret Ann Slingerland and Janice and Richard Cherry. Pouring tea at this time were Mrs. Earl Stickle, Mrs. Ernie Wallace, Mrs. Lyle Twiddy, Mrs. Walter Morrow, Mrs. Joe Carr and Mrs. Gus Plumpton.

Out of town guests were present from Quebec City, Ottawa, Lockport, N.Y., Edmonton, Acton, Bramalea, Toronto, Oshawa, Deseronto, Brighton, Belleville and Stirling.

Three Survive

Baby and Youth Are Frozen In Three-day Ordeal in Snow

HOPE, B.C. (CP) — A husband and wife and their two-year-old daughter were recovering today from severe frostbite after spending three days huddled in the snow in a wilderness tragedy that cost two lives.

A five-year-old son and a youth believed to be the brother of the woman froze to death on the lonely road to Ross Lake about 100 miles east of Vancouver.

Everett Davidson, his wife Alice, their daughter and son and Mrs. Davidson's brother, all of Surrey, a Vancouver suburb, turned off the Trans-Canada Highway Sunday night on to the Ross Lake road.

They intended to go ice-fishing on the lake, on the Canada-U.S. border.

About halfway to the lake Mr. Davidson's truck went off the road and became stuck in deep snow. He tried to get the vehicle out in several attempts, but his battery failed.

Hope RCMP said he started walking toward the lake in the middle of a blizzard. There is no settlement at the lake. He eventually gave up and returned to the truck.

Later that night he started toward Hope. After walking all night in near-zero temperatures, he gave up again and began walking back to his family.

About seven miles from the truck he met them walking toward him. Mrs. Davidson's brother apparently continued on in the direction of Hope while the Dovidson family turned back.

Snowplow operator Ron Andrews said Wednesday he and his partner John Guiteriez had left Hope at 11 a.m. They plowed several miles of the road, stopped for lunch, and about 12 miles in came across tracks.

"Just out of nowhere, we took it for some animal," Mr. Andrews said.

They continued plowing, following at times two sets of tracks, then four. He said later the parents must have carried the children at times.

The snowplow crew first saw the mother and her two children huddled in the road. He said Mrs. Davidson told him: "One is dead and one is almost dead."

Less than a mile farther they found Mr. Davidson in the cab of the immobilized truck. With their truck, they hauled it out of the deep snow and pushed it until the motor started.

Mr. Davidson drove down the road and picked up the rest of the family. He told the snowplow crew of his brother-in-law and the plow went back toward Hope searching for him.

"I spotted him and he was frozen," said Mr. Andrews. He had taken shelter beneath a tree, 12 miles from Hope.

Benson Explains Bank Deal

OTTAWA (CP)—Finance Minister Edgar Benson said Wednesday that government authorization for the Mercantile Bank of Canada to increase its business is tied to a bank commitment to become 75-per-cent Canadian-owned within 10 years.

Otherwise, the bank's request to increase its liabilities would have been refused, Mr. Benson said in a Commons reply to David Lewis, deputy New Democrat leader.

Mercantile now is wholly owned by the First National City Bank of New York.

Mr. Lewis sought more details on the government authorization. He said the government was freeing the bank from restrictions of the Bank Act but allowing it to remain under foreign control.

Mr. Benson said the net effect was to have Mercantile, the only foreign-owned chartered bank in Canada, come under majority Canadian ownership.

Manufacturing Association

Fight Pollution or Die, Society Told

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

"Pollution is probably the most relevant of present social issues," said Jean Cormier of Dominion Foundries and Steel Ltd., addressing the Quinte - St. Lawrence Branch of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association at the Hotel Quinte Tuesday.

He claimed social issues are incongruous if the problem of pollution is not taken into effect.

He asserted that if the affluent society which produced the pollution doesn't combat it, there might not be an affluent society, or any society at all.

He reported his firm produces 2¼ million tons of steel annually, sold for $350 million. In Hamilton, at one time there were 19 tons of pollutants escaping into the air every day.

"We've been fighting pollution for 20 years now . . . long before it became popular to do so." The cost of this fight is given as $28 million.

Through installation of modern control devices, the escaping pollutants have been reduced by four tons, he said. The goal set for Dofasco by the Air Management Branch of the Province of Ontario is two tons per day.

All three panelists, including Robert J. Keir, senior information officer from the aforementioned AMB and Friedl Bellstedt, assistant distillery manager of Corby Distilleries Ltd., agreed the pollution fight takes time.

Mr. Bellstedt explained that Corby's has eliminated their expended pollutants by 99.9 per cent by use of byproduct recovery and waste treatment.

The byproducts of the produced liquid spirits are disposed of for cattle fodder, "rich in organic matter" or "by recovering its solid content as a marketable product."

He stated that "Corby Distilleries has operated a complete byproduct plant for many years and in this way we have demonstrated this first and most logical step in pollution abatement."

"The joint result of these efforts is that the Moira River is as healthy a body of water downstream from us as it ever was, and that fish and other aquatic life thrive in it."

He advised that all the facts must be obtained before attempting to combat pollution.

"Such a survey may well show, as in our case, that only a fraction of your wastes require treatment," he said.

Mr. Keir indicated one of the government's most notable attempts to alert the public was the establishment of pollution index and alert centres.

One guest asked what success Canadian government had had in controlling the problem of automobile pollution.

"Legislation for the 1969 cars was enforced to bring about a reduction of 30 per cent of the emissions."

However, we "don't know if we are successful . . . no concrete results have been announced yet," from provincial government random checks of automobiles run at the rate of "80 per week during the winter, in Toronto, and 140 per week in the summer."

Another question raised was to what degree pollution control is being brought about by the Canadian and American governments.

Mr. Keir said: "Ontario is considered farther ahead than any of the others" although "the provinces are working together and co-operating more than they did 10 years ago. Again, we can't make comparisons as to who is actually ahead and who isn't."

One of the last questions directed to the panel was whether industry should expect municipalities to make awards for attempts to combat pollution locally.

Mr. Cormier stated his opinion that it would be "unrealistic of any organization to expect grants from any municipality because the municipalities have fantastic financial problems as it is."

He asserted that it was the consumer who will have to bear the brunt of the expense.

"It's a great idea but I don't think it will happen."

In No Shape to Protest

Oxford University, Britain's oldest and most respected university, has never been disrupted by student protest. The 800-year-old seat of learning is made up of 23 self-governing colleges and the cell-like structure provides no central point which could be attacked by agitators. (CP Photo)

Long-expected Export Sales Slowdown Comes in December

OTTAWA (CP) — A long-expected slowdown in Canadian export sales was recorded for December, but a preliminary tally for the whole year shows record exports valued at $16,887 million in 1970.

A report Wednesday by Dominion Bureau of Statistics values total exports in December at $1,376 million, down by about four per cent from the revised total of $1,431 million for December, 1969.

That is the first year-to-year decline in the monthly figures since exports in August, 1969, fell marginally below the tally for August, 1968.

Adjusted to discount the usual seasonal fluctuations so month-by-month comparisons may be made, the December value of $1,312 million was the lowest of the year, down from a peak of $1,479 million in November.

Analysts had been predicting since the middle of last year that the early-1970 upsurge in exports would not last, but sales held up, against expectations, until last month.

Because of the December slowdown, the annual total on a preliminary count just missed the $17-billion mark.

The 1970 total of $16,887 million was 13 per cent ahead of the revised 1969 sum of $14,931 million. The year-to-year advance had been running at up to 20 per cent earlier in 1970.

December import figures have not been tallied, but the 1970 total was expected to be virtually unchanged from the 1969 total of $14,130 million. Canada's merchandise trade surplus thus could exceed a record $2,750 million.

Main feature of 1970 export performance was substantially-increased shipments to countries other than the United States.

Value of exports to the United States increased by only 3½ per cent to $10,987 million from $10,614 million.

The share of total Canadian exports taken by the United States fell to about 65 per cent last year from 71 per cent in 1969.

Exports to Britain advanced by almost 35 per cent to $1,499 million from $1,113 million in 1969. Those to Europe's six-nation common market surged ahead by more than 40 per cent to $1,204 million from $855 million.

Japan's purchases from Canada last year were valued at $795 million, up by 27 per cent from $626 million.

Sales to Commonwealth countries other than Britain pushed ahead in about the same proportion to $777 million from $614 million.

Exports to Latin America picked up by almost 28 per cent to $566 million from $444 million, while those to all countries not otherwise categorized advanced by 59 per cent to $1,057 million from 665 million.

Among major export commodities food and raw materials showed the biggest advances in 1970. Wheat sales were ahead by more than 36 per cent to a value of $50.5 million from $37 million. Whisky exports surged by more than 20 per cent to $20.6 million from $14.8 million.

The value of oil and gas exports to the United States each advanced by about 20 per cent, crude oil to $57.6 million from $47.9 million and natural gas to $19.7 million from $16.7 million.

Fishermen Charge Stall

ERIEAU, Ont. (CP) — Lake Erie commercial fishermen, who have been waiting seven months to be compensated for losses when fishing was banned because of mercury in their catches, charged Wednesday they are being put off in their efforts for remuneration.

Jim Hall of Dunnville, said the "adequate compensation" promised by federal fisheries minister Jack Davis at Wheatley last spring hasn't been received.

Mr. Hall and Gary Vaughn of Blenheim, said banks are reluctant to loan fishermen money to buy twine to ready nets for the 1971 fishing season.

Mr. Vaughn said fishermen were first promised compensation by June, then by November, and later by the first part of December.

Correspondence the Lake Erie fishermen had with the federal and provincial governments indicated at first that a simple statement of catches and revenue would be an adequate basis for claims, both men said.

Later they were advised that applications would have to be made on official forms. Mr. Vaughan said he has done both, without result.

Erieau is on Lake Erie, 15 miles southeast of Chatham.

THOUGHTS AT LARGE:

Those who are preparing to be happy in the future are victims of a gigantic self-delusion: for the posture of anticipation renders a person unfit to seize the moment when it arrives, having trained himself to keep his eyes on a still more distant future. (This explains, incidentally, why the money-striver never feels he is really "rich.")

We improperly use the word "proverbial" when we feel uncomfortable in expressing a cliche: on the car radio today, I heard an announcer say "he is as strong as the proverbial bull," but there is no proverb about a bull's strength — it is only a tired simile.

• • •

The best argument for a well-stocked mind is the wholly practical one that, if we live mainly on the sensory level, we find that the pleasures of life are fleeting, while the ills are lingering; and the development of our intellectual resources enables us to reverse this proportion of pleasure and pain as we grow older.

• • •

The greatest harm done by the Industrial Revolution is that, more than ever in history, knowledge became enslaved to power, and was directed by power to ends inconsistent with wisdom.

People who live rigidly by the "rule of reason" eventually drive themselves into a ableness, failing to recall Santayana's gentle reminder that "Reason is only a harmony among irrational impulses."

Does anyone know why it's called "the shank of the evening," and how the phrase got its meaning? (I can't find it in any of my usual sources.)

One of the finest unconscious contributions to our Antics with Semantics Department was made last month by U.S. Defence Secretary Laird, when he referred to our re- Vietnam as "protective reaction strikes."

It might turn out to be more disconcerting than gratifying to discover intelligent life on other planets; we might find out, as Goethe suggested two centuries ago, that "our planet is the mental institution of the universe"

The real danger in a revolution is that the moderates are the first ones to go, being equally detested by both sides, and so the resolution of the conflict takes places between extremists, neither of which sees reality undistorted by ideology.

Man Sentenced

BRAMPTON (CP) — Alec Davidson, a former Brampton police constable, was sentenced Tuesday to four years in penitentiary on a charge of wounding.

Davidson, 35, originally had been charged with attempted murder.

The charge was laid following the gunshot wounding last Oct. 22 of Ruby Erb, 25, of Brampton.

'Scrapbook Poet of the West', Edna Jaques, Will Be 80 Sunday

TORONTO (CP) — Few English teachers place Edna Jaques on their list of great Canadian poets. And her name is no longer instantly recognizable.

But millions who have her verses tacked on the kitchen wall or tucked away in the family Bible will accord her greatness.

She is called the "scrapbook poet of the West" because so much of her work is enshrined in family collections of memorabilia.

On Sunday Miss Jaques will be 80, and nice things are still happening to her.

Wednesday night, the telephone rang constantly in the Willowdale home she shares with her son-in-law and daughter, Murray and Joyce Sugar.

Fans who read in a Toronto newspaper earlier in the day that her daughter is holding a birthday party Sunday just wanted to call and congratulate her.

"Would you like to know something nice?" she asked.

"A man called half an hour ago who wrote me a fan letter during the war. He said he was a sailor. I wrote back to him and sent him my book Roses in December. Now it's been across the ocean 21 times.

"Twenty-one trips across the Atlantic and once around the world."

The book is one of 11 she has published since her poems first reached print in the Moose Jaw Times when she was 13.

The newspaper item said they have brought her about $80,000 during the years but she said: "Oh no, it's not nearly that much. "They've sold nearly a quarter of a million and I get only 10 per cent, so . . . "

Her favorite among her poems? "Oh that's hard, there's 3,000 you know."

Then she selects the one most people know, a reply to In Flanders Fields, which begins:

"We have kept faith, ye Flanders dead.
Sleep well beneath those poppies red
The torch your dying hands did throw
We held it high before the foe
And answered bitter blow for blow
In Flanders fields."

Still excited about it more than 52 years after the entire poem came to her while she was sewing, she confides: "I wrote it on the bottom of a spool box."

The poem was read at the unveiling in Washington of the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. A service club printed it on a card with the Belgian National Anthem and raised $1 million by selling the cards.

Most of her work reflects her early life on the Prairies:

"If you are prairie-bred . . .
there seems to be
A sort of fellowship that speaks to me."

She was born in Collingwood, Ont., the daughter of a lakeboat captain who caught the pioneering spirit when she was 11 and moved the family to the prairie flatlands, 35 miles south of Moose Jaw.

The settlement became known as Briercrest, after the name of the Jaques farm.

Miss Jaques married a neighbor, William Ernest Jamieson, and moved to a homestead near Prince Albert, Sask. She did not like the log-cabin life there and left after four years, with her daughter. Her husband died some years later and she writes under her maiden name.

She supported her child as a seamstress, stewardess on a steamer, stenographer and newspaper reporter. During the Second World War "I went to Ottawa and wrote propaganda" —articles for the wartime prices and trade board on such subjects as price control and wartime economy—with a homey flavor.

Since 1929 she has lectured whenever possible, invariably speaking about her life at Briercrest and the writing of verses.

"I'm in perfect health," she said Wednesday, and she still writes for magazines, particularly "a big magazine in the United States" which she did not want to identify because "they might not like it."

Criticism of her homespun verses does not seem to bother her. She says she would like today's youth to write poetry that means something. "Today it's more like prose broken up."

Layoff Planned

CHATHAM, Ont. (CP) — About 900 employees of the International Harvester Co. plant here will be laid off Friday as a result of a strike at Harvester plants in the United States which supply parts to the Chatham plant.

Refugee Flow Is Stepped Up In Sudan War

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — The flight of refugees is increasing in Sudan's civil war, which has been going on 15 years.

Neighboring Uganda now has 71,503 of these refugees. A total of 4,500 went there in the last eight weeks of 1970—more than in all of 1969, say official figures from the Uganda government and the United Nations.

Sudan is bordered by Uganda on the south and Egypt on the north.

The rebellion is in the southern area. The military government which seized power here in May, 1969, is officially seeking a peaceful solution but one top official says at least two more "rebel" airstrips must be destroyed first.

"We are not after a military victory," the commander of federal forces in the south recently told the press. Maj.-Gen. Mubarak Osman Rahama added: "Our target is saving innocent lives and proving our good intentions."

Khartoum made an offer of regional autonomy in 1969, but this has never been spelled out. The Khartoum government now faces a more active guerrilla force.

"The south" refers to some four million people living in the provinces of Bahr el Ghazal, Upper Nile and Equatoria. Perhaps 400,000 residents are Christian, and 50,000 Moslem. More than three million are pagan.

Among the guerrillas are the Anya-Nya guerrillas, said to number about 4,000. A federal force of some 20,000, or two-thirds of the Sudanese army, is looking for them.

The Anya-Nya take their name from a deadly poison, used on tips of spears and arrows, which comes from a cobra.

Five months ago, in a suprise move, the Nile provisional government surrendered its autonomy to the Anya-Nya, saying the political leaders have been unable to unite the rank and file and leaving it to the Anya-Nya to carry on.

Col. Joseph Lango, a graduate of Khartoum Military College, thus was recognized as president of the Anya-Nya Liberation Movement.

A display of weapons allegedly taken in Anya-Nya engagements was opened in Khartoum a few weeks ago. Many of the weapons were old, but sub-machine-guns and mortars were also displayed. They originated in both Eastern and Western countries.

The war began in August, 1955, a few months before Sudan achieved independence from Britain. It may have taken half a million lives.

It is not a war between blacks and Arabs. Rather it is between black or dark tribesmen of the south, some of whom speak English, and northerners who generally are of lighter skin. Virtually all the northerners are Moslem and speak Arabic.

The distrust dates more than a century to days when the south was a source of slaves and mercenary soldiers.

Sudanese and foreign residents say that a peaceful solution can only be achieved if Khartoum spells out what it means by "regional autonomy" and opens a dialogue with the Anya-Nya and refugee representatives.

French Communist Party 50 Years Old

PARIS (Reuter) — The French Communist party is 50 years old—and still involved in a doctrinal debate with the Socialist party, from which it split a half-century ago.

Divisions and weaknesses in the country's non-Communist opposition have made the Communists the second-largest organized political force in France after the Gaullists.

But, while the party commands 20 to 25 per cent of the electorate and exercises considerable industrial power through the powerful CGT labor union federation, it looks as far as ever from gaining power.

The Communist and Socialist parties have been engaged in something of a love-hate relationship during the last 50 years --separated by doctrinal points but attracted by the knowledge they have to unite if either of them is to gain power.

It was at a Socalist party congress at Tours toward the end of 1920 that a majority of delegates decided to associate themselves with the Bolshevik government in Moscow. They thus left the Socialist party and formed the Communist party.

But the minority of delegates at the Tours congress decided to continue the Socialist party. Among them was Leon Blum, later leader of a French popular front government in the 1930s.

The Communist party went through an awkward period immediately after the Nazi-Soviet pact of 1939, but took a leading role in resistance to the German occupiers of France in the Second World War.

Communist ministers took their place in French governments immediately after the war, but the party soon moved into outright opposition to successive governments of the Fourth and Fifth republics.

Today, the Communist party is attempting to avoid being pushed into a political ghetto. Late in December, the Communists and Socialists published the first report on their discussions aimed at reaching a common platform against the government of President Georges Pompidou.

They agreed to continue discussions but admitted that fundamental differences, arising from the natures of the two parties, divided them.

17 Perish in Fire In Kentucky Home

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A fire of undetermined origin swept through Westminster Terrace, a Presbyterian home for senior citizens in nearby Buchel early today, leaving at least 17 persons dead and an unknown number of persons injured.

Dr. Donald Thomas, Director of the emergency room at General Hospital here, said 30 persons were taken to General, seven of whom were dead on arrival. Ninety-four persons were inside the structure.

The blaze destroyed the building's second floor and inner stairways were filled with smoke, which severely hampered rescue efforts.

Dr. Thomas said many of the residents on the third and fourth floors had to be removed by firemen.

Yaremko Comes Out in Support of Davis for PC Leader

TORONTO (CP) — Campaigners for the leadership of the provincial Progressive Conservative party gained momentum Wednesday as one cabinet minister jumped on the bandwagon of Education Minister William Davis.

John Yaremko, minister of family and social services, joined the Davis camp Wednesday, bringing to six the number of cabinet colleagues that have declared their support for him at the convention here Feb. 10-12.

Sources close to the Davis campaign indicated that Stanley Randall, trade and development minister, and Public Works Minister J. R. Simonett would announce their support of him today.

George Kerr, minister of energy and resources, has told persons working on the campaign of Darcy McKeough that he will support the municipal affairs minister.

Allan Lawrence, minister of mines and northern affairs, has received the support of Health Minister Thomas Wells, Provincial Secretary Robert Welch is supported by Attorney-General Arthur Wishart, and Bert Lawrence, financial and commercial affairs minister, has not received any cabinet suppor.

Other cabinet ministers committed to Mr. Davis are Provincial Treasurer Charles MacNaughton, Labor Minister Dalton Bales, Highways Minister George Gomme, Agriculture Minister William Stewart and Fern Guindon, minister without portfolio.

Meanwhile, on the hustings, education spending continued to be a subject of controversy as contenders geared themselves for the first all-candidates' meeting tonight in Ottawa.

In Paisley, Mr. McKeough called education an "overriding concern" while Mr. Davis said in London he makes no apologies for education spending in the eight years he has held the portfolio.

"Our first priority was pupil placement and we have built central schools," Mr. McKeough told delegates from three ridings. "How we will pay for them I do not know, but the second priority has got to be costs of education."

He said more use must be made of schools and urged better administration.

Later, in North Bay, he was met by 300 protesting students who said they were unhappy over delays in moving to new facilities after being on a shift system for 2½ years.

Responding to criticism, Mr. Davis said Ontario education costs are lower per pupil than other "have provinces" and "every state bordering Ontario spends more than this jurisdiction."

In Sault Ste. Marie, Allan Lawrence said Mr. Wishart may not run in the next provincial election.

"We don't want to see him leave," he said. "He still has a great contribution to make."

In his message to delegates, he told them not to get uptight about foreign investment capital in Canada because it is vitally needed, especially in the north.

However, he said he favored provincial government restrictions that would enable Ontario to supervise foreign investment and help Canadians regain control of their economy.

The mines and northern affairs minister also proposed tax incentives to encourage Canadian investment in Northern Ontario and also suggested Canada seek capital from sources other than the United States.

In Kitchener, he continued his crusade against rising education costs by saying provincial control of teachers' salaries would become necessary if a proposed three-year ceiling on spending came into effect.

Bert Lawrence spent Wednesday meeting privately with delegates in Toronto.

In Ottawa, Mr. Welch added a new twist to his campaign by seeking support at a reception thrown by a Liberal.

He sought commitments at a reception held by Liberal MP James McNulty, a personal friend who also comes from St. Catharines.

Today, Mr. Davis will be in Woodstock and St. Thomas; Mr. McKeough will visit Windsor; Bert Lawrence will continue to Ottawa for the all-candidates' meeting. Allan Lawrence will be in Kitchener and Mr. Welch will be in Brockville.

Growers To Get 'Review'

TORONTO (CP) — The federal government will give "immediate consideration" to recommendations made by representatives of the Canadian apple industry during a two-day conference, a federal department of agriculture official said Wednesday.

Esmond Jarvis, assistant deputy minister, told about 50 delegates to the National Apple Conference that their recommendation to prohibit the importation of apples and apple concentrates from all countries except the U.S. will be studied "in the context of (Canada's) entire trade agreement."

He gave no indication whether the recommendation would be accepted or rejected.

"I can only assure you we will direct considerable thought to the recommendations."

Throughout the two-day conference delegates registered strong disapproval of the federal government's "lack of a national policy" which would protect Canadian apple growers from foreign competition.

A brief submitted by Nova Scotia delegates said the Canadian market is "imperiled by a flood of cheap apples and apple products."

"Many of these have been generously subsidized at the local level and some enter this country without any type of restraint or control and completely free of duty."

The brief criticized the lack of a federal policy giving Canadian apples priority on the Canadian domestic market.

"We seem not to have any greater right to our own country's marketplace than does Australia, Japan or even Red China."

Tax Reform Urged By Council

TORONTO (CP) — A report published Wednesday by the Ontario Economic Council says sweeping tax reforms are needed to make regional governments the primary administrative units within the province.

The council, which advises the province on economic and development policy, says municipalities are handicapped by the "completely inadequate" system that requires them to use property taxes as their major source of revenue.

"Any objective review of the financial position of local and provincial governments leads to the inescapable conclusion that total reform of taxation in Canada is needed and needed now," the report says.

It suggests regional governments "should be the basis of our political systems," particularly in urbanized areas of southern Ontario.

Equalization grants from the province may be necessary to ensure even development in other sections of southern Ontario and the provincial government still would have to provide services in many areas of Northern Ontario.

The report says the system of raising municipal funds through property taxes forces municipalities to give priority to projects that will reflect increased assessment.

"If more provincial tax resources—income tax, sales tax, liquor profits, natural resources revenues—were allocated to regional governments, we would be in a better position to measure the imbalance between revenues and need," it says.

The report says regional government should "act as the central government for each region," with responsibility for roads, sewage and water systems, electrical distribution, health, education and welfare.

Construction Industry Pacts May Be Extended

TORONTO (CP) — Companies and unions in the construction industry will get time to work out a plan for province-wide bargaining on a craft basis in Ontario if a tentative agreement announced Wednesday gets formal approval.

The tentative agreement would extend collective bargaining agreements in the industry by one year. Most building contracts in the province were due to expire in April.

The agreement was reached between representatives of the Ontario Federation of Construction Associations, which represents 5,000 companies, and the Ontario Building Trades Council.

A statement issued by Peter Allen, executive vice-president of the federation and Henry Kobryn of Windsor, secretary-treasurer of the council, said provincial agreements could be worked out between May 1, 1971, and April 30, 1972.

But any trade would be free to negotiate a full province-wide agreement immediately if it was practical, the statement said.

In addition, labor and management would try to promote year-round employment for construction workers through scheduling and co-ordinating construction requirements by the major owner-clients and by all levels of government.

The scheme still requires the endorsement of the executive of the council and the affiliates of the OFCA.

The next step would be to get craft locals across the province in each trade to accept the proposal.

Mr. Kobryn said he doubts whether the unions will accept the extension unless temporary raises are included.

"But both sides realize that. We'll work it out."

Mr. Allen said representatives of the federation's member companies already have been summoned to ratification meetings to be held here next Tuesday and Wednesday.

It was not clear whether the required wage increase for a one-year extension would have to be bargained for locally or whether some province-wide increase would be negotiated for each trade.

A number of trades have been moving toward provincial agreements, among them the electrical and plumbing groups.

"But there is considerable work to be done to get province-wide bargaining for other groups such as the laborers, bricklayers and carpenters," Mr. Allen said.

He said the agreement "shot way beyond" amendments to the Ontario Labor Relations Act which last fall set up ways the construction companies could band together in certified groups to bargain with unions in given areas.

ST. OLA — A large crowd gathered recently at St. Ola Orange hall to honor Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Phillips on the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary. The couple received many beautiful gifts and everyone enjoyed dancing to the Musclow - Poulain orchestra.

McMaster Plans To Abolish Exams

HAMILTON (CP) — McMaster University will abolish examinations and de-emphasize formal lectures if the recommendations of a special committee on undergraduate education are accepted.

The committee's report was presented Wednesday, nearly two years after the university senate resolved to re-examine its assumptions and procedures in dispensing undergraduate education.

For some, examinations represent an inhuman processing of students, an encouragment of memory work and bluff at the expense of real learning, the report says.

The report recommends that formal examinations be abandoned, that exams be administered by the university, only at the instructor's request and that no exam count for more than 50 per cent of any final mark.

In other areas, the report proposed institution of a degree based on a program of individual study and elimination of the lecture as the basic medium of instruction.

Peter Newman Named Editor of Maclean's

TORONTO (CP) — The Star announced Wednesday that its editor-in-chief, Peter C. Newman, has resigned to accept the position of editor of Maclean's magazine.

Beland Honderich, president and publisher, said Mr. Newman, 41, will be succeeded by Robert Nielsen, chief editorial writer, who will become acting editor-in-chief.

Mr. Newman, who joined The Star in 1964 and became editor-in-chief in 1969, replaces Philip Sykes, acting editor at Macleon's, effective Feb. 1.

Mr. Sykes and Gerald Brander, publisher, both announced last Friday that they have quit their jobs with the magazine.

Savings Bonds Attractive

OTTAWA (CP)—With interest rates tumbling in all directions for savers and investors, Canada Savings Bonds have emerged as an even more attractive buy.

Paying 7.75 per cent this year and 7.81 per cent if held to maturity in 11 years, the bonds that went on sale last November are still available through banks, investment dealers and other authorized sellers.

Normally, one year's bonds remain on sale until a couple of months before the next issue is made available, and last November's issue could be bought —with payment for the accrued value of interest coupons—until next August.

But with bank deposit interest rates and interest available on other forms of savings and investment certificates falling, the question arises as to whether the government will continue to welcome fresh sales of the 1970-71 bonds.

So far, government sources indicate, no real thought is being given to withdrawing them.

At last report, on Jan. 6, $7.396 million of all CSB issues was still outstanding.

The treasury, which needs all the ready cash it can get this year to cover the projected federal deficit and meet its lending commitments for housing and other programs, is happy to have as much money as possible coming in through the sale of Canada Savings Bonds.

This apparently is the feeling of the finance department, despite the fact that it now has to pay more interest on CSB money than on other borrowings.

Opposition Trains Its Guns On Bill on Young Offenders

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition speakers took their cue from a variety of critics across the country as they opened their attack in the Commons Wednesday on proposed legislation dealing with youthful lawbreakers.

Condemning the bill as a "bad package," Conservative legal critic Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) read protests from lawyers, psychiatrists, social workers and the Canadian Mental Health Association.

John Gilbert (NDP—Toronto Broadview) said the bill represented "a caveman's approach to young people . . . a simplistic Spiro Agnew approach."

The bill was introduced for second reading by Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer. The debate is to continue today.

Mr. Goyer said the bill represents a compromise with existing social legislation and administrative structures.

"The bill which I am submitting to you today for second reading is certainly not perfect," Mr. Goyer said.

"It does, however, ensure greater homogeneity in the treatment of young people appearing before courts across the country, and it does uphold certain provisions which attempt to eliminate, as far as possible, arbitrary treatment."

Among the reforms contained in the legislation, he listed:

—Elimination of "juvenile delinquency" as a criminal status involving special punishment for youths convicted of breaking any specific law;

—Raising to 17 from 16 of the age limit for juveniles in federal law;

—Emphasis on social rehabilitation rather than exclusively legal procedures for treatment of young offenders.

Mr Woolliams proposed an amendment to scrap the bill and require the cabinet to appoint a study group to examine the whole question of legal reform

Noting the reliance in the bill on training schools as a correctional device, Mr. Woolliams submitted such institutions "are nothing more than child penitentiaries."

"It is useless in most cases to send (young offenders) to these training schools or child penitentiaries where the doors are locked and there is loneliness and a relationship with criminals of every kind."

"I have never seen anyone, whatever the situation, who has come out better as a result of being in a prison."

Mr. Gilbert said the bill was worse than the present juvenile act, which would be repealed, in that it removes the provision "every juvenile shall not be treated as a criminal."

Mr. Gilbert urged withdrawal of the bill for submission to a panel of experts.

Two Creditiste MPs disagreed strongly on the bill.

Rene Matte (Champlain) said the bill appeared to grant human dignity to the offender.

Andre Fortin (Lotbiniere) insisted that the bill was retrograde, treating young offenders as criminals rather than as delinquents.

He said a structure of lawyers judges, cross-examination and finger-printing should be replaced with "more understanding, better counselling and rehabilitation."

Robert McCleave (PC—Halifax-East Hants) argued that a code with specific charges and specific punishments is not applicable to children.

PM Under Fire

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — The Trudeau government is more interested in corporations than people, Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party MP for Oshawa-Whitby, said Wednesday.

Mr. Broadbent, a candidate for the federal NDP leadership, told the Windsor and District Labor Council the Liberal government is pursuing "the most anti-labor, anti-ordinary-citizen financial policy we have had since 1945."

Drapeau's Restaurant Has Money Woes

MONTREAL (CP)—Jean Drapeau's restaurant, opened 16 months ago with all the flourish Montreal's impressario-mayor could muster, is in deep financial trouble.

Closed last week for what Mayor Drapeau called a reassessment of its concept, the restaurant turned up in the news this week when the Windsor Hotel filed a writ against it.

Superior Court ordered $41,000 worth of the restaurant's belongings seized Tuesday and the hotel's lawyer said Wednesday it will ask the court for an order ousting the restaurant from the premises and effecting the sale of moveables for non-payment of rent.

Le Vaisseau d'Or—the Golden Vessel—was the mayor's monument to Montreal's elepance.

Located in the stately Windsor Hotel, traditional resting-place of visiting royalty, it featured a 20-piece chamber orchestra and a fancy cuisine in a city noted for its fine restaurants.

It reflected what Mr. Drapeau said was a long-standing ambition to provide Montreal with a refined dining establishment worthy of the finest clientele.

The restaurant was exquisitely furnished in tones of warm gold, olive green and royal blue, with chair upholstery in velvet. Gold-tasseled cloths in matching floral patterns covered tables and reached to the floor.

Tab for a dinner for two could reach $40.

But the high hopes of the promoter-mayor who has given Montreal Expo 67 and the 1976 Olympic Games flew in the face of gloomy prognostications from competitors.

Other restauranteurs said in May, 1969, when Mr. Drapeau announced plans for the restaurant, that although le Vaisseau d'Or might have great initial success, lack of experience would eventually take its toll. The restaurant opened in September the same year.

The restaurant's history has been stormy at times.

On Oct. 7, 1969, night of the Montreal police strike, mobs which plundered downtown Montreal vented their rage against the mayor by damaging his restaurant.

Last month, the restaurant was visited by police who ordered a sports organization that had engaged the place for a banquet to cancel a raffle. Quebec law forbids raffles in establishments licensed to serve liquor.

Now, the Windsor Hotel says the restaurant owes $35,000 rent plus $6,750 damages for one month's loss "on termination of the lease."

A spokesman for the mayor's office said Cr. Drapeau believes "things will work themselves out" following talks with hotel officials.

Car Manufacturers Participate in Show

MONTREAL (CP) — The Montreal international automobile show opens today with domestic manufacturers officially supporting their dealers for the first time since the annual exhibition began three years ago.

This year's assortment of more than 300 vehicles was shown at a press preview Wednesday night. Featured prominently were displays by domestic manufacturers.

For the first time this year, General Motors, Ford and Chrysler set up factory displays, in addition to the cars being shown by dealers.

The exhibit includes cars being shown for the first time in North America by Alfa Romeo, Citreon, Datsun, Fiat, Mazda, Pinin Farina and Toyota. A world premiere Manic of Granby, Que., also is among the displays.

The show in particular offers the first real chance to compare Detroit's new challenges in the sub-compact field with the booming import market.

Working models showing how pollution control can be achieved are among he features of this year's exhibition.

M. H. Maki, vice-president and general manager of Nissan Automobile Co. (Canada) Ltd., announced plans for expansion of Datsun regional facilities in Montreal.

Mr. Miki said at a Wednesday news conference Nissan still had not made a definite decision on where to locate a $100 million plant in Canada. Quebec, Ontario, Nova Scotia and British Columbia have all shown an pecially have been aggressive. pecially have been agressive,

Municipal Board Comes Under Fire

SMITHS FALLS, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario Municipal Board was given a rough ride Wednesday night by town councillors, mad that a 12,000-acre annexation plan had been turned down.

The town applied in December for permission to annex the property from the surrounding townships of North and South Elmsley, Montague and Walford.

Although it had been indicated the board decision could be expected about July, the refusal was received Jan. 11.

Mayor T. O. Ashwell said if an appeal of the board's decision was not in favor of the town he would resign—and he urged the council to join him in this.

He said the town had nowhere to expand commercially without the sought land and would become "just another nice small town common to forgotten eastern Ontario."

It was suggested that the decision was political in nature and followed the refusal of the town to pay Lanark County Board of Education $283,585 in school taxes owing.

Councillor Bill Hunter called the decision "a stab in the back by a rusty political dagger."

Yippie Abbie Hoffman Turned Back at Border

FORT ERIE, Ont. (CP) — Yippie leader Abbie Hoffman was refused entry to Canada Wednesday after he walked across the Peace Bridge from Buffalo, N.Y.

The 34-year-old activist told reporters on the American side following his return that he knew "where the decision (to bar him) was made."

He charged that two FBI agents followed him on his plane flight from New York City and were present at Canadian customs while he was questioned by immigration officials.

He said the men slipped out a side door before he was deported by two men in plainclothes and two immigration officers who drove him back to the American side in a station wagon.

Hoffman had been invited to appear on the television program Under Attack scheduled for taping Wednesday night at the University of Western Ontario, London.

Before he arrived at Canadian customs, Immigration Minister Otto Lang told the Commons that if he did appear he would have to face an inquiry procedure to determine his admissibility to Canada.

Outside the Commons, Mr. Lang said immigration laws bar the entry of anyone convicted of a criminal offence involving "moral turpitude." Immigration laws do not define moral turpitude but they bar anyone convicted of a felony in the United States.

Hoffman was one of the Chicago Seven convicted last year of violating the U.S. Civil Riot Act by conspiring to incite a riot during the 1968 Democratic convention in Chicago.

He is free on $25,000 bail pending an appeal of his conviction.

Hoffman spent more than an hour with Canadian immigration officials Wednesday. After he was turned back and went through U.S. customs, who searched a flight bag he was carrying but did not stop him, he told reporters the Canadian officials gave him a runaround.

"I must have filled out 17 forms," he said.

One simple form, requiring such information as his age and birthplace, was presented to him by six different officials and he had to fill it out six times, he said.

He said he was not allowed to phone his lawyer.

"They told me to go back where I came from. They don't want the likes of me around."

Hoffman said a number of the people convicted with him have been in and out of Canada with no problems since the trial.

He added that Canada is the first country from which he has been deported.

Immigration officials refused comment on the incident and Richard Spry, the producer of Under Attack, was not available for comment

Air Canada Plans To Lay Off 415

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada announced Wednesday it will lay off 415 employees in Canada and the U.S. within the next few days because of slow traffic growth and "continued inflationary pressures."

Employees affected will be given notice sometime this week.

About half of them are in temporary or part-time positions. A total of 375 are based in Canada with the remainder in the U.S. and the Caribbean area.

Yves Pratte, chairman of the board and chief executive officer, said in a statement the airline has excess personnel—especially in passenger handling and airport ramp areas—because expected growth of business and vacation travel had not materialized.

Coupled with rising operating costs, the financial squeeze had forced a "strict austerity program . . . to reduce spending and limit operating expenditures without significant impact on passenger service standards."

Mr. Pratte said he hopes the airline will resume growth in 1971, at which time employees with permanent status would be eligible for recall.

Air Canada, which has a total labor force of 17,700 said 133 of the 415 employees will be cut from the payroll in Ontario, all at Toronto and Malton.

They include 52 station attendants at Toronto International airport, hired on a temporary basis, and 81 passenger agents —57 from permanent staff, 24 part time help.

The affected employees are being given two weeks notice.

They will be on a recall list, a company statement said, and in the meantime Air Canada is offering a "career counselling service."

Claude Wagner Sought by UN As Party Chief

QUEBEC (CP)—As Judge Claude Wagner stayed quietly at home in Montreal, militant supporters of the Union Nationale party sought to draft him as their next leader.

But he maintained resolutely he would hav nothing to do with politics.

"I have absolutely no intention of returning to politics," he told The Canadian Press. "There is no question of returning to politics."

Even as he spoke, a draft-Wagner rally was in full swing at the Chateau Frontenac Hotel here, with more han 1,000 persons in attendance, according to figures supplied by organizers.

With bands playing boisterously in some of the seven salons reserved for the occasion, Wagner supporters milled about, some carrying placards bearing his photo and slogans.

As people entered the Chateau Frontenac, they were given voluminous information kits entitled "Why Wagner."

And a spokesman for a political action committee of the Union Nationale party explained why Mr. Wagner, a former Liberal justice minister, was not present.

He said in a speech the committee, which describes itself as against the so-called party establishment, is awaiting further details on a convention to choose a successor to Jean Jacques Bertrand.

Mr. Bertrand, who appointed Mr. Wagner a Sessions Court judge last March after Mr. Wagner lost the Liberal leadership convention to Robert Bourassa, has said the Union Nationale will pick a new leader at an unspecified date in 1971.

In Montreal, Mr. Wagner said he was at a loss about the entire affair. No one had bothered to tell him precisely what was going on, he said.

He said that several weeks ago he reiterated he was not interested in returning to politics.

"I said that and I repeat it tonight."

Among former Bertrand cabinet ministers at the rally were Jean-Noel Tremblay, Jean-Paul Cloutier, Clement Vincent and Roch Boivin.

Mr. Tremblay said he attended neither in support nor in defiance of anyone while Mr. Cloutier said he was concerned about the well-being of the Union Nationale.

Trudeau's Remarks Provoke Queries

OTTAWA (CP) — As a result of statements by Prime Minister Trudeau in India, Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp faced a series of questions in the Commons Wednesday about Canada's continuing membership in the Commonwealth.

The government's aim, said Mr. Sharp, is to reinforce Commonwealth unity.

In New Delhi, Mr. Trudeau—now in Singapore for the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference—said that if a sufficient number of countries withdraw from the Commonwealth a chin reaction might set in.

"Then some other countries, perhaps Canada, will want to be as pure as the others."

Heath Macquarrie (PC—Hillsborough) asked Mr. Sharp whether it is Canadian policy to leave the Commonwealth if a number of other countries do. How many other countries would be required to leave before Canada followed?

Mr. Sharp said the government's policy, and that advocated by Mr. Trudeau in recent weeks, is to reinforce the organization.

Mr. Macquarrie then asked for assurance that there would be no withdrawl from the Commonwealth without discussions in Parliament.

Mr. Sharp said he hoped there would be no such withdrawal. He asked whether the Conservative MP was suggesting that Canada remain a member in the event the organization fell apart.

John Diefenbaker (PC—Prince Albert) said this was no time to be facetious. He asked that Mr. Sharp repudiate the "egregious nonsense" uttered by Mr. Trudeau.

Mr Sharp said the most egregious nonsense he had read in the last day or so were statements by Mr. Diefenbaker.

There was no reply when Mr. Diefenbaker again asked for a repudiation of the "frightful statements" made by Mr. Trudeau which indicated "the government would act to bring about the end of the Commonwealth."

The current Commonwealth crisis centres on the proposed sale by Britain of arms to South Africa.

Britain has argued that the arms, in the form of naval frigates, are necessary to offset an increasing Russian naval presence in the area.

Wallace Nesbitt (PC—Oxford) asked Mr. Sharp whether the government considered the Soviet buildup to be of little consequence in terms of the military naval balance.

Mr Sharp said he didn't understand the question.

Alberta Firms Study Gasoline Substitutes

EDMONTON (CP) — Two Alberta utility companies are separately studying what they feel are long-term answers to pollution created by automobiles.

Calgary Power Ltd., has fitted a Renault with nearly a ton of batteries—a power source that gives it a range of between 70 to 120 miles and a top speed of about 60 miles an hour.

Northwestern Utilities Ltd. is experimenting with natural gas as automobile fuel.

The Renault was converted by Electric Fuel Propulsion Inc. of Ferndale, Mich., and has been tested in Alberta for nearly two years. Its lead-cobalt-acid batteries are similar to the lead-acid ones in conventional automobiles, but the cobalt addition allows them to be charged overnight.

And, while its acceleration from a standing start wouldn't upset a Ferrari, it is satisfying from a commuter's point of view. Zero to 40 miles an hour takes 12 seconds.

Northwestern Utilities, because it markets natural gas, is using this as a power source for an experimental fleet of 50 automobiles it unveiled early this winter.

"The natural gas equipment achieves the lowest concentration of pollutants of an internal combustion engine on a motor vehicle that we know of," says D. B. Collier, vice-president and general manager of Northwestern.

NHL Governor Sees Four Expansion Teams Within Four Years

NEW YORK (CP) — William N. Jennings, chairman of the National Hockey League's finance committee, sees Hempstead, N.Y., Atlanta, Cleveland and Kansas City as prime prospects for gaining NHL franchises in the next round of league expansion.

Jennings, president of New York Rangers, gave this rundown Wednesday in discussing in an interview an earlier prediction that the NHL might be able to add another four teams by the 1974-75 season.

The NHL governor said he did not mean to exclude the possibility that another team might be established in a Canadian city.

But he had not discerned any strong interest in promoting another NHL member in Canada until, "like a bolt out of the blue," an application reached President Clarence Campbell from Calgary a few weeks ago.

Atlanta is a great prospect, he said, with a new 16,000-seat arena scheduled for opening this month. Tom Cousins, connected with Atlanta Hawks of the National Basketball Association, will run the arena and is anxious to get into hockey, Jennings said.

Hempstead, on Long Island, is to open a new arena of NHL size this year.

"Hempstead is Rangers territory, and Rangers would have to be satisfied, as the Giants had to be satisfied when the football Jets came into New York." the Ranger executive noted.

His inclusion of the city, less than 50 miles from New York, appeared to indicate the Rangers would not put undue obstacles in the way of a prospective rival.

Jennings added that Cleveland, with successful American Hockey League and NBA operations is anxious to get into major-league hockey. He also had been assured that Kansas City would be a great NHL franchise.

Detroit Deal Brings Big M To Canadiens

MONTREAL (CP)—The hockey-playing Mahovlich brothers —Frank and Peter—have been reunited on a National Hockey League team.

Frank, 33, joined younger brother Peter on the Montreal roster as the Canadiens completed a deal Wednesday with Detroit Red Wings for the veteran left-winger.

Sent to Detroit in exchange for the elder Mahovlich were right wingers Mickey Redmond and Bill Collins as well as left winger Guy Charron.

FRNK MAHOVLICH

The trade brought an end to many days of speculation that a deal was in the works between the two clubs.

"I think Frank will be happy here," said Peter Mahovlich, just before boarding a flight to Minnesota where the Canadiens meet the North Stars tonight. A club spokesman said Frank will be in the lineup tonight for Montreal.

Canadiens' general manager Sam Pollock said he has always been an admirer of Frank Mahovlich and that he was "happy to acquire him."

Red Wings' coach Doug Barkley said:

"When a club is lucky enough to get three players of this calibre, it must give up something good.

"It's time to start rebuilding. It is definitely a move in the right direction and a big step in our reconstruction program."

The Mahovlich brothers were both members of the Detroit organization together for part of the 1967-68 season and all of 1968-69.

Frank arrived in Detroit March 3, 1968 along with Gary Unger, Peter Stemkowski and the rights to Carl Brewer in a trade that sent Payl Henderson, Norm Ullman and Floyd Smith to Toronto Maple Lefas.

Peter, 24, played three games with the Wings during the 1965-66 season. He divided his time from the 1966-67 to 1968-69 season among the Wings and their farm teams at Pittsburgh, then a member of the American League, and Fort Worth, of the Central League.

He was traded to Montreal along with Bart Crashley June 6, 1969 in exchange for Doug Piper and Garry Monahan.

Frank broke into the league with Toronto Maple Leafs and won the Calder Cup, as the NHL's rookie-of-the-year.

A veteran of 14 NHL seasons, he has scored 404 career goals, including 14 so far this season. His best year was 1968-69, when he fired 49 goals and added 29 assists for the Wings.

In 1960-61, he scored 48 goals for the Leafs and two seasons later, the late Jim Norris, then owner of Chicago Black Hawks, offered Toronto $1 million for Mahovlich. The Leafs politely declined.

Last year, Mahovlich fired 38 goals and added 32 assists for Detroit and so far this year he has 14 goals and 18 assists in 35 NHL games.

Redmond, 23, broke into the Canadiens' organization in 1967-68 after a brilliant junior career with Peterborough Petes of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series. In 40 games this season with Montreal, the Kirkland Lake, Ont., native scored 14 goals and 16 assists.

Last season, he missed only one of the Canadiens' 76 games and netted 27 goals with assists on another 27.

Collins, 27, was acquired by Montreal from Minnesota at last summer's annual NHL meetings.

Used primarily as a penalty killer by the Canadiens, the Ottawa native scored six goals to go with two assists in 40 games. Last season with the North Stars, he scored 29 times while assisting on nine others.

Charron, 22, a graduate of Montreal Junior Canadiens of the OHA Junior A, is in his second year of professional hockey.

He started this year with the Canadiens scoring a pair of goals and the same number of assists. He was sent down to Montreal Voyageurs, the Canadiens' American League farm team and notched five goals and 13 assists in 18 AHL games.

Last season, Charron failed to score any points in five games with the Canadiens but in 65 contests with the Voyageurs he had 37 goals and 45 assists for 82 points.

Neither Collins nor Redmond had an idea of the trade when they brought their club bags to the airport.

"It always comes as a shock when you're traded," Collins said.

Redmond said that the trade was "a shock, but I'll go there and work hard."

Smith Stymies Leafs Until Henderson's Shot

By NICK FERRIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

At six feet, four inches, Gary Smith of California Golden Seals is the tallest netminder in the National Hockey League and at 215 pounds, he's the heaviest.

Smith put every inch and pound to work Wednesday night and turned back 50 of the 51 shots as the Golden Seals tied 1-1 with Toronto Maple Leafs.

In other games, Chicago Black Hawks defeated Buffalo Sabres and Pittsburgh Penguins beat Los Angeles Kings, each by scores of 4-2.

At Toronto, Smith frustrated the Leafs for two periods, stopping 19 shots in the first and 16 in the second, before Paul Henderson took a pass behind the Seals' defence and broke in all alone on the Ottawa native, beating him with a hard drive into the upper right corner of the net.

Henderson's 15th goal this season came about nine minutes after Gerry Ehman gave California a 1-0 lead when he beat Toronto's veteran goalie Jacques Plante on a short but quick shot. Plante stopped 35 other California drives.

Henderson missed an opportunity to give the Leafs a 1-0 first-period lead when he was blanked by Smith after skating in all alone on the California goalie.

The tie gave Toronto 43 points, three fewer than third-place Montreal Canadiens and 11 more than fifth-place Vancouver Canucks.

California remained in the West Division cellar, three points behind Los Angeles.

At Chicago, Pit Martin scored the winning goal and picked up two assists as the Black Hawks came from behind twice to down the Sabres.

Trailing 2-1 after 20 minutes, the West Division-leading Hawks came back with two second-period goals and scored one more in the final period.

Chicago fired 41 shots at Buffalo goalie Joe Daley while Tony Esposito in the Black Hawks net faced 26.

Veterans Dean Prentice and Andy Bathgate broke open a 1-1 game at Pittsburgh, scoring goals within 1½ minutes of each other in the second period.

Kings' goaltender Denis DeJordy stopped 50 Pittsburgh shots. Al Smith faced only 15 Los Angeles drives in the Penguins' net.

Tonight, Minnesota North Stars play host to Montreal, Toronto meets the Flyers in Philadelphia, Los Angeles travels to Boston against the Bruins, Detroit is at Pittsburgh and St. Louis Blues visit Buffalo.

Hockey Briefs

TORONTO (CP) — How close Toronto Maple Leafs are to making a trade for troubled centre Mike Walton depends on how you define close, says Leaf general manager Jim Gregory. "I'm trying to make a trade," Gregory said in an interview Wednesday. "But it's pretty hard to say whether I'm close to making one or not. I'm talking to several clubs about offers for Walton and I might make a deal in the next five minutes or it might take several days—I can't say." The 26-year-old centre has been out of the Leaf's lineup since early December with a depressive illness. Toronto psychiatrist Dr. Ronald Stokes said in a report to NHL president Clarence Campbell last month that "geographic relocation" would help clear up Walton's problems.

TORONTO (CP) — Dave Gardner of Toronto Marlboros picked up nine points last week to move into second place in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series scoring race. Gardner, who has 37 goals and 39 assists for 76 points, moved one point ahead of Brian McKenzie of St. Catharines Black Hawks. Robert Lalonde of Montreal Junior Canadiens still has a five-point cushion in first place with a league-leading 43 goals and 38 assists for 81 points. John Garrett of Peterborough Petes is the stingiest goalie in the loop with a 3.28 average, followed by Michel Larocque of Ottawa 67s with a 3.33 mark.

CFL Rushers Won't Have Hands Full

HOUSTON (CP) — Ball handlers in the Canadian Football League won't have their hands quite as full next season—the ball will be smaller.

It won't be much smaller, Commissioner Jake Gaudaur said Wednesday. The difference will be about a quarter of an inch, but "that quarter of an inch makes a tremendous difference."

Gaudaur and the general managers of the nine CFL clubs are here for business meetings in conjunction with the convention of the American Football Coaches Association.

"Our specifications are the same as those of the National League," Gaudaur said.

"The maximu mgirth is 21½ inches and the minimum is 21¼. In the NFL, they have been sticking to the minimum requirements whereas in Canada we have been operating on the maximum. Now there will be no leeway—the ball will have to be 21¼ inches around."

The ruling came following a request by the CFL Players Association, whose lawyer John Agro said:

"We think the guys can handle a smaller ball better in rough weather. We feel it would cut down on fumbles and fumbles spoil a game."

The general managers worked all day Wednesday but still couldn't meet the Gaudaur stipulation that they settle on an exhibition schedule by 6 p.m.

Gaudaur had told them that if they did not have one ready then, he would impose one of his own.

Instead, as one schedule after another was tried and rejected, Gaudaur and executive secretary Greg Fulton continued to offer compromise suggestions, working out various combinations as the GMs went on to other business.

"It's a complicated problem," Gaudaur said. "We have submitted our scheduling problems to computers and even they can't come up with a workable solution.

"There are many things to take into consideration—availability of parks, preferences for certain dates and certain opponents."

Gaudaur said the GMs were close to a solution however.

"We have one more point to resolve. It could be done with a stroke of a pen, but then you would have two or three clubs unhappy on this one point. We hope to spread the problem out through the league so nobody will be unhappy."

He said the GMs would go at it again today and predicted a solution before noon.

RUSS JACKSON

Deal Stalled

OTTAWA (CP) — The next move is up to Vancouver in any possible deal that would bring former Ottawa Rough Riders' quarterback Russ Jackson out of retirement to play for British Columbia Lions, general manager Frank Clair of Riders said Wednesday.

Clair, in a telephone interview from Houston, Tex., said he had talked to coach Jackie Parker of the B.C. football club at meetings there Tuesday.

"I got the impression Vancouver still is interested in getting Jackson but the Lions have also made it clear they will not give up the players we requested," Clair said.

COWBOY'S CRAIG MORTON

Sport Briefs

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Expos Wednesday selected 16 baseball prospects in the annual free-agent draft of United States high school and college players. The National League team made seven selections in the regular phase of the draft, which was for prospects who had not previously been selected in any draft. Nine more players were grabbed in the secondary phase, restricted to players previously drafted but not signed. John T. Scalia, a 20-year-old right-handed pitcher, was the No. 1 selection in the first phase of the draft. Other regular phase selections were: Outfielder Chris Hall, shortstop Harvey Smith, pitcher Terry Ray, third baseman Douglas Lyons, pitcher Dale Fell and outfielder Ronald Mahood. Harry Conlan, a 19-year-old outfielder, was the top pick in the secondary phase of the proceedings. He had previously been selected by the Expos in June, 1969 but instead he accepted a football scholarship to Idaho State University. He has since dropped out of college. Mel Didier, the Expos' director of scouting, made the selections for the team.

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Expos announced Wednesday they are inviting six farmhands to their major league training camp at West Palm Beach, Fla. The players are pitchers Bill Dillman, Rich Nye, Bob Lang and Dale Murray and catchers Terry Humphrey and John Olerud. Pitchers and catchers are scheduled to report for spring training Feb. 17 and the infielders and outfielders are to report Feb. 24.

Super Bowl Not Hard to Win

MIAMI (AP) — It's not generally known—and those who know, don't pay too much attention—but victory in the Super Bowl Sunday between Dallas Cowboys and Baltimore Colts could be awarded to either football team because of a "palpably unfair act."

It's not generally known because it's hard to mouth, and it's not paid much attention to because it's never happened. But it is in the rules.

According to the rules for sudden death in the event the teams are tied at the end of the regulation 60 minutes, the first team scoring wins. The winning score can come either on a safety, field goal, touchdown—or that palpably unfair act.

Mark Duncan, the supervisor of officials for the National Football League, says such an act "is anything that would prevent your opponent from scoring."

He gave three examples:

—A player coming off the sidelines to tackle a player from the opposing team who has broken into the clear and is heading for a touchdown.

—A player preventing the offensive team from snapping the ball to begin a play by continually charging into the centre prior to the snap.

—Continually calling defensive signals in a manner designed to draw the offensive team offside.

As soon as a palpably unfair act is perpetrated, the officials are supposed to call a conference.

If it is a clear-cut case where the player has interfered with what would have been the winning points, the referee would be responsible for the final decision of awarding the score—and the game would end," Duncan explained.

Bills May Bide Time

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Ralph C. Wilson Jr., who says he is ready to pull his Buffalo Bills out of this city, added Wednesday he would be willing to keep the National Football League team here at least through next season.

Wilson told Erie County executive E. John Tutuska the team would play the 1971 season in Buffalo. But, for future seasons he said, there were a couple of "ifs."

Wilson said he:

—Would give Buffalo and Erie County leaders 60 days to decide whether they would build a new stadium.

—Would not lease a stadium from a third party.

—Would settle for a domed stadium, instead of an open stadium "if it's big enough and that's what the community wants."

Wilson said Tuesday, here and in Seattle, Wash., that he was talking with Seattle interests about the possibility of moving the Bills to the West Coast city.

He said he was unhappy over a four-year delay locally to build a stadium to replace the antiquated War Memorial Stadium, used by the Bills since the American Football League was born 11 years ago. The AFL and NFL merged last year.

"If the community can pull together and get a new stadium under acceptable terms and conditions, sure I'll stay," he said in a telephone interview from Miami.

"Otherwise," he added, "I must make a move."

Brodie Next to Testify

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — John Brodie, San Francisco 49ers' quarterback, was expected to testify today before a federal grand jury here investigating the National Football League for possible anti-trust violations.

Controversial quarterback Joe Namath of New York Jets and Dave Parks, New Orleans Saints' tight end, appeared before the jury Wednesday and were critical of the powers of NFL owners and of commissioner Pete Rozelle.

"There is no doubt about anti-trust violations," Namath told reporters. "They (the jury) asked for my opinion and I told them."

He cited the common draft of college players and standard player contract as examples of anti-trust violations, saying: "A college player may not be happy about being drafted by a certain club, but he can't do anything about it. The same with a player who's not happy with his contract."

Parks, 29, said the jury queried him on his transfer from San Francisco to the Saints in 1968.

A senior hockey coach couldn't ask for many more uninviting chores than the Mo-Hawks are facing this weekend.

"We'd like a split," confesses Dave Jones, as the local seniors brace for a tough road trip stand in Galt Saturday, then Oakville Sunday.

Clinging to fourth place in the eight-team OHA Senior A standings by the narrowest of margins — one point — the Mo-Hawks badly need to salvage something from a double-bill that was a disaster last winter.

The club came home nursing their wounds from 11-2 and 7-3 shellackings from the same trip last year. The 11-2 trouncing in Galt also cost the club the services of defenceman Lou Kazowski, who had a prolonged stay on the sidelines after tearing some ankle tendons.

The Mo-Hawks could afford an off-weekend at this stage of the schedule last year. They were a healthy 15-11-2 in a league in which they didn't have to work too hard for the sixth and last playoff spot.

Now they are 13-13 with Kingston, Oakville, and Owen Sound breathing down their necks. There promises to be a dogfight between the four teams for the bottom three playoff spots.

Meanwhile, the senior entries are handling Woodstock with kid gloves. The lowly A's, who won only five or 40 games all last season, have won only two so far this winter

There is the ever-present concern that the A's, who had the distinction of playing a game before 75 spectators, might drop out of the senior hockey picture. Some scores against them by the top-rung clubs are suspiciously low.

....The departure would create a somewhat ludicrous situation of six of seven teams making the playoffs.

The Mo-Hawks would prefer that the A's not exit until they played them two games postponed over the holiday season, but the league would likely award all the clubs wins for their remaining Woodstock games if the A's ever did pull out.

How fast hockey fortunes change. A Woodstock team won the OHA senior league in 1964 and 1965.

Tom Smythe, grand-daddy of junior hockey flesh-peddlars, made a flurry of last-minute changes to fix the Toronto Marlboros' lineup before last weekend's deadline.

One of the moves involved Trenton product Bob Dailey. The six-foot-five, 230-pound defenceman — biggest player in Junior A hockey — was cut from the Marlies' roster with the suggestion that he move down to the Dukes' junior B entry in Markham.

The "suggestion" will be heeded if Dailey wants to play any hockey the rest of the year.

Before Christmas Smythe told a Toronto reporter he didn't like junior hockey trades because they "disrupted a boy's education."

No less than eight present members of the Marlboro roster have changed their schools since September, these including Trenton's George Ferguson, whom Smythe bartered from Oshawa.

Another area junior hockey journeyman, Belleville's Mike Healey, got a change of scenery and is seeing more ice time with Hamilton Red Wings than he did in a couple of seasons with Niagara Falls Flyers.

Healey will welcome the move from the Flyers, who are runaway last-place finishers.

Meanwhile, Trenton's most illustrious hockey graduate, goalkeeper John Garrett, continues to enjoy the luxury of first-place hockey.

The Peterborough Petes sophomore, who led the OHA Junior A league in goaltending in his first season last year, is currently sporting a 3.28 goals-against average, ahead of Ottawa's Michel Larocque who is 3.33.

Garrett's average is more believable than in the early stages of the schedule, when it was so small nobody could find it.

In one recent game the Petes were outshot 52-18 by Kitchener and still beat the Rangers 5-1.

That's why Garrett will be among the first handful of overage juniors grabbed up in next spring's NHL draft.

Sports Huddle Jan. 27

The annual General Meeting of the Belleville Minor Sports Association will be held Wednesday, January 27 at the Canadian Legion Hall, Pinnacle Street.

Members are reminded that proposed amendments to the constitution must be in the hands of the secretary by 9 a.m. Monday, Jan. 18. All amendments must be stencilled and mailed to the president of each association prior to the general meeting.

The meeting will get under way at 8 p.m.

Lions Losers At Long Last

PETERBOROUGH (Staff)—It was a long time coming,75 days in fact, but the Peterborough Lions finally tasted defeat.

The second - place Oshawa Crushmen skated to a 6-2 victory over the Lions, to hand them their first loss since an October encounter with Trenton, and move the Motor City team to within two points of top spot.

Three unanswered goals in the second period carried the Crushmen to the win.

Steve West and Paul Britton each scored twice for Oshawa with John Grant and Jim Robson netting singles.

Gord Rodin and Bob Gainey replied for the Lions, who have only lost three of their 21 games.

Next of Kinsmen

Jeff Brown of the Belleville Kinsmen bantams circles around the net in an attempt to elude the checking efforts of teammate Peter Crawford during a practice session of the OMHA entry. The Kinsmen, who lost all but four of last year's team, will be participating in the Aurora Bantam Tournament this weekend.

Quinte Sweeps Three From Ailing Albert

Albert College basketball team continued to find tough sledding in their first season of Bay of Quinte COSSA "AA" play, dropping a triple-header to Quinte Secondary School.

In senior play, the Saints moved to within one game of first place Trenton by stopping their Albert counterparts 89-45.

Scoring was evenly divided among the winners with Stan Brooks hitting for 21 points followed by Kim Hunter (17), Darvin Easton (16) and Steve Nash (14). Murray Cutten and Dick Trotter were high scorers for the losers.

Quinte juniors picked up their fifth win in as many starts with a 62-38 decision over the Albert College cellar dwellers, while the midgets kept pace by downing Albert 59-31.

Koreans Barred from Trenton Tourney

TORONTO (CP)—The proposed entry of a Korean team in a Trenton, Ont., midget hockey tournament in March has not received Canadian Amateur Hockey Association approval, the secretary-manager of the Ontario Hockey Association said Wednesday.

Bill Hanley said the CAHA had rejected a request last November from the OHA for approval of the Korean entry and there has been no further application to the CAHA.

"The CAHA, since it withdrew from world hockey last year, is against any of this back-and-forth competition on any level," said Hanley.

The Koreans, however, last week confirmed acceptance of an invitation from the Trenton organizers. Tournament chairman Eric Smith of Trenton said some 16 Korean hockey players accompanied by several adults plan to pay their own transportation from Seoul to Canada.

Hanley said it now is up to the Korean hockey federation to apply to the CAHA for special permission to play here.

A Rough Life

Manpower Reports

Unemployment in December Rose Sharply

OTTAWA (CP) — Reports from scattered cities across Canada indicate heavily-increased unemployment last month as the country heads into the winter's peak period for lay-offs and job shortages.

December reports from some local offices of the manpower department, based on claims for unemployment insurance and job-seeker registrations, showed increases from a year earlier ranging from 20 to 150 per cent.

Unemployment in Ottawa alone, by this count, was 2½ times what it was in December, 1969. Calgary reported nearly double the number of registrations at manpower offices.

The manpower department and the Dominion Bureau of Statistics will issue their regular monthly report on employment and unemployment today.

It is expected to reflect a sharp increase in the numbers of workers actually unemployed, now probably more than 500,000, but perhaps also showing a continuing decline in the incidence of unemployment on a seasonally-adjusted basis.

The two sets of figures—those from local offices, and those reported in the manpower—DBS national report—differ in the way they are collected.

The local manpower offices report numbers of workers being paid unemployment insurance and those registered for new jobs. Many of the latter can include people who have registered more than once, in different offices, and those who have jobs but want better ones.

The monthly manpower—DBS report due today is based on a country-wide survey of 30,000 representative households and estimates the total number of people in the labor force, those who did work during the survey week, and those who were unemployed for that week.

The manpower—DBS definition of unemployment is strictly limited and cannot be compared directly with the so-called administrative figures used for unemployment insurance and job-seeker registrations. However, an expert on employment statistics here said the year-to-year trends are always similar.

In November—for the week ended Nov. 14—there were an estimated 476,000 unemployed out of a total labor force of 8.4 million. This was up sharply from 354,000 unemployed in a labor force of 8.1 million a year earlier.

November's unemployment rate was 5.7 per cent of the labor force last year, compared with 4.4 in November, 1969. But the statisticians adjust these figures to rule out the influences of normal seasonal factors that affect unemployment, resulting in a seasonally-adjusted rate of 6.5 per cent for last November, compared with five per cent one year earlier.

Quebec City reported that manpower office registrations last month totalled 18,000 to 19,000 compared with 13,000 a year earlier.

Montreal figures showed a slight decline, to 65,346 from 65,583, but officials cautioned that these figures could include many duplicated registrations and were "operational" statistics rather than a precise count of the unemployed.

Western Canada reports varied, indicating some lessening of the incidence of unemployment in British Columbia, but higher figures for the Prairies.

Reader's Digest Faces Charges

OTTAWA (CP) — The consumer affairs department has charged Reader's Digest of Canada with making "untrue, deceptive or misleading" statements in mass-mailed advertising material promoting a sweepstakes contest in 1969 and 1970.

The charges were laid in Montreal Jan. 6 under the Combines Investigation Act.

The magazine is a subsidiary of Reader's Digest of the United States which has had 11 promotional sweepstakes challenged by the Federal Trade Commission there.

But a spokesman for the consumer affairs department said Wednesday the Canadian charges had nothing to do with the U.S. investigation.

The Montreal charges relate to a $69,000 Lucky Number Draw in 1969 and a $70,000 Lucky Number Draw in 1970 and the advertising is alleged to have been circulated between July 4 and Nov. 18, 1969 and between Jan. 1 and May 31, 1970.

What Goes On?

Man's Alimony Reduced

TORONTO (CP) — The alimony Louis Cohen receives from his ex-wife Ruth, of Windsor, Ont., was cut by the Ontario Court of Appeal Wednesday to $125 a month.

Last April Mr. Justice John Osler if the Ontario Supreme Court ordered Mrs. Cohen to pay her husband $335 a month.

Mr. Cohen had been living in Toronto on welfare of $25 a week and said he was destitute, sick and unable to work.

Mr. Justice Osler noted, when he made the alimony order, that Mrs. Cohen has $125,000 equity in a Windsor apartment house valued at $135,000 and that her annual income in the last three years varied from $8,000 to $11,000.

Two appeal court justices concurred in the judgment of Mr. Justice J. B. Aylesworth that Mr. Cohen failed to produce satisfactory proof that he is destitute and cannot work.

He said Mr. Cohen should have produced medical and income tax evidence to justify the alimony granted by Mr. Justice Osler. Under the circumstances an allowance of $125 is proper, Mr. Justice Aylesworth said.

Strike Hits 160 A and Ps

TORONTO (CP) — Some 2,000 workers at 97 of the 160 A and P supermarkets in Ontario went on strike today.

Company officials and negotiators for the Amalgamated Meat Cutters of North America were far apart on the terms of an agreement when pickets took up their positions.

Picketing began at midnight at stores with night shifts.

The strike came two days after The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. Ltd. introduced a new discount policy for its Toronto stores.

Affected by the strike are stores in 30 communities, including Toronto, Windsor, London, Hamilton, St. Catharines, Niagara Falls, Welland, Oakville, Oshawa, Whitby, Renfrew and the Ottawa Valley.

Members of the negotiating committee left behind a skeleton team when they checked out of their hotel headquarters Wednesday night after a company response to a union proposal fell "far below" the union's bottom terms.

Negotiators said they waited from 5 p.m. Tuesday until 3 p.m. Wednesday for the response after the union gave the company its final and firm position.

The union's position is tied to the terms of an agreement covering employees at Steinberg's Ltd., negotiated last summer.

Male clerks at Steinberg's and other organized chains get $143.50 a week, while the rate at A and P is $124. In June, Steinberg's clerks will receive $158 50.

Meat cutters are paid $151 a week at A and P, compared with $164.50 at other chains, who will raise the rate to $178.50 in June.

L. Victor Pathe, who directed the union organizing drive at A and P, said other issues are job security clauses to cover transfers from store to store, the use of part-time employees, automation and the use of outside salesmen in stocking shelves, as well as restrictions on store managers and assistant managers doing work normally assigned to members of the bargaining unit.

Mr. Pathe said the old contract expired Dec. 14, and the union postponed a pre-Christmas strike at the company's request.

Brazil Frees 70 Prisoners For Hostage

RIO DE JANEIRO (Reuter) — The stage was set for the release of kidnapped Swiss Ambassador Giovanni Bucher today after the Brazilian government flew 70 political prisoners to freedom in Chile.

The prisoners arrived safely in Santiago early this morning and their arrival was expected to end Bucher's 38-day ordeal as a hostage in the hands of left-wing guerrillas.

In Santiago, the freed prisoners shouted revolutionary slogans and cursed the Brazilian government as they left the Boeing 707 that brought them.

Later, the refugees were told they could not make political declarations which might damage relations between Chile and Brazil.

The Swiss ambassador was kidnapped Dec. 7 on his way to work and the 70-man ransom agreed for his release was the highest price paid by any country in exchange for a kidnapped diplomat.

The previous record also was Brazil's when it obtained the liberation of kidnapped German Ambassador Ehrenfried von Holleben by flying 40 prisoners to Algeria last June.

President Emilio Garrastazu Medici signed the decree Wednesday night exiling 68 of the prisoners from the country and expelling two who are the foreigners. The group included 10 women and three small children.

The decree made no mention of the kidnappers' demands but said the presence of the 70 prisoners had "become inconvenient, noxious and dangerous to national security."

The two foreign prisoners were an Italian, and a Frenchman

The other prisoners included Jean Marc von der Weld, a Swiss-Brazilian student leader; Nancy Mangabeira Unger, a Brazilian-American girl accused of attempting to kidnap an American consul last year, and Gustavo Buarque Schuller, charged with stealing $2.4 million from a safe belonging to late Sao Paulo Gov. Adhemar e Barros to finance the guerrilla movement.

Nicholson Picks Christie Play

Agatha Christie's novels and murder mystery plays have thrilled readers and audiences alike for years.

The element of surprise near the end of her stories has become a trademark. In fact, her mysteries have been appreciated so much that the British government officially recognized her literary contribution. She is now known as Dame Agatha Christie, equivalent to a man's title of "Sir."

Recognized for their annual choice of superior dramatic selections performed before a packed house, the Nicholson Catholic College Drama Club has chosen an Agatha Christie thriller . . . "The Unexpected Guest."

Under the able direction of Sister Mary Fleurette, who studied drama at the Universities of Marquette, Toronto and Waterloo, the senior students are putting together what promises to be a most worthwhile evening of theatre, Jan. 29 and 30.

The story plot revolves around an elderly invalid, John Dallaire, and his lovely wife, Debbie Schrieder, residing in an isolated area in Wales.

The young wife is visited by a romantic interest, Peter Gray. As is characteristic of murder mysteries like this, the crippled husband becomes The Body at the hands of the villain.

Investigating officers are Michael Thompson and Rod McNeil.

Confusing the issues for the long arms of the law are housekeeper, Debbie Anderson, household matriarch Kathy Ryan, visitor, Ronald Hall, the dead man's unusual son, Mark Coates, and Michael Bradshaw, the valet.

"What evil lurks in the hearts of men?"

What is the unusual twist to the story?

Which character is revealed as the villain?

The best method of answering these questions, other than purchasing a copy of the play, would be first-hand viewing.

Tickets are one dollar, at the door or from club members.

Entertainment Roundup

LONDON (Reuter) — Susan Wilding, who succeeded Elizabeth Taylor as the wife of actor Michael Wilding, was granted her fifth divorce Wednesday. Her allegations of adultery were uncontested by husband No. 5, businessman Bertram Collins. Wilding was her fourth husband.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — State Senator Milt Earnhart of Fort Smith introduced a bill in the Arkansas senate Wednesday setting out regulations surrounding the holding of rock festivals in the state.

The measure provides that city or county authorities would have to be notified 30 days prior to any festival and that backers would have to post a corporate surety bond of $50,000 with city or county officials.

Promoters of a festival also would have to provide satisfactory water supply, sewage facilities, sleeping areas and other facilities health officials may deem necessary.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Our Bodies Need Periodic Tuning

Wow, don't the years flit by! However expressed, it is a truism that we tend to procrastinate because we are unaware that the hours and days tick off so steadily and quickly.

As I write, I hear our piano - tuner laboriously and expertly bringing my wife's instrument back into shape. Just the other day she said, "I can't believe it has been three years since we had the piano tuned. I know it has needed it, but I've kept putting it off because I had no idea it has been so long."

So, as I hear the chords being tested in the background, I can't help thinking of the similarity to medical tune-ups on our own machines. For years I've been advising readers to have their eyes checked at least every two years to prevent blindness by recognizing and treating unsuspected glaucoma.

Last year in smug complacency, I made an appointment with my ophthalmologist for my "regular" tune - up. He said, as he looked at my card, "Rather late, aren't you? You had your last checkup five years ago." he knew how often I preach the need for regular examinations and kidded me about it. Fortunately, the examination was negative. But it might easily have been otherwise because of my procrastination.

Perhaps the simile is way off. If you don't have a piano tuned for 10 years, it won't suffer mortal disintegration. Nevertheless, an untuned piano doesn't "play well." It loses its potential effectiveness. It's no fun.

But isn't it so when our bodies and emotions don't play well? For example, you take aspirin for months to overcome or palliate the discomforts of arthritis. It doesn't help. A tune - up by your doctor might reveal the reason. Your arthritis may be gouty arthritis — which you don't suspect — and all the aspirin in China won't help.

You suffer month after month from premenstrual tension. You are nervous, irritable and miserable for at least one week out of every four. A tune-up by your doctor would give you the reason for your cyclic tension. And medicine would relieve you by diminishing your monthly trials.

So it is with our general health. We often drag ourselves around. We may not even be in danger of serious illness. But isn't it worth a tune-up (which doesn't necessarily mean a time - consuming, expensive examination) so we can enjoy life rather than just endure it?

(Incidentally, in the background I hear the keys being tapped. Our piano is now giving forth happy sounds. It seems as thankful for the tune-up as a patient whose arthritis is responding to his doctor's ministrations).

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My doctor tells me I have a bad heart. He has prescribed digitalis. He says I will have to take it for years. Is this dangerous? Is it a poison? — Mrs. L.

Comment: I have had patients on digitalis for years and years. Instead of being dangerous it prolonged their lives so that they could live in comfort. Digitalis — like any medicine — is a "poison" only when the patient self-treats and is not under the doctor's supervision. Be thankful for digitalis, Mrs. L. Take it as directed. It will be helpful, not harmful.

• • •

For Mr. N.: The instrument with the "little light that looks back into your eyes to examine the blood vessels" is called an ophthalmoscope.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For Friday, January 15

Your birthday today: This year you start to develop an interest in philosophic, psychic, and mystical subjects. Insight into popular causes may bring you to a dissenting view, which can get in the way of your welfare and self-improvement programs. Emotional links now are less clear, not always comfortable. Solitude, meditation, prayer are more needed than the buzz of intimate human contact. Today's natives would rather be right than wear the honors or a crown.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A test of a business contact comes today. It is your responsibility, nobody else's, to master your inner tensions or discontent. Entertainment becomes expensive if you experiment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Avoid a weekend letdown in your work. Don't put off anything important; conditions are about to change and make it more awkward. Don't provide amusement for a curious bystander: discretion!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Expected money may not arrive. Promises are of little avail. Your own search turns up additional resources—which you needn't share until all your concerns are attended.

CANCER (June 11 - July 22): You see faulty design, poor planning around you. What you and your community can do about such things needs study, planning. For the moment cope with what's there now.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Close out the workweek neatly; leave purely personal affairs until next week. Avoid promising too much to younger people. The evening is for mental stimuli.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Somehow, for all your effort to let others carry their share, you wind up carrying too much of the expenses, supplying more than your share of the energy.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Intrigue, complex group relationships have to be considered today. Make allowances, keep your own intentions unsaid. Discount adverse comment as reflecting only a passing mood.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Don't let the moods of associates disturb your creative drive. Push through all the details to settle matters that should be finished by day's end.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): If some matter slips your attention, other people will never let you forget it. Take time, check it out. A transaction is in the works you shouldn't push to completion as yet.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Tact and discretion are your watchwords. Neighbors, relatives seek understanding, have incomplete facts. Consider the context in which they hear your comments.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): There's a gap somewhere in your arrangements. Look for it while you still have time to do something about it. Keep business tensions out of your social life.

PISCES (Feb. 19 - March 20): You worry needlessly about your status, while being less concerned about earnings than you should be. Friends are temperamental. Leave them alone for the moment.

Electronics Firm Makes Coffins

HALIFAX (CP) — Nova Scotia's bid to get into the electronics age appeared to be laid out today in a row of solid-wood coffins.

The coffins were being manufactured by about 25 employees in the Stellarton, N.S., plant of Clairtone Sound Corp., a company that was launched four years ago to get the province into the business of making television sets.

The latest in a series of setbacks for the company, dating back almost to the start of operations, came Wednesday with the announcement that its stock was delisted on the Toronto Stock Exchange because of poor business prospects.

Wolves Attack Boy

Richard Samis, 14, and Eric Samis, 16, of RR 2 Colborne, display two brush wolves shot near their home. Two such wolves reportedly attacked Eric Monday while he was snowmobiling near a Northumberland County swamp. The boy is holding the hatchet he used to defend himself. For story see page 2.

Statistics on Jobless Provoke Bitter Attacks

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Liberal government's anti-inflation policies came under fierce attack Thursday from labor leaders and opposition politicians across Canada in the wake of statistics showing a 13-per-cent rise in the ranks of the unemployed in a single month.

Figures released Thursday morning by Canada Manpower and the Dominion Bureau of Statistics showed that 538,000 Canadians were unemployed in mid-December, 6.5 per cent of the labor force.

By Thursday night, angry politicians and labor leaders were attempting to turn the statistics into criticism of the Trudeau government.

In Ottawa, Joseph Morris, executive vice-president of the Canadian Labor Congress, said the jobless figures represent "a terrible waste of Canada's talents and resources."

Mr. Morris said the situation could have been avoided had the government taken responsible action a year ago when it knew what was in store, instead of pursuing "excessively tight money policies which have been instrumental in bringing about the present crisis."

In Winnipeg, Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, on the first full day of his cross-Canada "unemployment tour," accused the government of deliberately trying to "run down the economy," adding that "there are hundreds of thousands of Canadian paying for this."

"I'm not suggesting at this stage that too much can be done about it," said the Progressive Conservative leader. "The government has let it go pretty long."

In the Commons, NDP Leader T. C. Douglas failed in an attempt to force a special debate on unemployment Thursday afternoon, then predicted another 100,000 Canadians will join the jobless in January.

Israelis Raid Lebanon

SARAFAND, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli troops, flying in over the sea by helicopter, today raided a secret harbor base used by Palestinian Arab guerrillas to smuggle men and weapons to Arabs in the occupied Gaza Strip.

An estimated 120 Israeli commandos swept through this little fishing village in south Lebanon to blow up two shoreside guerrilla strongpoints. But the guerrillas and the Lebanese army said they fought off the raiders before they reached the main base.

Government and guerrilla communiques said two guerrillas were killed and seven wounded in the three-hour fight. The guerrillas said they killed or wounded at least 15 Israelis.

Consumer Index Drops in December

OTTAWA (CP) — The consumer price index dropped half a point last month to 129.8 from 130.3 in November, led by declining food prices, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

It was the first November-to-December drop in the over-all index in more than a decade.

The index, based on 1961 consumer prices equalling 100, was 127.9 in December, 1969. The year's increase, therefore, was a narrow 1.9 index points or 1.5 per cent, the smallest since 1964.

Along with a significant drop in food prices, there were declines in the clothing, health and personal care, and recreation and reading components of the over-all index. The only increases—and they were fractional—were in the cost of housing and transportation.

It was the fourth consecutive month that food prices declined. From the food index's peak of 131.9 in August, it dropped to 125.6 last month, down 4.2 index points from Deceber, 1969.

The bureau said the latest decline in food prices was generally across-the-board, except for some increases in the prices of fish and fresh produce.

Some pre-Christmas sales of clothing pushed that component of the over-all index down half a point to 127.9 from 128.4 in November.

Lakes Filthy

Swift Action Likely

OTTAWA (CP) — Swift action to clean up the lower Great Lakes is expected to flow from an International Joint Commission report that found pollution in the lakes so bad it is causing injury to health and property.

The 174-page report, summing up a six-year study by the commission for the U.S. and Canadian governments, was made public simultaneously here and in Washington Thursday.

It urges the two governments to enact stiff regulations to halt the decline of lakes Erie and Ontario and the international section of the St. Lawrence River, brought about by uncontrolled dumping of municipal sewage and industrial wastes.

It also recommends that the IJC, which now is powerless to deal with the problem, be given authority to implement a cleanup campaign.

In Washington, Secretary of State William Rogers said he would like to see urgent action taken on water-quality programs suggested in the report, and announced he had asked the chairman of the U.S. council on environmental quality to pursue the matter.

In Ottawa, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp predicted that a Canada-U.S. ministerial meeting scheduled for sometime in the next few months will open the way for concerted programs to achieve agreed water standards.

He also predicted ministers at the bilateral talks will establish effective surveillance mechanisms.

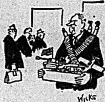
Fisheries Minister Jack Davis, minister-designate of the proposed new environmental affairs department, said in a prepared statement that stronger controls to protect the Great Lakes system are urgently needed.

He hoped that arrangements emerging from the ministerial meeting will go even beyond the recommendations in the commission report.

He said Ottawa will endorse the recommended goals 100 per cent, and said it was his impression the U.S. government will do the same.

Mr. Davis may discuss the matter on a planned visit to Washington today.

The commission report given the two federal governments just before New Year's, finds Lake Erie, particularly its western basin, in an advance state of decay because of pollution. The decay of Lake Ontario also is accelerating.



'Arms, arms, get your arms here!'

Nyerere Says Heath Just Ignores Africa

SINGAPORE (CP) — British Prime Minister Heath defended today his country's right to make its own decisions and said the Commonwealth is not a court of appeal with powers to sit in final judgment on policies and actions of its members.

Heath, speaking before the second session of the Commonwealth prime ministers conference, urged leaders of 30 other countries to weigh carefully their decisions before allowing the Commonwealth to be fragmented by misunderstanding.

He said it is assumed there is nothing involved in Commonwealth membership that would impair the right of a member state to reach its own decisions within its own jurisdiction.

"These are the assumptions which lie behind British membership of the Commonwealth," Heath said.

In defending Britain's right to decide her policies, Heath was making an indirect reference to his South African arms policy, under fire from most of the Commonwealth. However, he did not mention South Africa by name.

The British proposal to provide South Africa with naval arms, including warships, under an old military pact brought another strong denunciation from President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania, who circulated a long statement among the Commonwealth leaders as they resumed their talks.

Nyerere, while pleading for continued British friendship, warned that the United Kingdom would be responsible for any damage to the Commonwealth if it proceeds with the policy of arms for the South Africans.

A conference source said Heath's one-hour speech, dealing with a broad spectrum of international issues, including the Soviet naval buildup in the Indian Ocean, appeared to have been well received.

But President Milton Obote of Uganda told a reporter:

"To Mr. Heath, Africa does not exist. For Mr. Heath, there are no problems in Africa."

In his statement, President Nyerere said the proposed sale of British arms to South Africa would be a sellout of black African nations.

"If anyone fails to understand the depths of Africa's feelings on this matter, then they do not understand the reaction of people who have suffered from racial discrimination."

Britain would be responsible for any repercussions in international relations, damage to the Commonwealth and hostility of African nations towards Britain if Heath went ahead with this policy.

Nyerere placed Tanzania's total opposition to racism and apartheid above unity of the Commonwealth.

"We make no apology for the fact that we want to see the present regime in South Africa overthrown," he said. The sale of British arms to South Africa, whatever the restriction imposed, "is a declaration of support—an implied alliance of a kind."

Black African countries fear the British arms would be used

Tax on Sex Just A Joke

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (Reuter) — A state legislator who briefly introduced a bill here to tax sexual intercourse said Thursday he did it only to relieve a tense political situation.

Representative Bernard C. Gladstone, a 47-year-old Democrat and lawyer and father of three sons and a daughter, proposed the bill last Friday in the state house of assembly. It would have levied a $2 tax on all males over the age of puberty for each act of intercourse.

This week he withdrew the bill, saying he did not intend it to go any further.

"It was an attempt to relieve a tense situation over a proposal to introduce a state income tax," he explained.

Bail Refused Robert Lemieux

MONTREAL (CP) — Bail was refused today to lawyer Robert Lemieux and two other persons detained since Oct. 16 under the War Measures Act, but Lemieux swore to fight the decision "in all the courts with all my might."

One young man was thrown out of Court of Queen's Bench after shouting, "You call that justice?" to Mr. Justice Roger Ouimet.

The other bail applicants are teacher Charles Gagnon and writer Pierre Vallieres.

All three are charged with seditious conspiracy and with being members of the outlawed Front de Liberation du Quebec.

"This judgment violates the rights . . . the most elementary principles of justice," Lemieux said.

While there was "an injustice against me," he said, there was "an even more serious injustice" againt Vallieres and Gagnon who have been in jail on various charges in the last four years.

Mr. Justice Ouimet said he would study the stenographer's notes later to determine whether to take further proceedings—possibly contempt of court—against Lemieux for the remarks.

There was loud applause from some of the dozen or so persons in court after Lemieux spoke.

In his judgment, Mr. Justice Ouimet said he took into consideration "several criteria," including the possibility of the three not showing up for trial, the nature of the charges and the severity of the related punishment if the three were found guilty.

The decision by Mr. Justice Ouimet is expected to have a negative bearing on Lemieux' earlier request to represent others detained under the act.

Lemieux is to stand trial Feb. 1 along with Vallieres, Gagnon and two others, all facing similar charges.

He appeared in Quebec Court of Appeal Thursday and made application to represent five others being held for trial, including Paul and Jacques Rose.

Trenton Council Bypasses Mayor

TRENTON (Staff) — Councillor Ted Parker was empowered by a special session of town council last night to sign a subdividers' agreement with Dufferin Developments that Mayor Duncan McDonald would not sign.

The prospect that Mayor McDonald might not sign the agreement was raised by Councillor Parker at last Monday's regular council meeting. The Mayor said at that time that he would sign the agreement, if there were a general policy for such agreements on the books.

Clerk - comptroller O. W. Larry indicated to council then that a document affixed to a 1967 subdivision pact was a statement of policy. Council understood that the mayor would sign the Dufferin agreement by which the town would pay 50 per cent of the cost of servicing the new development.

However, Mayor McDonald did not sign the new agreement when he went to the Municipal Offices yesterday afternoon to affix his signature to legislation passed at Monday's session. Learning that the subdivision agreement had not been signed by the mayor after council had ratified it, Councillor Parker called last night's meeting.

The mayor told council last night that he had not been satisfied with the terms of the policy document and that there was no urgency in the matter anyway because the developers of the subdivision, to be built southwest of Trenton High School, had not yet negotiated for services with the Public Utilities Commission.

Councillor Parker said that he understood that Dufferin Developments were about to call tenders for the initial phase of the subdivision and contended that they should not be impeded by council now that it had authorized the 50 per cent agreement.

Over-20s Largest County Age Group

Youth culture in Hastings county may have had its day.

The over-20 age group forms the largest proportion of the county's population, and their numbers are increasing.

The continuing trend toward an older population was revealed in population statistics compiled by Hastings county board of education and just released to trustees.

The increase in the over-20 age group is accompanied by a decrease in the under - 5 group.

The percentage of under-5 children in the county decreased 8.02 per cent between 1969 and 1970, from a total of 6,398 to 5,885.

The percentage of people over 20 increased 6.15 per cent in the same period, from 54,276 to 57,612.

Adults now make up 62.11 percent of the county's 92,763 population.

The 5-to-113 year-old group also decreased. Between 1969 and 1970 their numbers dropped 2.09 per cent from 18,542 to 18,155.

But the number of teenagers (aged 14 to 19) increased in the last year. Their numbers are up 5.23 per cent, from 10,559 to 11,111.

The consequence has been increased secondary school enrolment, portable classrooms and new school construction.

County board associate superintendent E. T. Morris compiled the population statistics to determine trends in age groupings in the county. On the basis of the annual figures, the board makes its plans for teacher hiring and construction.

If the present trend continues, the demand for secondary school accommodation will increase for a time, then fall off when the current under 5 group reaches high school age.

Over-all population growth in the county in 1970 was 3.33 per cent.

But the largest proportion of the increase occurred in the centre Hastings area. Its 8.25 per cent increase in population almost equalled the increase in the Quinte area (1.98 per cent) and north Hastings (4.91 per cent).

Because no major industry has been established in Centre Hastings, Mr. Morris suggests "dormitory living" may acocunt for the population increase.

For the same reason, he questions whether new industries in the Quinte area will result in an increased resident population. The statistics hint at a trend toward an exodus from urban municipalities as more and more people buy and build houses in the county at increasing distances from their place of work.

Highway improvements tend to lead to a change in residential patterns, Mr. Morris notes.

According to school registers, 15,558 pupils are now being educated in the county. These include pupils from other counties who are bused to school in Hastings, and exclude county children, such as Deseronto secondary school students, who go to institutions in other counties.

Elementary school pupils account for 24,131 of the total school population, secondary school students for 8,529. There are 44 pupils in the Belleville School for retarded children.

Boy Says Wolves Attacked Him

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

COLBORNE (Staff) — A 16-year-old Cramahe Township resident says he was attacked by a pair of brush wolves in a swamp 5 miles north-east of here Monday.

Eric Samis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Samis, was out for a ride on the family snowmobile at midday when the incident occurred.

The youth had driven the vehicle deep into a woodlot about a mile south of the family home near Salem when he began to see animal tracks in the snow leading to a marshy area.

Proceeding across an open area, Eric says that he found it necessary to get off the snowmobile to hack away some brush across the trail swamp.

After clearing the trail with his hatchet, he was returning to the machine when he heard the two hissing animals behind him.

Eric says that, in seconds, one of them pounced on him biting into the left arm of his coat. The other jumped at him from the right as he turned around, grabbing at the collar of his jacket and ripping out the zipper.

"I was scared while it happened, I didn't know what they were going to do," the boy told The Intelligencer.

Eric says he did the only thing he could do — he swung at them with the hatchet he still held in his right hand. He says he hit the one tugging on his left sleeve with the sharp end of the blade, cutting into its head. Both, he adds, then ran off, and he took the snowmobile home.

The Samis family did not notify the provincial police but other residents of RR2, Colborne called the Brighton detachment Wednesday night to report the occurrence because they feared for the safety of their children.

Constable Robert Creighton, who is investigating the incident said yesterday that farmers have told him there are a lot of wolves in the area.

Mr. Samis says he "did not think it was any matter for the police" and Mrs. Samis adds that "Nobody would believe it anyway — everybody keeps saying they are not dangerous".

Action is being taken. A wolf hunt will be held on the Samis property and adjacent farms this Saturday.

"We have to get rid of them now. Children always come home from school through the swamp," Mrs. Samis, a mother of ten children, asserts.

Clarench Samis says the wolves that attacked his son were probably hybrids, not pure wolf, but part dog.

"They can be crossed with anything you like but I still think there is too many of them" his wife says.

"There have been wolves in the area since we moved here nine years ago but they were not aggressive then. Now you can stand out at the door and hear them sing at night. There are far more now than there used to be," she says.

Young Eric himself is a wolf hunter and uses the wolf bounty cheques he receives from the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham as pocket money.

The boy bagged one wolf near his home December 31 and another on New Year's Day.

"He goes out hunting rabbits and comes home with wolves," Mrs. Samis explains, adding that she has enough scares without having anymore.

The family says that their old collie - mix dog lost its tail in a fight with wolves and that their son Richard, 14, saw a pack of four wolves last fall.

Mr. Samis, at first baffled by their son's story, now contends that the wolves attacked Eric because he was wearing part of the suit he has worn in the past while hunting wolves and cleaning their carcasses. "The smell was probably still on the clothes," he said.

"Now is the time to get them," Mrs. Samis told her husband yesterday. "Eric came in white as a ghost Monday and he does not scare easily. I was grateful to see him come home in one piece."

Over-quota Milk Price Is Slashed

Over-quota production of industrial milk will be highly discouraged as result of a new agreement signed Thursday in Ottawa by Ontario and Quebec marketing agencies and the federal government export agency.

Under the new agreement, producers of industrial milk will receive only $1.20 per 100 pounds for over-quota deliveries.

The aim of the new agreement is to hold production of industrial milk in line with domestic needs.

The formal signing by heads of the Canadian Dairy Commission, six Quebec marketing organizations and two Ontario agencies sealed a new system of co-operative market sharing federal subsidies and penalties on over-production of milk for factory processing.

Although prices vary according to market forces, a typical price for industrial milk under the former system was about $3.60 per cwt.

In addition to this, producers later received an extra payment of 99 cents per cwt. for milk within assigned eligibility quotas from the Canadian dairy commission—$1.25 less 26 cents withheld to offset cost in marketing milk products abroad.

Under the system, industrial milk producers received the $3.60 for quota milk but there was no subsidy for over-quota shipments.

Under the new Ontario-Quebec program which applies to milk payments after Dec. 1, 1970, producers will get the full federal subsidy of $1.25 for levies of 26 cents per cwt. on quota milk and $2.40 per cwt. for excess deliveries will be withdrawn.

These levies will be passed on through provincial bodies to the federal commission to cover the cost of marketing surplus products abroad.

Therefore, at a domestic price of $3.60, the new system will provide a payment of $4.59 for quota milk — the same as under the old system, but will provide only $1.20 per cwt. for over-quota milk instead of the previous $3.60.

The rates will apply until March 31 when they will be reviewed.

Arnold Johnston, manager of the Ontario Milk Marketing Board (cheese division) office at Belleville doesn't feel there is much over-population of cheese nationally across Canada.

However, he was unable to say whether there was much over-quota production of industrial milk by local individual farmers.

Industrial milk is that used for the production of cheese, butter, and milk powder, products which are in over-supply on export markets.

Bogus Bill Arrests Made

The Quinte area may still be plagued by counterfeit $10 bills despite two arrests by members of the Belleville Detachment of the OPP

Arrested last weekend was Linda Washer, 18, of Kingston, charged with uttering counterfeit currency. She is now on bail awaiting court appearance Feb. 1.

Henry Evan David, 23, also of Kingston, was arrested on a charge of uttering Dec. 22 and will be in court next Monday, police say.

Warrants on similar charges have been issued for another man and woman, provincial police say.

Chief Douglas Crosbie of Belleville City Police reported the discovery of a counterfeit $10 bill when receipts were turned in at a city bank from Harry Smith Fuels.

The serial number of the bill discovered yesterday was A - E — 1543519.

Belleville has been the latest centre in a long line to discover bogus bills, although the serial number of $10 bills, passed earlier in December in Quinte area municipalities was different. Serial numbers on those bills were R-E or R-S followed by the numbers 5911078.

Bills with those serial numbers were passed in Napanee, Deseronto, Picton and Trenton.

Substitute Artists No Disappointment

By EUGENE LANG

In the annals of the Belleville Community Concert Association there have been only two examples, in many years of a scheduled appearance of an artist (or artists) breaking down with a substitute attraction being hastily arranged. One glaring illustration was over two decades ago when the substitute pianist was Gyorgy Sandor, the brilliant Hungarian virtuoso, who provided one of the finest recitals that local listeners had ever heard. Such was the case again last evening in the BCI auditorium in the unscheduled debut of Ma Si-Hon, violinist, and Tung Kwong-Kwong, pianist. They provided an evening of excellence in content and performance.

Both were renowned musicians in China before their arrival, singly, in the U.S. during the late forties. Making Boston their new home, the year of their marriage, 1954, was the beginning of their duo recital appearances. At present they are in the midst of their sixth North American tour, with Belleville tossed in for good measure. When not on the road they operate a music school for youngsters in the Chinese community of New York, where they now reside.

The program, one of serious intent, included masterworks of the classic and romantic schools. Due to quick juggling by the booking organization in New York, printed programs were not available, so that Mr. Ma announced the selections from stage.

The opener was Beethoven's Sonata in E Flat Major Op. 12 No. 3, an optimistic work of the composer's early years replete with robust allegro, long-arched slow movement and jovial rondo. The first few minutes saw a warming up of the players, especially the violinist, but once they got into their stride, all was well and the sonata was handled with aplomb, notably in finale. Beethoven here in this sonata was wont to give the lion's share of the work to the pianist, which our female artist spun out brilliantly.

Ernest Chausson's Poeme, written in 1896 is a romantic and affectionate rhapsody in free form, long a favorite with violinists. Ma Si-Hon delivered an impassioned rendition of this epic; with technique, of which his endowments are formidable, always servant of the muse. He made of the piece a mystical escape into a realm of elegaic beauty.

Grieg was represented by his Sonata in C Minor Op. 45, the best known of his three excursions for this combination. Both players exhibited once again their oneness in approach and design to the music at hand. Rhythmic boldness was prominent in a virile execution of the outer movements while Grieg's ever-present lyricism was revealed with soaring bow in the introspective folk-like qualities of the romanza. Briefly said, collaboration and co-ordination fulfilled in consummation.

Two movements from Handel's Sonata in D Major were given in a fine performance that saw the violinist skilfully control phrasing of the heavenly cantilena of the largo and agile actuation in the pseudo perpetual motions of the rollicking finale. Tung Kwong-Kwong provided her partner the niceties of delicate piano shadings in this Sonata.

One does not expect a major keyboard composition to be included in a violin and piano recital, but here our undersized but enthusiastic audience was treated to one of the great works of the early 19th century — Franz Schubert's cruelly difficult Wanderer Fantasia in C Major. Schubert himself could not ably play it and once said "let the devil play this damned piece". Tung Kwong-Kwong was not the least afraid of this diabolical four-movement sonata (which it really is) and presented a memorable performance.

Purity of tone shone through in the Wanderer theme of the adagio, caprice cavorted in the scherzo, the opening was brilliant in conception and the finale jolted with rugged octave work in opening theme that seemed to gather momentum and came hurdling headlong to its final measures in a sprint of dazzling virtuosity that can weary and worry the best of pianists. Our soloist did not seem either wearied or worried — she simply gave a splendid reading of this masterwork.

As an encore to a very interesting recital our Oriental artists played a sprightly Mongolian Dance (written by his brother) that again brought difficult violin problems to the fore which proved no worry to Ma Si-Hon.

Like Sandor of years ago, why book the originals when we can get the substitutes and fare better? Our two Chinese musicians can return and they will be welcome.

by the South Africans to suppress black nationalist movements, but Britain has said arms for the South African navy are not suited for such purposes.

If supplying arms to South Africa meant more to Britain than the interests of her Commonwealth partners, "then responsibility for damage to the Commonwealth and for African hostility towards Britain will be clear," Nyerere said.

Tanzania did not wish to see this happen. "I am pleading for friendship with Britain because we in Tanzania value it. I am pleading for the Commonwealth because we believe in it and we need it.

"But we cannot, and we will not, abate our opposition to racialism for any purpose in the world."

For Tanzania, opposition to racism is the top priority of its foreign policy. It expects that if other Commonwealth countries are not so strong in their opposition, they at least should not make the black African people's position relative to South Africa worse than it already is.

'All Systems Go' for New Association

Ray Worrell, manager and secretary-treasurer of the Bay of Quinte District SPORT (Snowmobilers Protecting Others Rights Together) Association, officially founded last night, explains the organization's concern for preservation of natural resources and wildlife to Ontario Lands and Forests officer Jim Ives. Members of the executive represent more than 300 vehicle operators within a radius of 25-30 miles from Belleville.

Snowmobilers Form Association

Representatives of area snowmobile clubs and dealerships within a radius of 25 miles of Belleville, representing some 300 snowmobile club members, last night banded together to officially form a district snowmobile association.

Operating under a steering committee since the first tentative meeting in December, the Bay of Quinte District SPORT (Snowmobilers Protecting Others' Rights Together) Association, elected a slate of officers at what was considered their founding meeting.

Ray Worrell, manager and secretary-treasurer cited incidents of what he referred to as "cowboys and yokels" who have cast a bad reflection on the sportsmen in the district and who have brought nothing but adverse publicity.

"We felt the need was urgent to get the show on the road to protect the sport we love," he said.

"All people's rights must be considered."

One of the association's chief aims is the promotion of wildlife and all natural resources.

To this end, they are organizing volunteer Safety Patrol Scouts to police their own members while on the trail. These scouts are to be at least two - year veterans of machine use, must complete written tests for snow vehicle operation and undergo a demonstration of their driving skill.

Plans are under way for a Safe Sno-Go Week to be held from Jan. 18 to 26, excluding Saturdays and Sundays . . . "the snowmobilers fun time."

During this week, one-night stands will be held at schools in Belleville, Trenton, Picton, Frankford, Deseronto, Stirling and Napanee.

For the programs, the association sought and will receive the co-operation of the Ontario Provincial Police, local town and city police departments, St. John's Ambulance Brigades, the Emergency Measures Organization and all local snowmobile clubs.

Jim Ives of the Ontario Department of Lands and Forest, last night replied to recent requests to join in the instructional week that no official sanction has been received.

"However, I personally feel that we shall be able to participate in at least some of the program," he stated.

Further plans include a race meet for the weekend of Feb. 20-21. John R. Bush, recently elected president of the Quinte Exhibition Committee, approached the new association to inform them that the fair board was offering the facilities of the fairgrounds for the race.

A panel discussion is being set up for Jan. 26 with the debatable topic of "Snowmobiles ought to be banned because they are a danger to our environment . . . yes or no."

Norm Storms of Loyalist College informed the gathered club representatives that furthering the association's goal of educating inexperienced snowmobilers, a course in vehicle operation would be started at the college Automotive Apprentice Building on Wallbridge Crescent in Belleville, Jan. 19 at 7.30 p.m. Cost of the course is $15.

In the midst of the positive plans expressed by the gathering, one association member, Alan Anderson, was less than optimistic.

He expressed his belief that the association would become "nothing more than another club."

It was his contention that most of the problems facing snowmobilers in the Quinte area came from large centres such as Belleville and Trenton.

He said most of the rural club members know each other and most operators belong to the clubs.

He drew attention to the Belleville Snowmobile Club, with a membership of 50 in a snow vehicle population of up to 2,000.

"Most of your city operators are more interesting in bombing around the streets . . . why should they join a club that wants to restrict them?"

Mr. Anderson was referring to an early statement made by Mr. Worrell that "we want to put snowmobiling on the map as good, clean family sport . . . with weekend safaris into open country" rather than in-town operation.

Dave Duffin, newly elected association president and member of the Stirling Snowdrifters, initiators of the organization, criticized his attitude.

"You're expecting too much in such a short time."

Mr. Worrell commented that the public should be made aware of the "good and honest" intentions of the organized operators.

He said that their efforts might take up to two or three years to properly put across, and said that barnstorming wouldn't accomplish their goals.

"You can't push council."

Using an old cliche, he quoted, "you can attract more bees with honey than with vinegar.

As part of their good intentions, members have been spotting trash cans along travelled trails.

Other elected members to the association were vice-president Bob Vieau, president of the Carrying Place Snowmobile Club, Bryce Philp, who will represent area dealerships, Gerald Harrington, Frankford, a director of the Sidney Trail Blazers, who will represent area clubs.

Regional chairmen are Dave Potts of the Stirling Snowdrifters, who will represent the Trenton, Stirling and Frankford area and Ralph Lawlor of the Deseronto Trail Blazers, who will represent the Napanee and Deseronto area.

Representatives for the Picton and Belleville clubs have not yet been appointed.

Snowmobiles Hard On Wild Animals

Incidents of animal cruelty inflicted by snowmobile operators have brought about stringent regulations preventing the hunting or killing of animals on these vehicles.

Jim Ives of the Napanee office of the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests, last night addressed the newly formed Bay of Quinte District SPORT Association.

He told of so-called wolves, rabbits and even deer being run to exhaustion and then being allowed to die of shock after their exertion.

Explaining that most of the "wolves" being run down were, in fact, coyotes.

"People seem to be seeing wolves all over the place these days."

With obvious disgust, he told one story he explained had been "proudly" related.

"A fellow told me, with great delight, about how he and another man, both on snowmobiles, had chased a jackrabbit on their machines."

"Each got one of the rabbit's ears and that was how they 'got' that animal.

"Maybe this was sport for him but I didn't laugh."

Concerning the new regulations, he said "I hope we can really sock it to them and really get good court legislation."

Referring to confiscation of hunting equipment when infractions are noted, he offered hope that "some of our boys, when they catch someone harassing an animal, take away the machines, suits, helmets and maybe even boots."

Ray Worrel, manager and secretary-treasurer of the new organization, agreed that one of the basic aims of the gathered members was the promotion of good sportsmanship and the control of so-called "cowboys and yokels" who give a bad name to the sport.

Mr. Ives informed the 20 members present that the obvious danger to animals is not the only problem facing wildlife.

He explained that snowmobile trails become hard-packed and form barriers for the rodent population, important to the ecological balance of nature.

Mice and other rodents burrow under the snow to travel in winter. The hard packing prevents them from free movement.

Bryce Philps, elected representative of area dealers, jokingly advised the association that a member be placed in charge of "mouse culverts for the Stirling-Belleville area."

After the laughter died, the lands and forests representative informed the membership that in the spring, the slower-melting trails "forms dams and don't allow the water to run off," a further hazard to animals in the wild.

In the wild, animals are chiefly noctural feeders. Mr. Ives explained that these habits are interrupted.

Expressing his personal views, he said he would like to see legislation restricting vehicles from deer yards, that area providing forage for the animals, possibly allowing one trail through the yard "so as to prevent harassment of the deer."

He also expressed hopes that legislation would eventually ban people from carrying firearms on the machines.

He congratulated the new association for its efforts in promoting good sportsmanship and offered his assistance in educating snowmobilers in proper operation to safeguard wildlife.

Profit in Visitors Down on the Farm

Farm vacations for city folk can be both satisfying and financially rewarding for farmers looking for a cash sideline to boost family income.

This was indicated to approximately 200 farmers who attended Wednesday's opening day of the 1971 Quinte Farm Conference at Club Canara in Belleville.

The speaker was Mrs. Marian Craig of RR1, Napanee who outlined some of the fundamentals in offering farm vacations to paying city guests.

Mrs. Craig said farm vacations were virtually unheard of in Canada before 1967 but since then the idea has mushroomed and exciting new developments have been noted in Ontario.

Why do city folk want to spend their vacations on a farm and pay for the privilege?

The speaker said that for some it was nostalgia—either they grew up on a farm or their childhood holidays were spent on Grandfather's farm or with country cousins.

In other cases, vacationers simply want a change of pace, away from city crowds and pollution where they can find rest and relaxation.

For a successful farm vacation venture, Mrs. Craig stressed the importance of neatness about the farm home. Other words of advice were to start small and grow, do most of your own work and offer lots of home cooking.

Small city children like lots of action and can marvel over a country lane, an old rail fence, a new-born calf or baby pigs.

But Mrs. Craig warned that caution was also important.

"It's like running a hotel, it has many responsibilities such as health, safety, insurance and sanitary standards," she said. Pleasing the customers so they will pass the word and come back next year was also important.

The theme of yesterday's conference — the first day of a two-day session — was "Opportunities in Agriculture" with various speakers giving first-hand experience in specific phases of farm operation.

Ross J. Milne, agricultural engineer with the Ontario Department of Agriculture and Food, talked about vealing dairy calves; Alan Drummond, RR 8 Peterborough, gave his experience in custom raising dairy heifers while John Bonsma, RR 1 Blackstock outlined necessary procedures in specializing in dairy and beef cattle.

In the afternoon Don Stevenson, Ontario Department of Agriculture and Food, spoke on "Sheepraising in the 70s".

He said the profit return of sheep raising could be comparable to that of other livestock but required a high degree of management.

Donald MacDonald, Wolfe Island farmer, talked of his widely diversified family farm operation, which included dairy and beef cattle, sheep raising and the production of seeds.

He said he considered beef and sheep raising as "cash" crops.

Production of Birdsfoot Trefoil was also a cash crop of some importance to the family farm operation.

The second day of the annual farm conference was on Friday with emphasis on new farm production techniques and new farm policies.

Belleville

Salesman of the Year in Belleville was Tom Landers. Mr. Landers' achievement was recognized at the annual Bowes & Cocks awards dinner held in Peterborough on December 18. The Belleville office of Bowes & Cocks Limited attained another record year with a 7% increase over 1969.

Bowes & Cocks Ltd. are pleased to announce a 1970 year-end report indicating another outstanding year in real estate sales. Record volumes were attained in 13 Bowes & Cocks' offices in Ontario.

J. M. Bowes and W. E. Cocks are especially proud of this achievement in a challenging year such as 1970 when increasing costs, rising interest rates and high unemployment have contributed to economic instability.

A distinctive feature of each Bowes & Cocks' office is the Gallery of Homes concept. Prospective buyers can browse through illuminated transparencies of property for sale to select, for personal inspection, only those homes which satisfy their needs.

Bowes & Cocks Limited is affiliated with The Gallery of Homes Ltd., an international network of Realtors represented in over 300 offices in North America.

Crimes of Violence

Ontario Chief Justice Wells' reference to the existence of a "serious malaise" in Canadian society, as reflected by the increase in violent crimes involving insanity, is a matter for grave concern.

In 1969 Ontario courts dealt with 49 murders, ten of them in Toronto. Last year there were 53, of which no fewer than 17 were in Toronto. Of the 17, all but one of the accused were found not guilty by reason of insanity.

This prompted from the Chief Justice the comment that it indicated "a very serious malaise in our country which should require everyone's careful consideration." The same thing, he added, was true of rape which was also a crime of violence.

No explanation was advanced for the sharp increase in killings in Toronto, quite out of proportion to the overall figure of 53 which Chief Justice Wells said represented only a "quite modest" increase.

But there is this matter of mental disturbance which has been found to be at the root of the trouble in almost every instance — last year anyway — and if it is going to be a trend in the province it is a worrisome one. Mental instability, unhappily, can go unmasked until it manifests itself in this manner. In the United States, where the impersonality of the materialist society,, allied to a host of other latter-day social pressures, impinges with even greater intensity, it is worse still.

For the medical profession, particularly psychiatry, sociologists and law enforcement, it is a matter for continuing attention and research, with a view somehow to curbing this social threat. In recent days, we might mention in passing, it has revealed itself in yet another way — in 19 suicides in federal pententiaries last year. This figure was released in the Commons by Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer.

Forward Into 1971

A reading of the activities and initiatives involved in the eight committees established by the Chamber of Commerce at its first regular meeting of the year is an indication of the city's potential for further progress.

The committees are the booster committee, community affairs, the convention bureau, education, membership, special projects, tourist promotion and the winter carnival committee. Each committee has seven to ten members and represents a broad cross-section of the city's professional life.

The promotion of the city as a convention centre is one of the new initiatives of the Chamber this year and with the planned opening of the Four Seasons hotel, allied with existing hotel facilities and motel accommodation, this could be all the closer to reality.

Under special projects we see that downtown urban renewal has not been forgotten and that under the same heading is the promotion of "improvements on air, rail and road transportation."

In the latter context, we recall periodic mention of the possibility of Belleville being included in a commercial air route, only for the idea to fade inexorably into the limbo of forgotten things, or if not forgotten then relegated to the sphere of the impractical.

Maybe 1971 will bring the subject to the fore again. After all Belleville is moving ahead, and within the context of such progress we must consider improved communications. Tourist promotion too is once again within the sphere of the Chamber's operations.

All in all, and in the words of the song, we hope it will be a "very good year," in Belleville.

Winter Sport

It is amazing to witness the transformation of Zwick's Island into a haven for both old-fashioned skating and the modern craze of snowmobiling. There is the noise factor, but the snowmobilers keep their speed down — a matter of necessity in the confined area — and overall there is much more life to the place than in past years. One sees the odd showoff weaving and hot-rodding a bit with his new mechanical toy, but as we say there appears to be no threat to life and limb in the way drivers disport themselves at the island. Safety, however, should remain uppermost in their minds because with so many machines around there is always the possibility of a collision.

High School Students' Views on Foreign Ownership

Letter to The Hamilton Spectator

The adult population (particularly the news media it seems) are quick to notice, and, often condemn, youth as impatient and somewhat radical. A few of them are.

Many of them, however, readily see all aspects of a situation and are quite capable of as good or better judgment than are some adults.

Using the management technique of a brainstorming session, Delta's grade 11 business organization classes looked at the issue of foreign control of Canadian businesses. This was the result:

Some thought we should not join the U.S. as the 51st state.

Others disagreed.

A number believed that nothing we do will alter the existing situations and we will ultimately become the 51st state.

Many think we are mutually cooperating now to the benefit of the people of both countries and we should continue just as we are.

The opinion was expressed that while the U.S. owns a lot of Canadian businesses, they own businesses in a lot of other countries too and it doesn't follow that we or the other countries involved will become part of the U.S. Furthermore, finally we would be better off as a part of the U.S. but socially we would be worse off because of riots, war and other problems the U.S. are having.

What follows are some of the suggestions made at the session:

Our government should, over a period of time, buy majority - interest shares in currently U.S. controlled companies and resell those shares to Canadians.

We should develop closer economic ties with Britain.

Too much industrialization seriously adds to pollution and we would be better advised to not expand our industries with foreign capital. Foreign - owned companies aren't concerned about pollution they cause here.

Those Americans who are buying Crown land should move here permanently and become Canadians if they like Canada that well.

Tax rebates might be given to Canadian - owned businesses and-or taxes at a stiffer rate imposed on foreign - owned businesses.

We should stop further purchases of business by U.S. interests — government control to enforce this.

We should not rely on our U.S. neighbors for defence but build up our own defences — this would create employment and stimulate our economy both by more enlisted personnel and by defence producing industries.

We should encourage more capital from other countries and less from the U.S. While we need more investment capital than our own people can supply, it should not be largely supplied by one other nation.

The Canadian government should appoint more Canadian people to write more texts for our schools. Since it is our young people who will have to deal with this issue in the future we should be giving them a solid background in things Canadian.

History was specifically cited as an area where not enough Canadian material is taught in our schools in relationship with the amount of U.S. history that is taught.

We cannot expect any drastic, sudden changes. The situation took years to develop and won't be changed overnight.

P.M.'s Policy Questioned

Authoritarian Regimes Threaten Christianity and Freedom Of The Individual in Africa Today

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

It is interesting to note that our Prime Minister, Pierre Trudeau is now attending the Commonwealth Conference in Singapore, and that he opposes Prime Minister Heath of Great Britain who wishes by selling arms to apartheid South Africa to make it possible to keep open our priceless naval base at Simonstown near Capetown to avoid having Britain shut out of the Indian Ocean.

Mr. Trudeau, as a highly educated Roman Catholic, has apparently forgotten too much of the history of Europe and of Christianity. Now out Christianity, whether of Greek Catholic, Roman Catholic or Protestant, has always contained a strong element of pacifism.

Soon after the military collapse of the two Roman Empires the Arabs in their Arabian desert developed a highly militant group we know as Moslems and in the 7th Century AD they first took over Egypt, followed it up by taking over all of North Africa, all of Spain, and for a century even Sicily.

On their right the Saracens, and later the Turks, took over Palestine, Asia Minor and then bypassing Constantinople, took over most of Serbia, and captured the almost unarmed "island" of Byzantium itself.

At their leisure the Turks worked their way through Hungary and after the Roman Catholics and the German Protestants weakened themselves to exhaustion the Turks made their second attack on Vienna and almost captured it in 1683.

Montreal is a great Catholic centre for the financing of foreign missions under the name of the Croix D'Or and as they are now operating in Chile and Bolivia they must already feel the strain imposed by the growing militant Communist pressure.

In North Africa with the losing control of Algeria and Tunis in the last decade, and the exile of the French farmers, the colons, the "Peres Blancs" missionaries have probably been forced also into exile in France.

In Egypt, thanks to Zionism, Egypt has now switched from a country friendly to Britain to being a Russian outpost and our world has lost the use of the vital Suez Canal.

In working its way south in East Africa, Russia has already practically taken over Somaliland. Our hold on Aden is weakening and a revolt is under way in Ethiopia against the age old dynasty of the Emperor Haile Selassie and his ancient form of Christianity.

Farther south in the Sudan, the Moslem descendants of the old slave raiders are murdering and impoverishing the decent, neutral negroes and probably making sure that no Christian missionaries can operate.

In the Cameroons on the West Coast of Africa, a native Catholic Bishop has recently been arrested and charged with treason by the Moslem ruling class. Farther south in Nigeria the Northern tribes of Moslems have recently completed wholesale massacres of the Biafrans, probably for fraternizing with the adjacent French Catholics.

In the apartheid countries we know as South Africa and Rhodesia, a minority of whites exercise a firm dominance over the negro majority and keep them rather poor, but except for a limited number of judicial executions there are no lives lost and the fact that a great deal of the deep gold mining is done by negoes who come from other locations would show that conditions are not too severe.

At present both Russia and China are beginning to take an interest in the many countries bordering on the Indian Ocean and both seem to work very well with the local revolutionaries as all have a well organized fascist form of government, even if they label themselves as Communists. Pakistan in particular as a Moslem country may follow Afghanistan into the Russian orbit. It is also likely that Russia covets all the oil in Persia and the Arabian Gulf.

With regard to Mr. Trudeau it is a curious position in which he finds himself opposed to Mr. Heath, who considers it necessary for Britain to remain on good terms with South Africa to avoid Britain being excluded from the Indian Ocean as it has already been excluded from the Suez Canal.

In addition to any business interests we may have in Central Africa, we Canadians also have a great man of mature years who served many years in far flung missionary work, including service in Japan at Hiroshima, and who now after rising to the rank of Prince of the Church of Rome, has for some years reverted to his humble rank of missionary to poverty stri[illegible]en and leprous negro Cat[illegible] people in West Africa and may possibly be arrested some time in the next few years by the Moslem intruders and charged with treason.

I refer of course to Paul Emile Cardinal Leger, who has the deep respect of all the Protestant population of Canada and almost the veneration of the Roman Catholics.

Mr. Trudeau probably knows Cardinal Leger personally and it is a curious situation in which the British Protestant Prime Minister feels more kindly and protective to Cardinal Leger than does our own Roman Catholic Prime Minister.

$2 Fee Is Constant

Drug Costs and Dispensing Fee

Letter to The Hamilton Spectator

I would like to comment on the letter to the editor by Rap Nedumpara in which he claimed the syrup Codeine prescription was worth 50 cents, but he was charged a $2 dispensing fee. The ingredients may have cost 50 cents to the pharmacist but the prescription Mr. Nedumpara obtained was worth $2.50.

I will endeavor to explain what the $2 dispensing fee entails. A dispensing fee is the amount it costs the pharmacy to dispense a prescription. There are three costs involved. 1) the direct costs which include labor, container, labels and receipts and the inventory cost. This was calculated by the Ontario Pharmaceutical Association to be $1.38 per prescription; 2) the indirect costs which consist of rent, taxes, insurance, depreciation, bad debts, etc. come to 26 cents per prescription; 3) entrepreneurial profit is 25 cents per prescription. If added together the dispensing fee is $1.89; however, this figure was determined two years ago so that by the time OPA negotiated with the Ontario Government it was raised to $2.

In the per cent mark-up system used in merchandising, the profit varies according to the price, whereas with the fee for service the profit is fixed. For example, if a medication costs the pharmacist $6, then by using the per cent mark-up of 40 per cent it will cost the patient $10, whereas if the fee system is used then the prescription will cost the patient $8.

For chronic illnesses, for example, diabetes, epilepsy and heart conditions where long-term medication is required, there is a marked financial saving for the patients, especially if the physician and patient are aware of the fact that the savings that are obtained depend upon the quantities prescribed. Whether the doctor writes for 12 or 144 tablets, the fee is constant. Actually the fee system tends to make inexpensive drugs more expensive and expensive drugs less expensive

Eric Piurko.

Praise for Dr. Potter

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Dr. Richard Potter has attracted much attention throughout the province since his election as Quinte MLA. His stand on medical services, pollution, the selection of a successor to Premier Robarts, and other key issues have indicated that he is vitally interested in the welfare of the province.

Because of his bipartisan approach to the problems facing Ontario, the citizens of his riding should encourage him to seek re-election and should seriously consider the possibility of giving him an acclamation.

An acclamation would be a fitting tribute to Dr. Potter and a guarantee of continued excellent representation for Quinte Riding at Queen's Park.

Economics, Prestige, Behind Heath's Stand on Arms Issue

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Singapore may turn into a cage of tigers for gladiator Edward Heath but so much is at stake in the arms quarrel that the British prime minister may have to accept the claw marks to show voters at home he cannot be diverted from his course.

The vital issue, as some observers see it, is not so much the Soviet naval presence in the Indian Ocean as Heath's determination to demonstrate his leadership as a man with iron convictions.

The Soviet threat, on which Heath anchors his argument that he must resume arms sales to South Africa, has emerged in government publicity only in recent months. The British public seems to show little reaction.

More eye-catching are reports that arms sales will boost British exports, with some Conservatives estimating that as much as £250 million ($625 million) may be involved.

That may be an exaggerated figure. Far from starved, South Africa was able to acquire large quantities of armaments from France and other countries when the previous British Labor administration froze shipments in 1967.

But there is little doubt that South Africa is a big market, with the likelihood that ships and planes may be purchased once Britain lifts the embargo.

Exports are vital to Britain's economic survival. While the race-separation policies of the Vorster regime may be repugnant to large sections of the British public, trade possibilities are undoubtedly to many Britons an irresistible advantage.

Perhaps equally important to Heath is his determination to emphasize to the British public, including untamed unions, that he cannot be pushed off course. As The Economist observed: Heath has fixed his mind to accomplish major works—get Britain into Europe, reform the unions beat inflation.

"He does not want the decisive year of 1971 to start with a demonstration that the wheel can be knocked out of his hands."

This rigidity of purpose—which may have won him the 1970 general election when the odds were against him—has led one critic, a Tory peer, to compare him with the late Neville Chamberlain.

Chamberlain had a tendency to make up his own mind on major issues and then shoot down cabinet attacks so that his own convictions emerged as cabinet policy. That led to a debacle partly because Chamberlain had no genius in foreign affairs.

Heath's abilities are yet to be determined. He may have discounted the future of the Commonwealth, but his horizons by no means stop at the English Channel. Heath is a man of Europe with hopes for a wider international role if Britain's home economy can be put in order.

Government Intends to Stick with Youthful Offenders Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — The opposition demand for recall of proposed legislation on youthful lawbreakers was met Thursday with an off-stage comment from Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer that he intends to stick with the contested basic principles of the bill.

Mr. Goyer said in an interview the government will accept "sound and progressive amendments that will not destroy the bill" when it goes to the Commons legal affairs committee after second reading.

"I don't see the bill as being set in concrete," he said. "But neither is it a piece of butter to be molded at will."

With government and opposition speakers in almost complete disagreement over the interpretation of the bill, Commons debate on the measure failed to reach second reading.

Further debate has been postponed, with the House to consider crop insurance legislation today and to resume debate Monday on the budget presented last month by Finance Minister E. J. Benson.

Thursday's question period offered an advance taste of the likely temper of the four days remaining in the six-day budget debate.

The opposition took its lead from figures released earlier in the day showing unemployment for 538,000 persons in December, compared with 476,000 in November and 383,000 in December 1969.

The resulting attack drew from Mr. Benson the admission that "month-to-month fluctuations" could be expected despite his December prediction that the seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate had peaked and would decline. The seasonal rate increased by .1 per cent to 6.6 per cent of the work force.

Among the main speakers in the debate on the young offenders bill was New Democrat legal critic Andrew Brewin (Toronto Greenwood).

Allowing that the government was unlikely to withdraw the bill, he urged that second reading be delayed until the House could hear from strong outside critics of the proposed measure.

Mr. Brewin said the legislation overlooked the finding that the protection of society from juvenile delinquents and the aim of helping children grow into law-abiding persons "are complementary and not contradictory."

In some respects the bill is a step back from the present Juvenile Delinquents Act, which it is to replace, in that it would require fixed detention terms, he said.

The present act, Mr. Brewin said, at least permits young offenders to leave reform schools when officials feel they are ready.

David MacDonald (PC—Egmont) argued that those responsible for the bill apparently have ignored everything writtne or said in their field in the present century.

He insisted reform legislation should be directed to fitting the system to serve the needs of the child in trouble rather than attempting to make the child fit the system.

Andre Fortin (Creditiste—Lotbiniere) said specially-trained judges are needed to deal with young people. Those appointed to office for political action couldn't fit the bill.

Liberal speakers put up a spirited response.

Steven Otto (York East) reminded the House that, constitutionally, Parliament can only provide a code for dealing with young offenders. A new constitution would be required to deal with recommendations on their education, treatment and environment which are provincial responsibilities.

Terrence Murphy (L—Sault Ste. Marie) charged the opposition with distorting the provisions of the bill. He suggested it gave juvenile court judges far more discretion in dealing with convicted young offenders than now is the case or has been suggested by critics.

Outside the Commons, Mr. Goyer defended the government's approach in handling the bill. "The opposition has accused us of governing by white paper in the past and now they're asking that we withdraw the bill and have the issue considered by a task force which is perhaps the same thing."

In fact, he said, the issue was opened for study in 1961 and federal and provincial officials discussed the reform at a conference in 1968.

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"I know visiting hours are over, but the ball game isn't."

Canada Said Making Youth New Poverty Sector

TORONTO (CP) — Canada is well advanced in making youth a new poverty sector in its population, Reuben Baetz, executive direcor of the Canadian Council on Social Development, said Thursday.

Speaking to a social action group at Glendon College, York University, Mr. Baetz said the youth unemployment problem is reaching explosive proportions and criticized the federal government for shrouding in secrecy its plans for student projects next summer.

He predicted that youth will not for long accept "the same double-barrelled indignity which we have tended to level at other sectors of the poor population for many decades." This was the creation of a society in which they could not find meaningful employment, then were depicted as "lazy bums" for not working.

Mr. Baetz said a new thrust in the attack on youth unemployment would require interdepartmental co-operation at all government levels.

It would also entail more effective planning between government and private enterprise. the "full and magnanimous support" of organized labor and the help of educational institutions in rescheduling their school year, probably with more emphasis on a trimester system.

He said, however, that a substantial number of students will always want to "hit the open road because of a natural wanderlust, and dedicate a summer or two to idleness." Inexpensive hostel facilities and related services should be provided for them, at a small cost.

He advised students not to be led into a state of complacency by "seemingly encouraging summer employment statistics" because they include short-term jobs and "non-productive or even counter-productive make-work jobs."

"A disconcerting number are for coolie labor offered by unscrupulous employers taking advantage of a glutted student labor market, which is generally not protected by minimum wage laws.

"We need something far better than some of the hastily concocted crash programs designed for past summers and projected for this summer. Aimless militia training is one good example: meaningless make-work jobs of shifting files in federal departments is another."

A text of the speech was released to the press in advance.

New Technique Can Expand Cable TV Service

OTTAWA (CP) —A striking development in cable television which can enable many viewers to receive one or two additional channels has been installed in several Ontario centres.

The technique, which was technically approved by the federal communications department last December, makes it possible in many cases to use the one or two cable channels in each area which would otherwise be vacant.

For technical reasons, cable operators normally must shift local TV stations from their regular channel number to a cable channel of a different number. They have been unable to use the resulting vacant cable channels for outside TV signals because of complex interference difficulties.

The new system, known in the cable industry as "phase-locking" and often referred to as the "black box," resulted mainly from the efforts of Sruki Switzer, chief engineer with the large cable arm of the Maclean-Hunter publishing firm.

The black box has now been installed in the Maclean-Hunter cable systems in North Bay, Guelph, Ajax-Pickering and Etobicoke.

It is being purchased by other firms in London, Toronto and Montreal, Mr. Switzer said.

Leadership Candidates Won't Nail Down Planks

OTTAWA (CP) — Four leading contenders for the leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party Thursday met about 200 delegates and alternates to next month's party convention, but declined to nail down any planks in their policy platforms

The meeting, open only to the delegates and alternates from the Ottawa area and the press, was the first of seven meetings to be held across the province before the leadership convention in Toronto Feb. 10 to 12.

Providing skitches of political style rather than specific policy sence of Education Minister Allan Lawrence, Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough, Financial Affairs Minister Bert Lawrence, and Provincial Secretary Robert Welch.

The session lacked some competitive tang because of the absence of Education Minsster William Davis, who has so far gained the longest list of endorsments from fellow cabinet members.

Party President Allan Eagleson said Mr. Davis had a previous engagement.

The campaign trail continues today with Mr. Davis in Kitchener, Mr. McKeough in Ottawa, Bert Lawrence in London, Allan Lawrence in North Bay and Robert Welch in Owen Sound.

At Thursday's session, Mr. McKeough said there is the "threat of outside domination" and a danger that fedreal tax policies would stifle domestic private investment.

"We must aim at tax laws which enable the small Canadian corporation to grow, to prosper, and be able to compete. We must eliminate the tax laws which force their sale. We must encourage individuals to save and to invest their savings in Canadian business enterprises."

He said foreign investors should be required to increase their processing operations in Canada and ensure that Canadian plants are big enough to compete in world markets. But incentives for Canadians were more important than control on foreign investors.

Allan Lawrence said greater controls should be placed on U.S. investment, but said continued foreign investment is necessary.

The mines minister also said the province requires more funds from the federal government to develop the economies of eastern and northern Ontario.

Current federal-provincial fiscal arrangements were "simply not meeting the needs of all of our people."

Bert Lawrence said economic growth—"the number of bricks we pile on each other"—should give way to the quality of life as the main concern of future provincial leaders.

After a 10-year economic boom under Premier John Robarts, "people of the province are more concerned about what is happening inside the buildings they have built."

Re-organization of government departments would be necessary to approach problems —such as urban affairs—on a unified functional basis.

Mr. Welch urged the party to keep in touch with views outside its membership. He suggested a travelling policy committee to hold public forums and "ensure that all party members are involved on a continuing basis in the development and articulation of party policies and priorities."

He said the government itself should be responsive as well as responsible, consultative as well as representative.

All the candidates at the meeting said that despite a developing bandwagon among their cabinet colleagues, the 1,720 delegates would wait for the convention to pick their choice.

No-fault Insurance Advocated by Liberals

TORONTO (CP) — A policy paper released by the Ontario Liberal party Thursday calls for no-fault auto insurance and new consumer legislation.

The paper, to be presented at next week's party policy conference, would make no-fault coverage mandatory but would be administered by private companies rather than by the government.

The premium rates would be reviewed by a special consumer affairs committee the Liberals would set up.

The committee would also review fee, wage, rate and price increases by companies, industries, professions and government agencies.

The policy paper proposes legislation to regulate and license organizations which provide credit information. The legislation would ensure an individual's right to inspect and correct errors in his records and to sue or get an injunction if wrong information is published.

Other consumer legislation would limit the liability of a person whose credit card is lost or stolen to $50 unless he is proved negligent, and regulate guarantee clauses in contracts so the seller cannot avoid his common-law obligations.

Kingston Unions Charged

KINGSTON (CP) — Two Kingston union locals, charged with refusing to bargin in good faith, were remanded Thursday to Jan. 28 for trial in provincial court.

The charges were laid under the Ontario Labor Relations Act by Vroom Construcion Ltd., of Toronto.

Permission was given the firm Dec. 22 by the Ontario labor relations board to prosecute Local 249, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, and Local 247, Laborers' International Union on grounds that they "refused to bargain in good faith and make every reasonable effort to make a collective agreement."

A fine of up to $1,000 a day is provided under the act for a continuing offence.

Annual Income Guarantee Urged

TORONTO (CP) — A guaranteed minimum annual income of at least $3,100 should be established in the province with or without the help of the federal government, a Liberal party policy paper recommended Thursday.

The paper, to be discussed by 1,000 Liberals at a policy conference in Toronto next week, calls on the provincial government to set up such an income through a negative income tax sysem.

Lonesome Widow Dejected by Response

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 50-year-old widow with two married children and three grandchildren. I am writing to you because I am alone and desperate for someone to talk to.

ANN LANDERS

Yes, I have a long list of friends — most of them the same friends I've had for 35 years. I grew up in this town. I have plenty of relatives, too. But an extra woman is excess baggage these days. It's the extra man everyone is looking for. Lately I've been thinking some terrible thoughts. I find myself wishing some of my smug, happily married women friends would outlive their husbands by just one year so they'd have some understanding of what it's like to be a widow.

Yesterday I decided I couldn't bear another Saturday night alone so I decided to invite a few couples to my home for dinner. Here are the responses.

First Couple: "Sorry, we are going up north in our camper. But please try us again."

Second Couple: "My husband is on a special diet. He can't have salt. If we came for dinner you'd have to cook special for him. Then I'd have to invite you back. I don't use salt at all. That means I'd have to cook special for you. Bla, bla, bla, bla . . ."

Third Couple: The husband answered,"I don't enjoy going anyplace with my wife, but I'd like to come over and have coffee with you Sunday morning while she's in church. Please don't mention this to her. She wouldn't understand.

Fourth Couple: "My husband is drinking again. If you have us to dinner you'll serve cocktails and he'll be drunk the whole weekend. I can't take the chance."

So, Ann Landers, I put the beautiful steaks back in the freezer and decided to fry an egg and watch TV. And now, as I sit here looking at the four walls, the warm, friendly words I hear so often after my husband's funeral are still ringing in my ears: "If there is anything we can do for you just let us know."

Let 'em know, will you, Ann? — SOLO.

DEAR SOLO: You did. And I thank you.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You gave some advice to the woman whose mother called her ten times a day. Do you have any advice for me? My mother is wonderful. It's my mother-in-law who is driving me buggy.

We don't need an alarm clock. She wakes us every morning at 7:30. I counted her calls yesterday. There were eleven. Her last call was 9:35 at night. She was telling us to go to bed and get some rest.

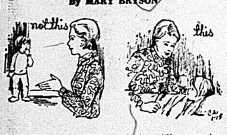
If my husband and I aren't home she starts calling our friends. We've had several people tell us that Don's mother was looking for us the other night. They hoped nothing was wrong. This can be embarrassing, especially when she wakes people up.

When our daughter is home (weekends) she answers the phone. I've asked her to tell Grandma I'll call her back. This makes Grandma mad so she phones every five minutes until I talk to her. My husband says to take the phone out, but I hate to cut myself off from friends and other family. What do you suggest? — MA BELL'S PRISONER.

DEAR PRISONER: Your mother-in-law has a case of chronic telephonitis — a neurotic compulsion for which there is no known cure. I suggest a second phone, unlisted. It would be worth the money to free yourself from her merciless badgering. Inform your friends and family of the new number. Leave the old phone in — just for your mother-in-law. Turn the bell down so the ring is distinguishable from the second phone. When the old phone rings you'll know it's the doll and you can answer when and if you feel like it.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Child: "It's dark in there. I'm afraid all alone."

Mother: "Stop acting like a baby. Close the door and go to sleep. You know there's nothing in there to hurt you."

Mother: "You may have this little night light to keep you company. I'll leave the door open a little if you wish while I'm downstairs. Goodnight now. See you in the morning."

A little light and a little sound of parents' voices nearby will do more to allay a child's fear of the dark than will scolding and ridicule.

150 Attend Summary Day in Stirling

STIRLING — On Monday afternoon Jan. 11, the Hastings County summary day was held at the Stirling Community Hall with 150 women in attendance. Last October there were 17 senior training groups who took the subject "Desserts" under the supervision of the Home Economist Miss Elaine Bateman, and all but two were represented with their leaders at the summary day event.

Groups represented were: Bay of Quinte, Bannockburn and Eldorado, Cooper and Remington, Harts - Riggs, Ivanhoe, Madoc, Marmora, Pinegrove, Plainfield, Queensboro, River Valley, Rylstone, Sidney South, Springbrook, Uniondale and Wallbridge.

At one o'clock, Miss Bateman welcomed the group and introduced Mrs. Marilyn Rose, Foods and Nutrition Specialist, Home Economics Branch, Toronto. She presented the leaders badges and later in the program she gave various comments on the individual reports. Mrs. Pat Tracey was chairman for the reports when each group gave an outline of their course. A few held all day meetings while others sponsored two evening classes. Along with the reports, Ivanhoe and River Valley each gave a song with all of their group participating. Sidney South entertained with a humorous skit, while others read poems on the subject.

Mrs. Pearl Tokley gave an interesting demonstration on the art of cake decorating and gave several helpful hints for making flowerettes and scrolls.

Each group provided desserts and these were later served buffet style by the committee in charge who included Mrs Norman Rosebush, Mrs. Ernest Carr and Mrs. Ivan Clare.

The Experts Say

Housewives Among Most 'Tense' People

MONTREAL (CP) — Housewives are among the world's most "tense, up-tight" people, says hypnotherapist Maurice Kershaw.

In fact, he said in an interview, "I've seen young women with two or three little children who couldn't even lock themselves in the bathroom for 10 minutes of peace and quiet without someone pounding on the door.

"Naturally, these girls are harried. This leads to muscular tension and tightness."

Mothers aren't the only people who finally resort to specialists such as Mr. Kershaw for help in relaxing. His clients include businessmen, students who can't study or who freeze during exams and patients of doctors who believe their problems arise from too much tension.

"People with weight problems for example," he explained. "The jolly fat girl doesn't really exist. She's usually a tense, nervous girl."

He has also seen worried children as young as five and concluded: "The general picture of children as being carefree and happy is not actually true."

Mr. Kershaw, a native of London who trained at the British Society of Hypnotherapists and the American Institute of Hypnosis in Los Angeles, has worked at Canada's only Institute of Hypnosis since 1952.

He travels across Canada to conduct weekend "immersion" courses in hypnosis for professionals such as doctors and dentists whose standard university training does not include hypnotherapy.

One technique which he uses to help people relax is transferred to the clients after five or 10 office sessions so that they can successfully will themselves to relax within minutes at home or office.

"First," he said, "I explain that I'm not going to hypnotize them. This state of relaxation, which lasts as long as they like, is actually only a step towards hypnosis."

The client is urged to get as comfortable as possible, either lying down or sitting up. The room is darkened and the person asked to close his eyes before Mr. Kershaw begins the session in his clear, soft and soothing voice.

He described the gamut of feelings the client may be experiencing—heaviness, drowsiness, tingling fingertips or even fluttering eyelids—so that the client can realize his reactions are "normal."

In the midst of the session, patients can open their eyes and look around, watch Mr. Kershaw or even change position if they wish. Eventually, however, the sensation of total contentment overcomes any curiosity or uneasiness.

After a few minutes, the hypnotherapist stops talking and it is often during this brief period of about 60 seconds that the client feels most relaxed. Then he slowly counts to three and the client is told he can get up any time.

Some spring up at the count of three while others are less willing to surrender their relaxed state and take their time getting up.

The client and the hypnotherapist then discuss the session and the patient is encouraged to describe his reactions and thoughts. This information provides guidelines for future sessions.

"There is nothing mystical about it," said Mr. Kershaw. "Some people even come to me expecting to see incense burning."

His office does have a couch but that is for Mr. Kershaw to sit on while his client stretches out in a lazy-boy chair.

After several office sessions, the client practices at home with a record. Playing the first side helps the person to achieve a relaxed state through the usual description of physical sensations while the second side—which may be played right after the first or days later when there is more time—extends and deepens it Once truly familiar with the sensations, said Mr. Kershaw, his clients can relax anywhere, at any time, without the record.

Shipowner's Wife Likes Sexy Clothes

NEW YORK (AP) — "I hate the midiskirts," says Mrs. Harilaos Theodoracopulos, American wife of the Greek shipowner, and one of the 12 women elected to the international best-dressed list of 1970.

"The body should have freedom."

She wears skirts at the knee with boots, ankle-lengths for evening and midicoats. But she still wears micro-minis, too.

"I love sexy clothes. A lot of the longer lengths aren't sexy. And you have to dress to be comfortable. With all that extra weight on your legs, it is hard to move around."

Mrs. Theodoracopulos is among 66 men and women of 16 nationalities chosen for their good taste and influence on current fashion. They were elected by written ballot sent to about 2,000 people representing fashion, society and theatre.

The list was announced by Eleanor Lambert, a publicist of fashions who originated the poll in 1940. The votes were counted by a committee of editors of fashion publications.

Other best-dressed women of 1970 were: The Begum Aga Khan, British wife of the Moslem spiritual leader; Mme. Ahmed Benhima, wife of the Moroccan ambassador to the United Nations; Diahann Carroll, American singer; Catherine Deneuve, French actress; Sophia Loren, Italian film star; Denise Minnelli, Yugoslav residing in San Francisco; Mme. Georges Pompidou, wife of the French president; Mrs. Richard Pistell, New York, former Marquesa Caroll de Portago; Mrs. Ronald Reagan, wife of the governor of California; Mrs. Samuel P. Reed, American social figure; and Mrs. Charles Revson, wife of the cosmetics magnate.

Five women were given "permanent status" and elected to the Hall of Fame; Mrs. William McCormick Blair Jr., Chicago-born wife of the former U.S. ambassador who now heads the Kennedy Centre of the Performing Arts in Washington; Mrs. Alfred Bloomingdale, Los Angeles, wife of the founder of the Diner's Club; Mrs. Wyatt Gloria Vanderbilt Cooper of New York; Mrs. Kirk Douglas, Hollywood, born in Paris; and Mrs. Patrick Guinness, Lausanne, Switzerland, and Paris.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Chicken-on-A-Bun

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: Years ago we used to buy barbecued chicken sandwiches, sometimes beef. This chicken or beef seemed to be done in a liquid, cooked in large flat pans, then placed on a big bun, something like a hamburg bun. This made a delicious snack, but it was not soggy. Would you have any idea how this meat or poultry is cooked? Eve H.

ANSWER: One of the following I am sure will serve to answer your query.

CHICKEN-ON-A-BUN

Heat split hamburg buns. On one side pile slices of hot chicken meat. Over this ladle all-purpose barbecue sauce: One medium onion, chopped, 1 green pepper, chopped, ½ cup chopped celery, 2 tbsps. salad oil, 2 tbsps. brown sugar, 2 tbsps. prepared mustard, 1 tbsp. Worcestershire sauce, ½ cup catsup one 8-ounce can tomato sauce, ½ tsp. salt, 1-8 tsp. garlic powder, dash Tabasco sauce. Cook onion and green pepper and celery in oil until soft but not browned. Add the remaining ingredients and simmer five minutes. Replace top of bun and ladle additional sauce over.

CREOLE CHICKEN BUNS

Note: I recommend these highly to mothers of young people.

2 tbsps. butter or margarine
¼ cup finely chopped onion (OR bottled flakes)
1-3 cup finely chopped green celery
1 cup cooked chicken (OR one 7-oz. can) chopped
½ cup tomato paste
¼ cup chopped stuffed olives
½ tsp. Worcestershire sauce
¼ tsp. chili powder
¼ tsp. salt
1-8 tsp. pepper
4 to 6 hot dog buns, split

In medium frying pan melt butter or margarine and gently saute onion and celery until soft. Add all remaining ingredients except buns and cook and stir until heated through. Spoon into split hot dog rolls. Serves four hungry teenagers or six not so hungry.

Rewards of Teeth Straightening

By DORIS CLARK

DORIS CLARK

All the girls go ga-ga over the movie actor with the glorious smile. You know the kind — with two even rows of pearly white teeth showing. Boys and girls with uneven teeth or buck teeth or gaps in their teeth are green with envy.

Yet the most unreasonable confusion of teeth can be put straight if it is tackled early enough.

It takes fortitude on the part of both mother and daughter (or son) — along with a fair investment of money. But we have the mothers and we have the daughters (and sons) with the courage and common sense to do it. My niece Susan's progress report follows:

Dear Aunt Doris: I am used to the braces and now I'm wearing a face bow. I really hate it. It connects your braces with the back of your neck. It is a metal bar with a stretch band which you put on your neck.

It is not so much the looks; it is the way it holds your neck tense that matters. But I soon will learn to bear that too. I wear it 14 hours out of 24. This means I wear it at night and half of the school day. — Susan.

Then in the Canadian Red Cross news bulletin I read this letter, from another Susan:

Dear Red Cross: Thank you for helping me with my braces. My teeth are doing fine.

I am now getting the back two braces off. I started to get my braces on the 18th of July and I have a mouthful now. The dentist said that if I wanted to I could have the neck band on, so I said I wanted it.

At first I saw a gap come in my teeth and I asked him if this was normal and he said yes. — Susan B.

Dear Niece Susan and Susan B.: You are both good sports. You don't get this far with braces without having learned to handle considerable discomfort. What you are doing will encourage some of the other girls who need it, and their mothers, to start in on a teeth - straightening regime. The rewards are terrific!

• • •

Dear Doris: My two girl friends and I (all married women) were sitting in a bar and these creeps came and sat down with us. Then I saw my best friend's husband. I went over and said, "Those creeps are bugging us. Can we sit here?" He said sure, and suggested we go to a restaurant. So he drove me and the other girls said they would follow.

Before we got out of the car he grabbed me, said he had been waiting for this chance for a long time, and kissed me. I think he would have done more than that except that I jerked myself away and jumped out of the car.

Was I wrong to ride there with him? Should I tell his wife? Can't we even trust friends any more? — Afraid.

Dear Afraid: I'm afraid too — that sometimes a friend betrays confidence. But don't lose your faith in mankind because of one rotten apple in the barrel.

Don't tell his wife; just avoid him. Next time don't put yourself in a position of drinking, of being in a bar where you are fair game for any creep, and asking for rescue by any uncertain party who is also under the influence.

• • •

To know all is to forgive all. Let Doris help you to understand and live happily with those you care about.

Niagara Falls is the backdrop to one of the world's great vineyards.

There are about 20 variations of soil type which can produce "great" vineyards. Six of these are found in a narrow band of highly productive land bounded on the north by Lake Ontario and the Niagara escarpment on the south.

In a tremendous program of viticultural improvement begun in 1934 we scoured the world for the finest grape varieties available. Over the years we propagated them in experimental plots. Today some of the greatest wine grapes in the world now grow in the Niagara Peninsula—grapes never before grown here in commercial quantities.

Entertainment Roundup

LONDON (Reuter) — The United States movie Love Story, starring Ali MacGraw and Ryan O'Neal has been chosen for this year's Royal Film Performance, the biggest night in the British motion picture calendar.

The March 8 show, to be attended by the Queen and the Queen Mother, will be the 25th since the event was started in 1946. Proceeds will go to an industry charity.

NEW YORK (AP) — Joanne Carson is seeking $7,000-a-week temporary alimony from television star Johnny Carson, it was disclosed Thursday in New York State Supreme Court in Manhattan.

In arguments before Justice Wilfred A. Waltemade, the grounds on which she will seek a divorce or separation were described as cruel and inhuman treatment, abandonment and adultery.

PARIS (Reuter) — Alfred Hitchcock, 71-year-old director of such movie thrillers as Psycho and North by Northwest, received the Emblem of Knight in the French Legion of Honor Thursday.

The decoration was presented on behalf of President Georges Pompidou by Henri Langlois, secretary of the French Film Society, who told Hitchcock:

"You are a great Frenchman because you know how to drink well and eat well."

The portly director, who is in fact a British-born American, was asked later what he thought of Napoleon.

Replied Hitchcock: "The brand or the pastry?"

Organize to Help Needy Blacks

Canadian Negroes Taking More Active Part in Communities

TORONTO (CP) — The tradition of non-involvement in community affairs which marked the establishment of Metropolitan Toronto's most well-to-do Negro organization is disappearing.

The process began at a meeting last year of the 70-member University Negro Alumni Club which heard a plea for help from a spokesman of the Black Youth Organization.

The youth organization is a group of educated young people who carry on a program of social welfare and education among underprivileged Negroes. The Alumni Club draws its membership from the professions, and originally confined its activities to private parties, theatre nights and dinner dances.

"We had little involvement with the problems of the black community," says Beverley Salmon, president of the club and wife of a Toronto surgeon.

In December, with financial and moral support from the Alumni Club and other groups affiliated with the National Black Coalition, six Negro teen-agers were enrolled at a community college in Toronto in a pioneer scheme designed to provide Negro school drop-outs with career opportunities.

"This is the beginning of a new awakening," Mrs. Sal-Salmon said in an interview. "Before, we blacks hadn't pulled together.

"We now feel that we should use our brains and skills to help others. The youngsters are opening our eyes to the needs."

The recent change in activities for the Alumni Club is one of many indications of the changes in the Negro community in Toronto and other Canadian cities which have been influenced by events in the United States.

The 40,000-member Negro community in Toronto has developed only within the last 20 years and seems to lack the sense of common identity and mutual responsibility found in other minority groups.

"That's understandable," says lawyer Charles Roach. "We blacks have no common religion, geographical background, distinctive language or strong common culture."

Unofficial estimates break down the Negro community into four national groups: 30,000 West Indians, 7,000 Canadians, 1,000 Africans and 1,000 Americans. An additional 1,000 come from Europe and other countries.

Most West Indians are Anglican and most of the Canadians Baptist, while there are large numbers of Roman Catholics as well as Hindus and Moslems.

But regardless of the differences among themselves, "most of us are in the mainstream of Canadian life," says Kay Livingstone, Ontario region chairman of the National Black Coalition.

Mrs. Livingstone says newspapers and radio distort the view of the life-style of the average Negro family in Toronto. If a reporter wants a Negro view on a social problem, he will "interview a porter or a maid. . . . They are not representative of the black community."

The Coalition, formed early in 1969, is a pioneer attempt at least loosely to unite Negro organizations.

"We want to be the voice of the black community," says Mrs. Livingstone. "Too often in the past, our so-called spokesmen represented individual opinions or small extremist groups.

"We want to be the voice of the majority—the moderates."

The most active group in Toronto is the Black Youth Organization. The BYO operates an information centre to help people with problems relating to the police, drugs, housing, education and jobs.

It also conducts classes in black culture, with emphasis on music, dancing and poetry.

But the group's main concern is to help further the education of poor Negro children through the use of voluntary instructors.

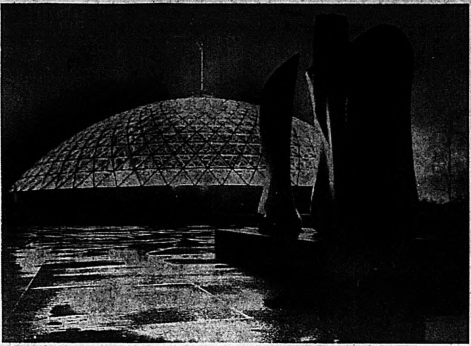
Although the increasing militancy of Negroes in the United States in recent years has had an effect on the thinking and attitudes of both whites and blacks in Toronto, Negro spokesmen don't see much chance of an organization such as the Black Panthers taking root here.

"We'll never have Black Panthers here because we don't need them as long as the beautiful U.S. Panthers continue to die for us," says Len Johnson, proprietor of a book store which specializes in racial-political literature.

"Every time there's an eruption of violence down there (in the U.S.) we reap the benefits up here in the form of tokenism to blacks."

"Most of us are pretty well off and don't feel threatened, hence we're not too interested in politics," explained Mr. Roach.

Nonetheless, it was acknowledged that the growing militancy of U.S. Negroes, coinciding with the arrival of thousands of immigrants from the West Indies, has resulted in a re-examination by Canadian Negroes of their role in Canadian society.



Knife's Edge

This striking sculpture by Henry Moore, called Knife's Edge, stands in stark relief against the glowing dome of the Bloedel Conservatory in Vancouver. The $150,000 bronze work has been described as one of the finest in Canada. Inside the dome, birds live in lush tropical surroundings unaware of the damp December night outside.

Busts Make Edmonton Luncheon Trade Boom

EDMONTON (CP) — Luncheon just isn't what it used to be for many of Edmonton's men in grey flannel suits.

Until last summer sitting in a quiet restaurant talking shop over a bowl of steaming soup or having a drink or two at one of the better hotels was the regular noon-hour routine.

Soup and drinks are still available, but talking about the office is on the way out because of competition from ravishing women dancing half-naked.

And if wives have any complaints about the new routine, they can blame Rudy Tosto and Salvatore Acampora, owners of a downtown Italian restaurant.

They started it all last July by hiring topless dancers to boost luncheon trade.

Now, three restaurants are turning away hungry businessmen each day at noon as the cash registers ring out a happy tune.

"Before, noon was a losing proposition," said Mr. Tosto in an interview. "Now we've started making the pennies like we didn't for seven years before."

Since the boom caused by bare busts started, Mr. Tosto has increased his staff to 28 from 18. The 140-seat restaurant is booked as much as one week in advance and travellers from out of town are beginning to write for reservations.

Mr. Tosto said his restaurant wasn't designed for such things. Now that customers have so much more to look at, he's considering knocking out a room divider and plans to build a bigger stage and bar.

Just as jubilant is Joe Bleviss, a partner in another downtown dining spot.

He watched his luncheon trade rapidly diminish when the competition brought on the girls. So, in October he retaliated and ordered some heavy ammunition of his own.

"It's tremendous," he said. "It's more than quadrupled our business."

Bill Wincure, the other restaurateur who jumped on the topless bandwagon in October, says he turns away people about four days a week. His 96-seat dining room used to be empty at 1 p.m. every day, but now patrons are eating more, more slowly and staying longer.

All three restaurants offer luncheon menus at pre-topless prices. None has a cover charge—ironically, perhaps—and the owners agree that the idea is to pack the houses by not raising prices.

The girls perform without tassels or pasties and have received the sanction of the morality squad. The Alberta Liquor Control Board, however, has restricted the topless shows to licensed dining rooms.

Dancers are brought in through booking agencies and the girls say they can earn as much as $350 a week in Edmonton, but that includes doing night shows.

"The guys are enthusiastic, but polite," says Snowi St. Claire of San Jose, Calif. "They'll applaud a lot but won't shout things."

Delegates Shuffle Papers in Saigon

SAIGON (Reuter) — The only Communists authorized to operate on South Vietnamese soil operate freely in a set of dilapidated buildings near the heart of busy Saigon.

They are Poland's delegates to the three-nation International Control Commission founded at Geneva to supervise the 1954 ceasefire which followed the nationalist Viet Minh's decisive victory over the French at Dien Bien Phu.

The ICC headquarters are at Camp Vo Tanh, a somnolent backwater in the teeming South Vietnamese capital, where Polish, Indian and Canadian diplomats and military observers are reduced to doing little more than shuffling papers.

"This is the ultimate in frustration," commented one young Pole, looking out at the red and white Polish flag hanging limply in Saigon's humid air.

Flag-pins on the large wall-maps in the Polish, Indian and Canadian compounds mark former observation posts, now abandoned, which once stretched from here to the border with North Vietnam.

Now the continuing Vietnam war has made supervisory work virtually impossible, and the commission is starved of funds.

The three member countries maintain only skeleton staffs here, although the Canadians double as their country's diplomatic and consular representatives in South Vietnam.

As a neutral nation, India maintains the pivotal role on the commission and provides its secretary-general, Chinese-speaking Sudarshan Bhutani, a 37-year-old diplomat who visits the opposing camp in Hanoi once every two months.

He sums up the commission's dilemma: "We really came here to supervise a ceasefire, but what we have now are conditions that are not exactly peaceful."

The ICC's running costs were to have been met by China, France, the Soviet Union and Britain. But China has not paid up for some years and the payments of the other powers are erratic.

Possibly the most important reason for the ICC's existence is the regular Saigon-Hanoi link which it maintains through Citca, a French-owned aviation company.

Every Friday, one of Citca's four-engined aircraft leaves Saigon for Vientiane, Laos, where a separate commission functions to supervise the equally-frustrated 1962 accords in war-devastated Laos.

It then takes off for Hanoi, and the following day it returns to Saigon, again via the Laotian capital.

All three member states have reduced their staffs. Poland has only 19 and India has 20, although each maintains one man in Hanoi. The Canadians have more than 30, including a diplomat and a military observer in Hanoi.

The Canadians maintain their own accommodation in Hanoi while the Indian and Polish commissioners in the North Vietnamese capital stay at the former French Hotel Metropole, now the Unity Hotel.

In Saigon, a fleet of aged Citroen cars flying white flags transports the ICC members through the teeming traffic.

Any problems that arise for the Poles, as representatives of a Communist state in a country at war with Communist insurgents, are smoothed over by the South Vietnamese foreign ministry's liaison team attached to the commission. "They are very kind to us," the Warsaw official said.

The only eventuality that could galvanize the ICC into positive action would be a ceasefire between the warring factions in South Vietnam.

Commission members say they would gladly take on the role of supervising a cessation of hostilities, although their teams would have to be drastically strengthened.

Flower Elected Board Chairman

PICTON (Staff) — George Flower, an Ameliasburg township representative to the Prince Edward County board of education will serve as its chairman this year.

Formerly vice-chairman of the board, Mr. Flower took office by acclamation during Wednesday's inaugural meeting of Prince Edward school trustees in Bloomfield. He succeeds Edward (Ted) Rutter who last night declined a nomination for re-election to the ofice of chairman. After commenting that it was "fitting and proper" for him to refuse this nomination, Mr. Rutter nominated George Flower.

Mr. Rutter thanked fellow trustees for their co-operation in the past year and remarked that he feels he has gained "a tremendous amount of knowledge" during his term as chairman. He observed that this office provides an experience enjoyable to any trustee accepting it for the first time.

Mr. Flower told board members that he has "two large pairs of shoes to fill", namely those of past chairmen Hutton Martin and Edward Rutter. "I shall do my best and will certainly need the co-operation of the past chairmen and the board," said the newly elected chairman. He pledged that he would act to the best of his abilities in the interests of the school board and the people of Prince Edward County.

In an election for the office of vice-chairman James Plomer, South Marysburg representative to the county board defeated challengers Clare McFaul and Mrs. S. W. D. (Ruth) Hart. A tie vote between Mr. Plomer and Mr. McFaul was broken when trustees marked their ballots for a second time.

Before board members appointed their committees for 1971, chairman George Flower commented that he would be reluctant to approve "change for the sake of change" in committee personnel. He noted that each committee had worked a great deal last year and suggested that the county board now is beginning to profit from the experience of committee members.

Vice-chairman James Plomer observed that inevitably there was a lot of experimentation, and trial and error among the committees. He felt that the terms of reference for new committees should be checked.

Hutton Martin, former chairman of the board advocated a change of at least one member on each committee to prevent them from becoming "powers unto themselves."

"There should be a little bit of a shuffle," he urged. His suggestions for change were countered by remarks by another trustee who felt that it it could be advantageous to leave each committee intact, changing only its chairman, unless members wished to resign. The possible problems of such a plan were emphasized by trustee Ruth Hart who said that she felt the personnel committee could operate more effectively with "new faces". She added that negotiations can become dificult if the same persons continually represent the board. Trustees agreed that they were satisfied with the existing committees and then appointed committee personnel.

Apple Growers Agree To Form Association

PICTON (Staff) — Farmers yesterday voted in favor of organizing a Quinte apple growers' association during a meeting sponsored by the Picton office of the Ontario Department of Agriculture and Foods held at Prince Edward Yacht Club.

The decision to support this association followed the recent appearance of a draft of the new Ontario Fruit and Vegetable Growers' Association Constitution which appeared in a farm publication.

One significant change permits each local fruit and-or vegetable growers' association approved by the OF and VGA to appoint one director from their area for every 50 members or fraction thereof up to a maximum of five directors.

It was observed by Robert Gobbledick, fruit and vegetable specialist for Prince Edward County that the Prince Edward Fruit Growers' Co-operative probably will be entitled to two directors. He added that if local growers agreed to form a separate apple association, this area would be entitled to at least one more director.

A five-member pro tem executive for the new association was elected at yesterday's meeting. Members include Lyl Vanclief, Arthur McCormack, Fred Hassenbach, James Hughes, and Lewis Creasy.

President of the Prince Edward cold storage, Edward Rutter supported the formation of the apple growers' association and offered assistance to its members on behalf of the cold storage board of directors. Mr. Rutter said that the cold storage would endorse a motion to form the apple growers' association and would become a part of it and request recognition as a member of the apple commission and the OF and VGA.

Prince Edward county fruit and vegetable specialist Robert Cobbledick said today that 44 fruit growers signed a membership sheet yesterday for the new association. Approval of this association possibly will be among the topics of discussion at the OF and VGA conference in Toronto next week.

Guest speakers for the fruit growers' meeting were Byron Beeler, director Soils and Sam Piott, president of the OF and VGA. Mr. Beeler, who recently toured European apple research stations in England, Holland, Denmark and Sweden, showed color slides of his trip. He commented on the importance of keeping up in technology and showed slides of projected plans for the apple industry in the next 10 to 30 years.

Among the concepts of the future was a mini-cauliflower measuring 2½ to 3 inches in diameter. Apples were shown producing fruit spurs on one-year-old wood and the mechanical harvesting of fresh fruit was emphasized. "When you see what can be done in technology I wouldn't want to bet against what can be done about the visions we saw," said Mr. Beeler.

Mr. Piott told apple growers a local association was needed despite the presence of marketing boards. "If marketing boards are doing their job there is no time for them to deal with the day-to-day social problems. If they are taking care of them they aren't doing their job," he remarked.

They are association president Harold Bonter, Mrs. Mary Grimmon, John Fox, Mrs. Loretta Green and Earl Onderdonk.

Alternates named were Harold Harrison, Bernard Hepburn, Charles Hepburn, Elberne Carson and Kenneth Hicks.

CFL Managers Produce All-night Exhibition Schedule

HOUSTON (CP) — An 18-game exhibition schedule for the 1971 Canadian Football League season was announced Thursday after 18 hours of wrangling through nine dry runs.

The general managers of the nine CFL clubs were meeting here in conjunction with the American Football Coaches Association. They began talks on the exhibition schedule Wednesday morning and commissioner Jake Gaudaur gave them a 6 p.m deadline for agreement.

The general managers couldn't agree and Gaudaur gave them until 10 a.m. Thursday. That deadline, too, came and went without agreement.

Gaudaur mediated the various objections up to 2 p.m., then gave the managers a schedule to adhere to.

Here is that schedule—all night games:

Monday, July 5—Winnipeg at Ottawa, Edmonton at B.C.

Wednesday, July 7—Winnipeg at Hamilton, Saskatchewan at Calgary.

Thursday, July 8—Montreal at Toronto.

Friday, July 9—Ottawa at Edmonton.

Monday, July 12—Calgary at Montreal, Ottawa at B.C., Toronto at Winnipeg, Hamilton at Saskatchewan.

Friday, July 16—B.C. at Toronto, Calgary at Edmonton.

Monday, July 19—Hamilton at Montreal, B.C. at Ottawa, Edmonton at Saskatchewan.

Wednesday, July 21—Saskatchewan at Winnipeg.

Thursday, July 22—Toronto at Hamilton, Montreal at Calgary.

The 1971 regular-season schedule, although not yet announced, was compiled some time ago to facilitate the sale of television rights. Fulton now begins work on the 1972 regular-season schedule for submission to the CFL's regular annual meeting in Winnipeg starting Feb 11.

The general managers had been near success on more than one occasion before problems cropped up.

"There are certain taboos in scheduling," Fulton said.

"For instance, you don't schedule three home games in succession for any team. In at least one case, we found ourselves up against this problem as exhibition games ran into the regular schedule."

Fulton said it was harder to fit the 18 exhibition games into three weeks that it was to schedule the 68 regular-season games into 14.

The general managers also had to keep an eye on the regular-season schedule as they worked on the exhibition lineups.

"If you have a club coming into your park twice during the regular season, you sure don't want to see them during the exhibition season," Fulson said.

Esposito Tries On Fifth 'Hat'

By NICK FERRIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Phil Esposito, first National Hockey League player to score more than 100 points in a single season, set another league record Thursday night and could shatter at least two more before the season ends.

PHIL ESPOSITO

The Boston Bruins centre had his fifth three-goal game of the year and added three assists as Boston battered Los Angeles Kings 9-5.

In other games, Philadelphia Flyers blanked Toronto Maple Leafs 3-0, Buffalo Sabres upset St. Louis Blues 2-1, Detroit Red Wings and Pittsburgh Penguins skated to a 2-2 tie and Minnesota North Stars and Montreal Canadiens played a 3-3 standoff.

At Boston, Esposito's performance broke the previous modern record of four three-goal games in a season set by Maurice (Rocket) Richard of Montreal Canadiens in 1946-47 and later tied by Montreal's Jean Beliveau, Chicago Black Hawks' Bobby Hull and Frank Mahovlich while with Detroit. Mahovlich was traded to Montreal Wednesday.

Esposito needs only two more three-goal games to tie the all-time record of seven set by Joe Malone in the 44-game, 1917-18 season with the Canadiens.

"I had all kinds of chances out there tonight," Esposito aid after scoring his 39th, 40th and 41st goals in 42 games, "and for a while I didn't think I'd get that third one.

"Some nights they go in and some nights they don't. You just have to keep shooting. Goals come eventually."

If eventually is nine goals in Boston's next eight games, Esposito could become the only player besides Richard to score 50 goals in 50 games. The Rocket rapped in 50 in the 50-game, 1944-45 season.

Esposito could also topple Hull's mark of most goals in any NHL season. Hull, with four 50-goal seasons, counted 58 in 1968-69.

And Esposito's NHL record of 126 points set the same season is threatened.

His six-point effort Thursday gives him 84 points, best in the league, with 36 games remaining.

Defenceman Bobby Orr gathered four assists in the game to hold second spot behind his team-mate with 70 points.

Boston scored three goals in each period as they outshot Los Angeles 48-37, six shots above their game average, and moved one point ahead of idle New York Rangers who hold down second place in East Division standings with 64 points.

The Flyers scored in the first 24 seconds at Philadelphia and added two more in the second period as they handed the Leafs their second loss in 17 games. Toronto had a 13-1-2 record in their streak.

Veteran Phil Goyete, St. Louis' top scorer last season but left unprotected in last summer's expansion draft, fired goals in the second and third periods as the Sabres overcame a 1-0 deficit.

The loss prevented the Blues from gaining ground on West Division-leading Chicago, who

Betsy Will Stick to Slalom

MONTREAL (CP) — Al Raine of Montreal, director of the Canadian Ski Association's alpine program, said Thursday that when Betsy Clifford of Camp Fortune, Que., returns to World Cup competition in Europe next week, her activities will be restricted to slalom events.

Miss Clifford won the first World Cup slalom of the season at Val D'Isere, France, last month but returned home last Sunday.

She is scheduled to rejoin the team this weekend to compete in World Cup slalom events at Shruns, Austria, next Thursday, at St. Gervais, France, one week later and Murren, Switzerland, two weeks from today, Raine said.

BETSY CLIFFORD

"However, she will not compete in any of the downhills at these resorts," Raine said.

"Betsy feels she is not confident enough to tackle any downhills this season."

Raine said he would like "to straighten out" a confusion of statements which followed Betsy's sudden "retirement."

Published reports had indicated there were differences between the young skier and Peter Franzen, coach of the women's team.

"There seems to be a misunderstanding somewhere," Raine said. "But it appears to have been between Betsy's father and the press."

John Clifford was first quoted as being critical of Franzen, but in a later interview, he denied this and praised the coach.

Bruins Cram Scoring Parade

Phil Esposito continued his phenomenal scoring pace Thursday night, picking up six points on three goals and three assists to lead Boston Bruins in their 9-5 win over Los Angeles Kings.

Esposito's clip of two points a game put him well on top of the National Hockey League's individual scoring race with 84 points. His nearest rival, teammate Bobby Orr, contributed to the Bruin cause with four assists, giving him a season's total of 70 points.

Calgary's NHL Interest Not Shown to Campbell

MONTREAL (CP) — Clarence Campbell, National Hockey League president, said Thursday no Canadian city has made formal application to join the league at its next round of expansion.

Campbell was commenting on published reports from New York Wednesday quoting William N. Jennings, chairman of the NHL's finance committee, as saying an application for future league membership from Calgary had arrived "like a bolt out of the blue" at NHL headquarters here.

The league president said he had received a query from Edmonton some time ago and had advised that city of the need for a formal application but had heard nothing further on the matter.

Campbell said he had not received even "an indication of interest" from Calgary.

HOUSTON (CP-AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association has taken two steps designed to give United States-raised athletes a better chance to crack the lineups of U.S. university hockey teams. The NCAA endorsed a new official interpretation of its constitution which rules out participation in NCAA intercollegiate hockey of any player from Canadian Junior A ranks. In another move, the NCAA put restrictions on the college eligibility of athletes from outside the U.S. For every year an athlete plays organized hockey in Canada beyond the age of 19 his eligibility for NCAA hockey is reduced by one year. Formerly, an athlete could perform abroad until age 20 without losing college eligibility. Both ruling are effective Aug. 1.

West Shows Toronto Why NBA Exciting

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Eleven into six will go . . . if you have Jerry West doing the arithmetic.

West scored 11 points in the last six minutes to help Los Angeles Lakers wipe out a Cincinnati lead and beat the Royals 126-120 in the National Basketball Association Thursday night.

The Lakers held a 62-55 lead at the half, but trailed by as much as five points during the fourth period.

The Royals led 101-99 when the hot-handed West tied it with the first of his big field goals at the six-minute mark. Then the Lakers' veteran guard added nine more to help his club pull away in the contest played on a neutral floor before 11,598 fans in Toronto.

Elsewhere, Chicago Bulls beat Philadelphia 76ers 108-103, Buffalo Braves trimmed Portland Trail Blazers 119-113, Detroit Pistons topped Cleveland Cavaliers 108-106, Phoenix Suns bombed New York Knicks 107-99 and Seattle SuperSonics turned back Baltimore Bullets 114-110.

West, a perennial NBA all-star, finished with a game-high 33 points while Wilt Chamberlain helped out matters with 30.

Johnny Green, the 37-year-old wonder who sat out most of the second and fourth quarters, led the Royals with 27 points.

Ali Training With a Vengeance

Lip's Fists Flying

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — Muhammad Ali, with flying fists and mouth to match, opened training Thursday for his Joe Frazier title fight, saying: "I never wanted to whup anybody so bad."

"The people of the whole world gonna see who's king," said Ali, weighing in at 222 pounds.

The Ali-Frazier bout is scheduled March 8 in New York's Madison Square Garden and promoters have predicted a $10-million gross. Tickets scaled to $150 are almost gone for the 19,500-seat Manhattan Arena.

"I'll be sharp and readier than I ever have," Ali prediced. "He just ain't never seen nothing like me—so fast, so skilful."

Ali's trainer, Angelo Dundee, said his man will be under 210 pounds for the fight.

"He'll train harder than ever in his life," said Dundee. "This is the biggest fight in history . . . make no bones about that. He can't afford not to be in No. 1 condition."

Saints' Owner Denies Blacklisting

CLEVELAND (AP) — John W. Mecom Jr., owner-president of New Orleans Saints, says he does not know of any blacklisting of players in the National Football League and that NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle has no more power than he needs to do his job.

Mecom made the comments to reporters Thursday after a three-hour appearance before a federal grand jury which is looking for possible anti-trust violations in the NFL. The jury has heard complaints of blacklisting from some former players who testified earlier in the investigation which started Nov. 16.

Mecom also told reporters he was not dissatisfied with Rozelle's ruling that required the Saints to surrender their No. 1 draft picks in 1968 and 1969 to San Francisco '49ers after New Orleans signed tight end Dave Parks, who had played out his option with the '49ers.

The grand jury recessed its investigation for at least two weeks after hearing from Mecom, the first club owner called in the investigation.

Mecom told reporters that "apparently some people believe the league has some dirty linen to wash, but I am not aware of any. . . ."

"I believe the league's problems could be solved in other ways."

Mecom disagreed with Parks when he said that Rozelle does not have too much power.

Parks testified Wednesday that Rozelle's power should be curtailed. He signed with New Orleans after playing out his option with San Francisco in 1967. Rozelle then ordered that the Saints give their No. 1 draft picks for 1968 and 1969 to the '49ers.

Parks said Rozelle apparently was attempting to discourage players from playing out their options and discourage owners from signing players who become free agents in that manner.

Shaw's Comparison Not Quite Valid

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Tom Shaw compared himself to Arnold Palmer as he discussed his winless 1970 season on the professional golf tour.

"I kept thinking I'd win a tournament, but, just like Arnold, I ran out of tournaments," said the 28-year-old blonde from Oregon after shooting a four-under-par 68 Thursday to share the first-round lead with Bobby Nichols and Terry Dill in the $135,000 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am Championship.

Palmer, the game's all-time leading money winner, also went without a tournament victory in 1970. But with $128,000 in prize money, the year was no disaster.

Shaw won the Doral Open and Avco Classic in 1969 and totalled $83,332 in winnings. But a reversal in his fairway fortunes last year made him one of the tour's second-class citizens—a non-exemp player. He was 68th on the money list, with $34,004 in 1970.

George Knudson of Toronto had a 72 with nines of 36-36 and was grouped in 15th place with 18 others, including Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and Billy Casper.

Toronto's Al Balding had 38-39—77 and was well off the pace.

Shaw, Nichols and Dill were one stroke ahead of veteran Howie Johnson. At 70 were Gene Littler, Rik Massengale, Gene Ferrell and Argentina's Roberto de Vicenzo.

New York Tracks Fight Off-Track Betting

NEW YORK (AP) — The eight harness racing tracks in New York state appealed Thursday to the state government to block efforts by New York City's Off-Track Betting Corp. to establish separate betting pools.

In a telegram to the state off-track pari-mutuel betting commission, the tracks said separate pools would be "contrary to the spirit of the law and would be ruinous to racing."

The corporation announced earlier this week it had asked permission to establish separate pools in case labor disputes prevented it from feeding its bets into the pari-mutuel systems at the tracks.

Usual Hostilities Not Detected in Miami

MIAMI (AP) — The countdown to the Super Bowl accelerated today for Baltimore Colts and Dallas Cowboys, but the big buildup inherent in previous summit scraps remained conspicuous by its absence.

In contrast to the excitement that preceded each of the four AFL-NFL confrontations, the main conversation piece as the Colts and Cowboys began final preparation for Sunday's championship showdown was the physical status of Walt Garrison, No. 2 man in Dallas' dynamic running game.

Through no fault of their own, the Super Bowl foes have the look of a pair of crusaders with no holy war to fight.

The Colts, led by incomparable Johnny Unitas, will be out to atone for their upset loss to New York Jets two years ago.

The Cowboys will be out to prove they are capable of winning the big game.

And both teams will be out to claim the winner's share of $15,000 a player.

But the open hostilities of the American and National League battles have been missing. Baltimore and Dallas were allies, under the NFL banner, until merger and realignment put them in opposing camps last season.

The Colts' hopes will be riding on the 37-year-old arm of Unitas, whose charisma has been dominant during the week building up to the game.

JOHN UNITAS

Dallas will counter Unitas' passing with the league's most potent ground attack, a ball control force led by rookie Duane Thomas—and Garrison, if he's healthy. The Cowboys' stocky fullback came out of the NFC title game against San Francisco two weeks ago with a sprained ankle and chipped collarbone.

The forecast for Sunday calls for partly-cloudy skies, temperatures in the 70s and northerly winds up to 15 miles an hour.

The Cowboys, who reeled off seven straight victories to nail the NFC title, have been training at a liesurely pace in Fort Lauderdale.

The Colts, who shifted to the AFC in last year's realignment and captured the conference title on the heels of a six-game winning streak, have been strictly business. They blame their 16-7 Super Bowl loss to the Jets in part to the "carnival atmosphere" of their 1969 training base.

Southern Groups Chasing Bills

MIAMI (AP) — Ralph C. Wilson, owner of Buffalo Bills, said Thursday he is prepared to move the club to Seattle next season but that interests in Memphis, Tenn., and Tampa, Fla., also have made approaches aimed at acquiring the club.

Replying to a report that indicated he had committed the National Football League club to remain in Buffalo at least one more season, Wilson said:

"I would consider moving the franchise for the 1971 season."

Wilson reiterated that his trip to Seattle had been provoked by the stadium situation in Buffalo where plans to build a new ball park to replace antiquated 46,000-seat War Memorial Stadium had progressed slowly over the last several years.

"I've told the people in Buffalo I must have positive action in a new stadium by the time the league meeting is held," Wilson said.

NFL owners are scheduled to meet in Palm Beach, Fla., beginning March 22. At that time Wilson could request permission to transfer the Bills. He would need 20 to 26 votes to do so.

Starr Requests News Blackout

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Green Bay Packer quarterback Bart Starr, who checked into the Mayo Clinic Wednesday, has asked the clinic not to release any information about the nature of his examination.

Starr suffered from an arm ailment during the recent National Football League season.

Mo-Hawks Vacate Rink For Rough Road Trip

The answer to the $64 question: "No, there will not be a senior hockey game at the Memorial Arena tonight.

The Mo-Hawks have vacated the premises in favor of the Junior B Fairways as they prepare for a tough Saturday-Sunday two-game road trip to Galt and Oakville.

The Mo-Hawks go into the weekend in fourth place on the eight - team OHA Senior A ladder. They could stay there or possibly arrive back in Belleville in the wee hours of Monday a sixth-place hockey team.

That's how tight the league race is. The Mo-Hawks are in fourth place with 26 points. One ahead of Kingston and Oakville, and six ahead of seventh - place Owen Sound. They do, however, enjoy games in hand over their pursuers.

Meanwhile, official league statistics show centremen George Godson and Doug Senior making the best Belleville showing among the league's point - getters. Godson's 31 points on six goals and 25 assists place him in a tie for 17th place on the senior league's scoring parade. Godson led the Mo-Hawks in scoring the past two seasons.

Senior is a notch behind with 14 goals and 16 assists.

Galt's Bruce Reier will be attempting to improve his league - leading total of 48 points including 26 goals, in the Mo-Hawk Saturday night visit.

Belleville's Steve Rexe is carrying a respectable 3.52 goals - against average in 20¾ games, good for third place among league goaltenders. Galt's Harold "Boat" Hurley is a runaway leader with 2.17, followed by Orillia's Gerry McNamara at 3.25.

Mo - Hawk captain Ralph Plane's 70 penalty minutes rank him fourth behind league "bad guys" Gord Gallagher, Owen Sound (111), Woodstock's Mac Westgate, and Barrie's Rick McClocklin.

Next Senior hockey in Belleville comes in the form of a Tuesday night visit by Kingston Aces.

Fairways Step Behind

Belleville Fairways will be attempting to take a giant step towards fourth and final playoff spot when they meet the Cobourg Cougars in Belleville tonight.

The Fairways trail Cobourg by four points in the league standings, but hold two games in hand over their Eastern Ontario Junior B league opponent.

A permanent thorn in the Cougars side is centre Brian O'Coin whose hard-nosed play has earned him 11 goals this season, tops on the club. O'Coin and team captain John Mulvihill are hampered with minor injuries, but both are expected to be in uniform for the bout.

Belleville will be employing the tight-checking style of play that they used in a narrow one-goal loss to the league leading Peterborough Lions Sunday.

The Fairways have met with success in the three previous meetings between the fourth-place rivals, picking up five of a possible six points.

The checking line of Rod Palmer, Dave Ferguson and Cliff Janitsch played a strong game against Peterborough and coach Floyd Crawford is hoping that they can help provide the scoring balance which has been sadly lacking this season.

Tonight will be "all students night," allowing anyone with a Belleville secondary school council card admission for 50 cents. Game time will be 9 p.m.

Koreans Get Support

OTTAWA (CP). — Gordon Juckes, executive director of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association said Thursday he will file a complaint to the International Ice Hockey Federation if a Korean midget hockey team is permitted to compete in a tournament at Trenton, Ont., in March.

Mr. Juckes said the CAHA is standing by its ban on international competition this year and therefore the Korean club would not be granted permission to play in the tournament.

An application by tournament officials was turned down in November, Mr. Juckes said.

He said the Korean federation could be suspended if the IIHF so ruled and the CAHA could drop the host Trenton team from CAHA membership.

The Koreans last week confirmed acceptance of the invitation.

Odds Favored Kingston

Kingston had three times more opportunity to win this week's district playdown of the Southern Ontario Ladies' Curling Association held for the first time at Belleville's Quinte Curling Club.

So it wasn't too surprising when Bette Reid's rink, one of three from the Limestone city in the eight-rink field, walked off with top honors in the double - knockout event.

Skip Reid, and rink members Mary Breen, Barbara Lemmon, and Pat Breen were presented with winners' pins by SOLCA representative Beverly Neill, and will now advance to the Southern Ontario finals at Waterloo's Greenbrier Club Feb. 22-25.

In addition to the three Kingston entries, the Belleville competition involved rinks from Napanee, Picton, Trenton, CFB Trenton, and the host Quinte Club.

'Cents' Get Full Value

Centennial Secondary School wrestlers were successful in coming to grips with Trenton and Picton opponents in a triangular meet held Thursday.

John Barry, John Dwornik, Ralph Adams, and Steve Plevak were double-match winners for Centennial.

Tom Horne and Mike Kilpatrick won both their matches for runner-up Trenton, while Pat Forbes turned the trick for Picton's Prince Edward Collegiate team.

have 61 points, 11 more than St. Louis.

Jean Pronovost connected on a third-period penalty shot at Detroit and lifted the Penguins to the tie.

Referee Bruce Hood signalled for the penalty shot after Pronovost was pulled down by Bill Collins. Pronovost skated in on goalie Roy Edwards and fired. Edwards partially blocked the shot but the puck trickled through his pads.

Collins, Mickey Redmond and Guy Charron were traded to Detroit by Montreal Wednesday for Mahovlich.

Pittsburgh's Bryan Watson broke his leg early in the first period when he hit the boards on a missed body check.

Detroit has 31 points, one back of fifth place Vancouver Canucks and six ahead of cellar-dwelling Buffalo in the East Division.

At Minneapolis, Frank Mahovlich's first goal in a Montreal uniform sparked the Canadiens to a 3-0 lead after 40 minutes.

But the North Stars stormed back with three goals in the final period to gain the tie.

Montreal's one point moved them four in front of fourth-place Toronto in the East while Minnesota, kept to within one point of third-place Philadelphia in the West.

In the only game tonight, California Golden Seals play host to New York.

BABY ORANGUTAN

IPOH Malaysia (AP) — Rokiah, a captured Borneo orangutan at the Taiping zoo near here, has given birth to a four-pound female, one of the few orangutans born in captivity. Zoo officials said she had one previous birth but the baby died a month later. Conservationists fear the orangutan is nearing extinction in its native Borneo.

Canadians Fleeing Communism Get Icy Reception in U.S.

TORONTO (CP) — Three women who fled Canada to seek political asylum in the United States from "Communist persecution" returned Thursday after an icy reception from American officials.

Viktorja Abolins, 50, and her daughters Lucija, 27, and Aino, 20, were met at Toronto International Airport by members of Toronto's right-wing Edmund Burke Society, and whisked into seclusion.

The three Latvian women sold their restaurant in Winnipeg and went to the U.S. Dec. 12. Their request for asylum was denied and they were ordered to leave the country by Thursday noon.

"It's pretty confused," said Paul Fromm, chairman of the Burke society, which has been involved in a number of recent demonstrations—generally as opponents of left-wing groups.

He said members of the society were in touch with the Abolins while they were in New York and offered them protection and security in Toronto.

"We told them: 'We will certainly lean on whoever is harassing you if they try to harass you in Toronto.'"

In a brief interview at the airport, where she refused to answer most questions, Mrs. Abolins said she and her daughters had "no plans."

She said they had no trouble clearing customs and immigration, and the Burkers said no police or authorities interfered with their reception of the women.

Don Clarke, a member of the society's executive council, said the persecution apparently involved threats of personal violence to the women issued by other Latvians in Winnipeg whom they described as "Bolsheviks."

Harld Grimes of the International Rescue Committee, which has been caring for them since Dec. 21, said in New York they made the decision to leave the U.S. after deciding not to appeal a government ruling denying them asylum.

Liberals to Cut OMB Powers If Elected

TORONTO (CP) — Robert Nixon leader of the Ontario Liberal party, said Thursday night the powers of the Ontario Municipal Board will be reduced if the Liberals win the next provincial election.

Mr. Nixon told the North York Municipal Liberal Association that OMB chairman J. A. Kennedy has become so powerful that he "seems to make all the important decisions" for municipalities.

The decisions of locally elected councils should not be subject to automatic review by the OMB, Mr. Nixon said.

He suggested the OMB's only duty should be to act as a court of appeal on planning matters.

Bourassa Unveils Investment Project

QUEBEC (CP) — While federal government figures revealed Thursday that more than one in 12 Quebec workers was unemployed, Premier Robert Bourassa trumpeted a new investment project that will provide no immediate relief for the unemployed and said the government had no new measures to reduce the problem

In line with the Liberal government's campaign to provide jobs and stimulate the economy by attracting new investment, Mr. Bourassa announced at a news conference that Falconbridge Nickel Mines Ltd. will undertake construction of the $60 million first stage of a metallurgy centre at Becancour, Que., beginning this summer.

Although the project, to be completed in 1974, will employ 1,000 men at the peak of construction activity and provide 250 jobs once production begins, it will not immediately relieve unemployment.

In another development Thursday, Mr. Bourassa's labor minister, Jean Cournoyer, suggested that Quebec could be hit by a revolution unless immediate action is taken to reduce unemployment.

Mr. Cournoyer said in an interview with the CBC that the unemployed might be led to the conclusion that "this society is no good for them."

Asked if this would mean revolution, he said:

"Well, if you want to put that type of word in my mouth, fine. It leads to revolution, certainly not evolution."

If the Quebec unemployment rate is allowed to climb much higher, "we may find ourselves in the toughest situation that Canada has ever been in, even including the last (kidnapping) one."

At his news conference, Premier Bourassa was asked to comment on similar declaration by Fernand Daoust, general secretary of the 225,000-member Quebec Federation of Labor.

"I don't see how it can help the situation in any way to predict violence," said the premier.

During a two-hour interview with The Canadian Press last week, Mr. Daoust said:

"We've got to find jobs or it's going to blow up."

Mr. Bourassa said he found the high unemployment rates throughout North America "extremely disturbing" but his Liberal government had done "as much as possible" to combat the situation and would continue its present policies.

He said the main reason for the "exceptional increase" in unemployment—a whopping 30-per-cent increase in Quebec from a year ago—is the swelling of the work force by young people leaving school to seek jobs.

He reiterated his election campaign slogan to provide 100,000 jobs after his government's election April 29 last year.

"It is a pledge of the Quebec government to use all means, direct and indirect, to create 100,000 new jobs in 1971."

South Vietnam Force Fights in Mountains

SAIGON (AP) — A South Vietnamese force trying to reopen Phnom Penh's highway to the sea battled North Vietnamese forces today around a key mountain pass 95 miles southwest of the Cambodian capital.

The U.S. command announced that an American plane was shot down in another sector of Cambodia.

South Vietnamese military headquarters said the force smashed into more than 200 North Vietnamese at Stung Chhay, one of two key mountain passes controlled by the enemy on Highway 4.

Fighting raged until dusk Thursday as South Vietnamese fighter-bombers and artillery pummelled the North Vietnamese positions on the heights overlooking the road. Reports from the area said the fighting resumed today.

A South Vietnamese spokesman said 41 North Vietnamese and five government troops had been killed and 28 South Vietnamese wounded.

"It is not clear who controls the area," the spokesman said. "The enemy is still in the vicinity of the pass."

Kidnapped Swiss Ambassador Still Prisoner in Brazil

RIO DE JANEIRO (Reuter)—Kidnapped Swiss Ambassador Giovanni Bucher had still not been released today — 24 hours after the price of his freedom was paid with the exile of 70 Brazilian political prisoners.

The prisoners were flown to Santiago, capital of Chile, early Thursday. Confirmation by news agencies here of their safe arrival was to be the signal for Bucher's liberation under the exchange plan agreed by the Brazilian government and his left-wing abductors.

But today, hours after the arrival of the agency reports and publication of photographs of the prisoners in Chile, the whereabouts of Bucher still were not known.

Observers here believed that, as in the case of previous diplomatic kidnappers may have been waiting for nightfall to provide cover for their getaway.

Bucher's exchange, after 39 days captivity, in return for 70 political prisoners is a record. The previous highest ransom demand was last June when 40 prisoners were swapped for the West German Ambassador.

In Montevideo, Uruguay, a $24,000 reward for information leading to the release of kidnapped British Ambassador Geoffrey Jackson has been offered by a group of the ambassador's friends.

An interior ministry communique announced the reward but did not identify the donors.

It said the money would be paid for information on where the British envoy, kidnapped a week ago by left-wing Tupamaros guerrillas, was being held and "leading to his release."

A search by thousands of police and troops has failed to turn up any trace of Jackson, or Brazilian Consul Aloysio Dias Gomide and U.S. agriculture expert Claude Fly, held by the guerrillas for five months.

Retention of Monarchy Is Said Essential Here

CALGARY (CP) — Retention of the monarchy is essential to preservation of Canada's parliamentary system of government, political scientist Dr. Frank Mackinnon said Thursday.

The University of Calgary professor laid out the role of the Crown for the benefit of about 600 people and the House of Commons-Senate committee on the constitution.

His presentation was one of three on the monarchy and the only one not tinged with emotion, a sentiment he described as having no place in discussions of constitutional change.

The monarchy separates the head of state from the head of government, he said. Under this system, the head of state was given extensive powers but told he could not exercise them while the head of government was made a trustee of the powers but never allowed to obtain them.

In that manner the monarchy kept the government in place and ensured politicians remained "electable, responsible, criticizable and defeatable."

When elected representatives obtained too much power, such as in a republic, they are not always controllable and the democratic process can be compromised or overthrown.

People in this country should have no qualms about paying homage to a queen in another land because Canadians "owe allegiance to outside heads in business, in churches and in other things."

Dr. Mackinnon was introduced as a noted authority on the monarchy by committee co-chairman Mark MacGuigan, Liberal member for Windsor-Walkerville.

Earlier, Calgary Mayor Rod Sykes said constitutional change is "vastly over-rated as a solution to anything."

He said the majority of the problems in urban areas can be traced to inter-governmental economic conditions.

The monarchy received support from Calgary lawyer Arthur Bishop who complained the federal government and the civil service were "methodically stripping away all reference to the Crown . . . just to pacify one province."

Quebec is obviously pursuing an anti-English policy, he said, and "no amount of constitutional revision is going to change the attitude of these people to our present system of government."

Robber Robbed

TORONTO (CP) — James John Wilson, 19, is living proof of that old saw about there being no honor among thieves—he is a bank robber who was robbed himself.

On Dec. 15, he walked into a downtown Toronto Bank of Montreal branch and relieved a teller of $2,300 after passing her a holdup note.

Then he packed a bag and flew to Winnipeg, transferring to a Miami-bound jetliner. He visited several other U.S. cities and finally reached Los Angeles.

On Jan. 7, Wilson was robbed of $400, his watch and a diamond ring, leaving him flat broke.

Hungry and penniless, he started hitch-hiking back to Canada. He ended up surrendering to police in Kansas City, told them what he had done, and was returned to Toronto.

Thursday, Wilson pleaded guilty to a robbery charge and was sentenced to four years in penitentiary by Judge Donald Graham.

Science Must Focus on Cities

By KEN KELLY
Canadian Press Science Writer

TORONTO (CP) — In the cities and on city problems is where science must be focused if the people are to benefit, Dr. O. M. Solandt, chairman of the Science Council of Canada, said Thursday night.

He told a news conference that the day must come when cities have the scientific resources themselves with which to find solutions to problems of waste disposal, transportation, land use and urban planning.

The Science Council is working on a report to the federal government on urban development which will call for major federal financial efforts to foster the grow of scientific expertise of the cities.

Dr. Roger Gaudry, Science Council vice-chairman, said the council is aiming at achieving the fullest possible impact on whover holds the proposed urban affairs portfolio in Ottawa.

City problems should be attacked at all levels of government but it was only realistic to expect that most of the money will come from the federal government in consultation with the provinces.

An example of the kind of program the council will recommend to the federal government is the development of ways to recycle wastes, either to make use of waste materials or to get rid of them in such a way as to prevent detrimental effect in the environment.

Dr. Solandt said the council will comment on the fact that federal scientific effort is well-funded, staffed and provided with facilities but such resources diminish at other levels until, in the municipalities, they are non-existent.

'Yet that is where most of the people live. This is one of the real problems in the application of science. We have got to find ways of applying it at the level where people live."

Bombing of Minister's House May Be Linked with Quebec

LONDON (CP) — A Scotland Yard spokesman said today that possibilities that the bombing of a cabinet minister's house may somehow be linked with supporters of Quebec separatists is being explored but so far there is no evidence of any relationship.

The spokesman was commenting on a report published in The Daily Mail today saying that special police have uncovered clues linking the bombing of Employment Minister Robert Carr's home "with the terror group which killed Quebec's minister of labor, Mr. Laporte."

The newspaper, in its front-page story, said that detectives found that sympathizers of the Front de Liberation du Quebec fled to Britain during the police roundup following Pierre Laporte's murder in Montreal.

It maintained that some of these sympathizers got in touch with Maoist groups in London and that during the last few days several of them have been questioned by police and their rooms searched.

One Scotland Yard source described the newspaper report as "rubbish," but said all possible linkups are being checked and that police attention is being given to political agitators.

House-to-house inquiries are continuing and all airports and seaports are being watched for arrivals and departures. Witnesses who may have seen something unusual at the time of the bombing are coming forward to help police, he said.

The field of suspects is narrowing, he added, though there is nothing to indicate that an arrest is imminent.

About 300 detectives are reported to be involved in the investigation.

Scotland Yard's hunt for the bombers narrowed to nine prime suspects, all regarded as political extremists, all of whom have vanished from their homes.

Top of the list, police sources said, is a Scotsman in his 20s who has been under surveillance by the Yard's special branch—which specializes in political security—for the last year.

The other eight men all could have vital information on the two bombs which blasted Carr's home Tuesday night in explosive climax to a day of industrial protest aimed against the Conservative government's anti-strike legislation.

They are said to have taken part in bombing incidents and demonstrations in London over recent months. They were not at their homes or work places Thursday when detectives swooped.

In parallel inquiries, government agents intensified their investigation to find the roots of an extremist organization known as The Angry Brigade. It could not be confirmed at this stage whether the nine wanted men had connections with this outfit, which has sent crudely-printed letters to newspapers saying: "Robert Carr got it tonight. . . . We're getting closer."

Post office experts believe the letters may have been posted before the bombs went off at Carr's Georgian-style home in Barnet, a north London suburb.

Mid East Peace Talks in Trouble

UNITED NATIONS (Reuter) — United Nations efforts to move the Middle East peace talks off dead centre are in deep trouble and Egypt and Jordan are considering turning the whole problem back to the Security Council.

An Arab source said no decision has been taken, but reports were so persistent in UN diplomatic circles that observers had little doubt the council would be called before the end of the month.

Egyptian Ambassador Mohamed Al Zayyat conferred separately Thursday with Dr. Gunnar Jarring, the UN special representative for the Middle East, and Secretary-General U Thant.

No statement was made afterwards, but it was understood that Al Zayyat continued to withhold Egypt's reply to the Israeli position paper on a settlement that Jarring brought back from his Jerusalem visit last weekend.

It is expected to be negative. Jordan also is expected to reject the Israeli position, largely on the issue of Israel's reported failure to make a clear pledge on troop withdrawal.

If and when the 15-nation Security Council meets, the Arab side certainly will ask for a resolution to counter Israeli plans for settling the occupied Arab territory, and insist on a full-scale debate on the whole complex Middle East problem, informants said.

They said the council also would ask for extension of the present standstill ceasefire, set to expire Feb. 5.

New York Police Stay Off Beats

NEW YORK (CP) — Hundreds of city policemen, angered by a court decision that left their pay dispute unresolved, refused to patrol their beats today in a spreading wildcat work stoppage.

Captains, lieutenants, sergeants and detectives were ordered to fill the gap and a city hall spokesman said the emergency measures assured adequate protection.

The patrolmen's Benevolent Association claimed at 1:30 a.m. EST the job action was "virtually complete," but police headquarters said the extent of the stoppage varied from district to district. It declined to give a breakdown.

Telephone checks indicated that wide areas of Brooklyn, the Bronx and upper Manhattan had only sparse patrols. Police headquarters said all emergency calls were being answered.

Toronto School Displays Frog Power Symbol

TORONTO (CP) — Lionel la Grenouille, a pop-eyed papier-mache symbol of Frog Power, squats in the reception room at Ecole Secondaire Etienne Brule.

The school's principal, Lionel Remillard, thinks Lionel la Grenouille is a good sign. No longer is it necessary to cringe under the old taunt of "Frog" directed at the French-speaking. The students at Etienne Brule even parade their confidence by wearing buttons proclaiming Frog Power.

Etienne Brule is Toronto's only public secondary school that teaches all subjects to Grade 13 in French.

Most of the Etienne Brule students have attended elementary bilingual schools in the separate school system.

Three 14-year-olds, Lise Dallaire, Linda Nadeau and Giselle Calder, travel the 30 miles from Oshawa by bus to attend. They graduated from Corpus Christi elementary bilingual school.

At this stage, none has decided on a career or how they will use their bilingualism.

Other students have transferred from the English public school system and have done well in their studies, said Mr. Remillard. They have had tutorial help, have shown unusual proficiency in French or have been on exchange programs.

Twenty-four portable classrooms form the school, and the principal says if all students who know French were admitted, there would be need for 50 portables.

"Our aim right now is not more pupils but to create a total environment of French—the cultural milieu. It's a tough thing to carry out. Most of the students come from English-speaking homes. At 9 in the morning the kids have to press a mental button and tune in to French; at 3:30 they tune out and become English speaking."

He says the school has been flooded with requests for bilingual workers. And with French television coming to Toronto next fall, there will be a further need, possibly 60 to 75 persons.

Teaching French in English public elementary schools in Ontario is still up to the decision of the individual school board, even for Grades 7 and 8.

The Ontario department of education states as policy the importance of each child having knowledge of the other group's language for the purpose of communication and better understanding.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Cause of Nausea Must Be Learned

When the stomach rebels by producing nausea and vomiting, it's important to know the cause before we begin treatment. Is the stomach reacting in sympathy to trouble elsewhere?

For example, most people have heard that what seems to be acute indigestion may really be due to an attack of coronary thrombosis. Or, the trouble may be due to an ulcer or to a non-functioning gall bladder filled with stones or to acute appendicitis. Disease in the liver, pancreas or kidneys should be considered. Another common reason for a stomach upset is a virus infection. (It's often called the 24-hour virus.)

But perhaps the most common cause is something we ate that disagreed with us. Food may be spoiled and actually be infected with bacteria. This may cause nausea and vomiting. Sometimes, we are allergic to some foods. Perhaps we eat too much or too fast, or drink too much.

As you can see, each stomach upset requires it's own specific management.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Suppose someone gets a stomach upset — I mean nausea, vomiting and diarrhea — and is practically sure of the reason for it. For example, sometimes even as we eat food it doesn't taste just right, but we finish it knowing we shouldn't. Suppose it's just what you might call a simple stomach upset. After having been "cleaned out both ways" is there anything else to do? Mrs. R.

Comment: I think what's most important is to put the stomach at rest for at least 24 hours. Of course, liquids are necessary to make up for those lost. Sipping a cup or two of hot tea as soon as you can hold it is, I believe, very helpful. Some can also take a slice of toast, which seems to help settle the stomach.

But, I repeat, put off the desire to eat sooner than you should. The intestinal tract has taken quite a beating and welcomes the temporary vacation.

However, if the stomach upset lasts longer than a day, it makes good sense not to try to keep treating yourself. It's time to ask the doctor. In a severe upset, even waiting 24 hours is much too long before calling for professional help.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My mother is 65, lives on a farm in the mid west and helps my Dad milk about 40 cows every evening. She doesn't feel up to helping in the mornings.

She has diabetes, an ulcer, and has been treated medically for an overactive thyroid. Recently she had an EKG, gall bladder X rays and chest X rays — all negative. She has recently been complaining of chest pains and tiredness. What next? — Mrs. S.

Comment: My guess is that she should give up waiting for the cows to come home. With her medical history and her present symptoms of chest pain and fatigue, I think you'll agree that someone else should take on the responsibility of milking the cows.

It's possible to have negative EKGs even though the cause of chest pains may be due to angina pectoris and coronary disease. Has she seen her doctor lately? Does he know all about her daily activities?

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have read somewhere that women in their 50s use an "abrasion" method for a sagging chin. I would like to give it a try. Do you recommend it? — Mrs. G.

Comment: Haven't you got it mixed up with "dermabrasion" for removing facial scars? I doubt that this procedure will firm up a sagging chin.

Crisis in Quebec 'Used' - - Levesque

MONTREAL (CP) — The federal and provincial Liberals took advantage of last fall's terrorist crisis to "pervert" both the political climate and the administration of justice in Quebec, the separatist Parti Québécois charged Thursday.

..Rene Levesque, the party's leader, accused the Liberal parties of naving sowed the seeds of the crisis in the provincial election campaign last spring and of sowing the seeds of an even worse crisis by their reaction to the political kidnappings in October.
tober.

Mr. Levesque also announced his intention to seek a renewed mandate as leader at the Parti Quebecois' next convention.

Sharing the platform at a news conference were Jacques Parizeau, an economist and former economic adviser to previous provincial governments, and Camille Laurin, PQ leader in the national assembly.

Mr. Parizeau, the party's executive chairman, launched his own attack on the Liberals' behavior, saying the declaration last fall of an apprehended insurrection was far more damaging to the Quebec economy than bombs in Montreal.

Mr. Levesque said the Liberals perverted the political climate in Quebec by "consciously confusing" the Parti Quebecois' "democratic action with subversion and terrorism."

They had perverted the administration of justice by invoking exceptional powers under the War Measures Act and, more recently, by scheduling trials of those charged with the kidnap-murder of Pierre Laporte to coincide with a provincial byelection in Chambly riding, south of Montreal.

Mr. Levesque said this was done "under the authority of the attorney-general and (Justice Minister) Jerome Choquette," and termed it a "scandalous" political move.

Reading a long statement entitled Le Parti Quebecois Accuse, Mr. Levesque charged that the federal and provincial Liberals misrepresented facts, cynically exploited fear of unemployment and used "economic terrorism" to rally the vote which gave Premier Robert Bourassa an overwhelming majority in the Quebec national assembly last spring.

He said there was a suspension of terrorist violence in the province before the election "and a simple, elementary respect for democracy could perhaps have made this permanent."

By blowing the crisis out of all proportion and declaring an apprehended insurrection, the authorities had deliberately pushed the situation to the point of hysteria, when in fact it should have been calmed down.

Mr. Parizeau accused the Bourassa government of lacking a coherent economic policy. It ignored the "absolute necessity of developing the public sector" and was based on developing the private sector.

"We are in the presence now of the abortion of an economic policy," he said. "Personally, I have not seen anything to match it in Quebec in 10 years."

Sydney J. Harris Says

Universities Misunderstood

Seventeen years ago in this column, I wrote: "It is an unhappy irony that although America attaches more importance to a college degree than to any other aspect of a man's abilities, there remains a strangeness and a suspicion toward colleges on the part of the general public."

I had been lecturing that week at the University of Colorado, and I was told by the Episcopal chaplain that the townspeople in Boulder suspected the university of being "pink."

"They fail to understand," he said sadly, "that the function of a university is to encourage dissent and disagreement, to present various views, and let the students think out the problems for themselves."

A few weeks later, the then new chancellor of the University of Chicago remarked to me that the school was not accepted as an essential part of the community by most of the citizens. "Somewhere," he said, "we've fallen down on the job of integrating the activities of the school with the life of the city."

And, still a few weeks later, State Senator Gordon Bubolz warned the Wisconsin Senate that there was "tenseness and hostility existing now between the University of Wisconsin and the legislature . . ."

For as long as I can recall, the needs and objectives of a university have been understood by only a few persons off campus, and not many more on. But the purpose of a college — which is to show young minds how to think (not what to think) — can be achieved only if the trustees and faculty and legislators and general public appreciate what is important and what is trivial.

The University of Colorado at that time had no trouble in getting the legislature to build a multi - million dollar highway from Denver to Boulder, nor to win funds for buildings and grounds. But appropriations for faculty needs, and for direct educational purposes, are grudgingly and scantily bestowed.

American universities have been building up a head of steam for a generation or more; Robert Hutchins saw it all coming in his tenure as President of the University of Chicago, but no one listened; I have been sending up smoke - signals for a quarter-century, with as little response.

It has been the grievous fault of the universities — the hugest industry in America — that they have not made the public aware of the essential services they perform; and the grievous fault of the public that they are interested in universities only as factories for producing sheepskins and athletic victories. Such monumental misunderstanding and mutual distrust was bound to erupt in the ugly rebellions of today.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

Your birthday today: Productivity is your keyword in the coming year. Nearly every project you undertake brings a constructive result. Material progress comes more easily than usual. Your natural approach is to find what is needed in your community, then to do what you can do about it. Some such needed projects are viewed by others as speculative, through lack of insight on their part. Today's natives are peaceful, often show considerable literary talent.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The mood is a holiday one. Seek unaccustomed places to visit, wear your newer clothes, meet interesting people. Gather good friends about you in the evening.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be out and around today; there's a great deal happening. Cultivate older relatives, attend to some of their needs. Find a social gathering this evening.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Make a survey to see what things will be needed; chances are you're short of some trifling item. The way you dress today helps make the occasion.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Make this a busy home-life today, fix the place up. Spread the chores around equally. Gather your loved ones for a festive evening.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): There's much to do, if you are any sort of collector, on correspondence, long neglected contacts. Your comments are likely to be taken as gospel by somebody you didn't think took you seriously.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Leave the chip off your shoulder; instead, share a bright mood with all comers. Group activities, sports, games are all favored. Keep on the move.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You have time to organize. Project yourself strongly, use all your persuasive powers. You can prevail against hidden opposition, and your intuition verifies intentions of others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Now you confirm what you had thought without being sure. You are more on the inside with a group than you were. Unless you have strong feelings, stay free of involvement on social issues.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22—Dec. 21): Things are looking better for friends and family this weekend. Find a number of interesting things to do with friends willing to share them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): There's an unusual climate of endorsement for you and your program. Consolidate your situation. Travel now promises high adventure. A sociable mood dominates the evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): There's good news to celebrate. Join with lively people for social fun. Extra earnings are available from hobbies or perhaps a contest. Explore the possibilities.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Begin the day early and in good humor. Take a direct approach; say what you want. If an old friend asks you to visit or travel, take up the offer if you can.

South Africans May Face Arms Sale Ban

Embargo Might Settle Dispute

SINGAPORE (CP) — Britain is being urged to postpone for six months an arms sales to South Africa while attempts are made to impose a world arms embargo against the apartheid nation, it was learned today.

Prime Minister Trudeau, who did not attend the morning session of the Commonwealth leaders conference, has been involved in discussions on this point.

A six-month postponement of the arms issue would give the Commonwealth, particularly African members, time to bring pressure on countries which now sell armaments to South Africa—they include France and Italy—to stop the shipments.

The conference's general political debate ended today and the economic one will begin Monday. This means that the South African issue probably will not be reached until Tuesday afternoon at the earliest.

Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew of Singapore summed up the political debate today and said a walkout on the arms problem would not benefit anyone.

Britain's proposal to sell arms to South Africa to guard sea-lanes from the Indian Ocean has dominated the conference so far, with Prime Minister Heath of Britain stressing his country's right to determine its own affairs. Britain maintains the arms sales are necessary to counter a Soviet buildup in the Indian Ocean.

Heath said Friday "the frontiers of the Soviet Union are not bound by the Mediterranean" and the Commonwealth is not a tribunal "to sit in final judgment of the policies and actions of its members."

He said the Soviet Union is ready to prove any sign of weakness in the West's position. It was Soviet policy to extend its naval units for—in the words of a Soviet naval chief—"broad offensive policies against sea and ground troops of the imperialists at any point of the world's oceans."

As Heath spoke, two Soviet warships sailed past Singapore —a 19,000-ton, 689-foot cruiser and a destroyer. They headed up through the Malacca Strait between Malaysia and Indonesia without stopping.

Military sources said the Russian navy has sailed cruisers of that size since 1968 in the Indian Ocean but none has ever come so close to Singapore. Naval sources here placed the Soviet strength in the Indian Ocean at one submarine, a submarine tanker, two to four frigates or destroyers, a large tank landing ship, a tanker and several surveillance trawlers.

Some African states have threatened to withdraw from the Commonwealth if Britain goes through with the arms-sales proposal.

In an interview with CBC Radio News Service, Trudeau said Friday night that Britain should assert its right to sell arms to South Africa but delay for some time implementation of the policy.

He said at the same time Britain should accept a proposed Declaration of Commonwealth Principles of multi-racialism.

Trudeau said that in this way a compromise could be worked out on the arms question.

Trudeau flew today to Sabah in North Borneo and, among other things, planned to ride a giant turtle.

In North Borneo, Trudeau will spend the weekend at a small Canadian-assisted forest project. It is reported that he will be the only Commonwealth leader to leave Singapore during the weekend when vital behind-the-scenes discussions will be held in an attempt to reach some compromise on the arms-sales issue.

Oil From Sunken Ships Covers English Coast

DOVER (Reuter) — Beaches along the southeast coast of England were covered in thick black oil Friday following the sinking of two ships in the English Channel earlier this week.

Gangs of workmen were brought in to clear more than 60 miles of oil-polluted coastline, and hundreds of dead and dying seabirds were found by nature conservancy officials.

More oil slicks have been sighted off the coast. A local authority official said Friday: "We managed to get the beaches fairly clear yesterday, but today they are more heavily contaminated then ever."

The oil was discharged from the Panamanian tanker Texaco Caribbean and the German freighter Brandenberg, which sank with a total loss of 29 lives in two separate collisions Monday and Tuesday.

Pollution Control Costs Close Plant

HULL, Que. (CP) — As it turns out, the cost of ending pollution of a local creek by Canada Packers Ltd. is the job of 105 plant employees.

The meat packer was singled out last summer as a major polluter of Brewery Creek, flowing past the plant and into the nearby Ottawa River.

Pollution Probe, a private anti-pollution group, demonstrated the heavy pollution by collecting animal fats and wastes dumped into the creek and making soap from it. A lump of the soap was presented to Canada Packers officials.

The company then pledged to take action to clean up its discharge into the creek.

Robert MacGregor, plant office manager, said Friday that, having considered the cost of new equipment and other measures to stop pollution from the slaughterhouse portion of the plant, the company had found them too high. The decision was to close the slaughterhouse section.

"It was found that it was uneconomical to install this equipment, that the company wouldn't be able to get a return on its investment," he said in an interview.

Mr. MacGregor declined to say how much the company would have had to spend to clean up the slaughterhouse operation.

But extensive changes would have been needed, he said. Renovation would have been required in refrigeration facilities as well as in slaughtering equipment and facilities.

The 105 worker layoff will be in full effect by May 29, reducing the work force at the plant to 320 from 425.

The slaughterhouse section has been the main source of creek pollution and closing it would reduce Canada Packers contribution to water pollution practically to zero, a company official said.

The packing section of the plant would coneinue in operation, using animals from other slaughterhouses in Canada and the United States.

Tate Jury Given Case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Climaxing seven months of trial, the Sharon Tate murder jury is deliberating after hearing a prosecutor tell them Charles Manson and his three co-defendants lived by "a religion of death, blood and murder."

The seven-man, five-woman jury deliberated for 70 minutes Friday after receiving its charge from the judge. It resumes today.

Manson, 36, although barred from the courtroom for unruly behavior, managed to inject a comment before the jury retired.

"Tell them why we couldn't put on a defence, old man," he shouted from an adjoining room just after the judge finished reading the charge.

Kaunda Suggests Canada Take Lead If Britain Quits

TORONTO (CP) — President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia said Friday night that the Commonwealth could continue if Britain left, if Canada was prepared to step into the gap.

"Fortunately, we are very proud of the role Canada is playing in Commonwealth affairs," he said in a CBC telephone interview.

Mr. Kaunda said his delegation had been in constant touch with the Canadians since the beginning of the Commonwealth conference in Singapore.

If the Commonwealth is saved, the Zambian president said, "it will be in no small measure due to Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and Canada's role in it."

Mr Kaunda said there was no reason Britain couldn't sign the declaration of Commonwealth principle if it is genuinely interested in a multi-racial society.

The key clause in that declaration is that Commonwealth members shall "deny all regimes which practise them (the evils of racial discrimination) any assistance which could consolidate and strengthen them."

If Britain signed the declaration, it could not go ahead and supply arms to South Africa, he said.

He rejected any solution along lines suggested by Mr. Trudeau who said before the conference began that he hoped the African countries and Britain could agree to disagree.

"The only way to agree to disagree would be to allow Britain to go ahead with her arms sales to South Africa and if that happens we will have no choice but to reject it," he said.

Cold Here to Stay For Several Days

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

The weatherman had some chilling words for Quinte dwellers as temperatures slid well below zero early today.

The new belt of clear cold air tightened around the district is expected to remain several days — and should plunge temperatures even lower tonight.

Low tonight in the Belleville-Trenton area will be between 10 and 15 degrees below zero, predicted the CFB Trenton forecaster.

During the day it will remain sunny and cold with temperature highs around 10 above.

"It looks like it's going to be cold for a few days yet," said the forecaster.

Lowest point reached by the mercury early today in Belleville was eight degrees below, at 8 a.m.

Light early morning winds, however, created a chill factor estimated between 10 and 15 degrees below.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Cold weather is well entrenched throughout Ontario and little change is anticipated during the next few days. A weak disturbance moving eastwards through the United States will spread some clouds into extreme southwestern Ontario tonight; otherwise skies will be mainly clear. Flurries will persist near the upper lakes today but should be isolated on Sunday.

PC Delegates Show Clear Reluctance to Commit Themselves

TORONTO (CP) — Education Minister William Davis still appears to be the leader in the race for leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party, but the battle is far from over.

While Mr. Davis has the support of most of the cabinet and a majority of the 68-member caucus, word coming back into Queen's Park indicates a striking reluctance on the part of other leadership convention delegates to commit themselves.

Dr. Richard Potter, MPP for Quinte, last week toured the province advocating precisely this attitude of non-commitment until the convention.

Latest to announce support for Education Minister Davis, in statements Friday, are Public Works Minister J. R. Simonett and Trade and Development Minister Stanley Randall.

But as riding meetings chose delegate, it became evident that elected-member influence was less than total. Reports from almost all sections of the province indicate there will be few ridings totally committed to any one candidate.

The candidates, recognizing that many of the 1,720 convention delegates remain uncommitted, have redoubled their efforts to move around the province seeking support.

They are criss-crossing the province, but from their public statements, none is saying much that will give delegates a solid basis for choice.

Speeches made at an all-candidates meeting in Ottawa Thursday—Mr. Davis was absent—revealed few differences on such policy issues as economic nationalism, government organization, pollution, urban development, tax reform or the age of majority in Ontario.

There has been only one common theme for Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough, Mines and Northern Affairs Minister Allan Lawrence, Financial and Commercial Affairs Minister A. B. R. Lawrence and Provincial Secretary Robert Welch. It is that the costs of education, for which Mr. Davis is responsible, are out of control.

But only Allan Lawrence has indicated how he would control them—limit spending by the department of education to no more than one-third of the provincial budget.

The fact that all are cabinet ministers, each with a responsibility for the course the government has followed in the past, has made it difficult for the candidates to speak bluntly of changes in policy they would like to see. Every demand for change is an admission that in the past they had not done enough, or had done the wrong things.

What has been up to now a dull leadership may now be catching fire. Conservative supporters may finally learn what each candidate stands for before they choose the successor to Premier John Robarts.

Subdivision Agreement Still Matter of Dispute in Trenton

TRENTON (Staff) — Hugh O'Neil, a town real estate broker and vice-president of Dufferin Developments today clarified the nature of the subdivision agreement that prompted a special meeting of council here Thursday.

Mr. O'Neil stresses that the agreement in no way committed the Town of Trenton to assist in paying for the cost of services within the new subdivision to be built southeast of Trenton High School.

"The town would pay 50 per cent of the cost of services to the property . . . inside the boundaries of our subdivision, Dufferin Developments is paying the total cost," he says.

Mayor Duncan McDonald whose refusal to sign the subdivider's agreement Thursday, prompted council to empower Councillor Ted Parker to ratify it, says "the agreement still means too much money to the town" for him "to bow out easily".

The mayor says the cost sharing program will see the town pay 50 per cent toward new sewers along parts of McGill Street and Edgeview Drive and a new watermain on Dundas West. He estimates these will cost between $16,000 and $20,000.

"If it is not over $10,000, I will eat your shirt. We are going to hear more about this" the mayor concluded.

Council ratified the Dufferin Developments agreement by a resolution last November. Mayor McDonald pointed out later that a bylaw might be necessary to make the pact effective. However, last year's council could not pass a money bylaw at that time because an election was going on at the time.

Dealing with Dufferin was put off until the new council came into office here Jan. 7 but at this time a resolution had come into effect that no more subdivider's agreements would contain 50 per cent cost-sharing clauses.

Mayor McDonald dismisses charges that the subdivision agreement was deliberately held up by council until the new resolution went into effect.

"There is a proper procedure in town affairs and if it is held up for 10 years that is the way it is going to be" he concludes.

Mr. O'Neil says that Dufferin Developments have been negotiating since the spring of 1970 to the present time to have the area serviced. "We have had tenders ready since October," he explained.

"We cannot understand the mayor's position" Mr. O'Neil asserted, adding that "subdividers up to the present time were given 50 per cent allowable for extending services to their subdivisions". He concludes that he has "always proceeded on the understanding that this would be offered to us".

Mayor McDonald contends that such agreements are "give - away" probrams confused by some with an incentives to industry policy followed here until two years ago when provincial authorities sought to have it rescinded.

"For the last eitht months, I have had no intention of approving this on the 50 per cent basis . . . I have been trying to get our agreements on the same basis as other communities," he says.

The mayor questions the acceptability of the policy document for subdivisions presented in council Monday by Clerk-comptroller O. W. Larry.

He contends that there have been changes in the policy document since it was approved in 1967. "What I want to see are the resolutions and bylaws authorizing these changes. You cannot have 15 or 20 changes without bylaws," he says.

Fishing Can Be Fun

Fishing for grouper and sea bass in the Gulf of Mexico has gained another enthusiast among Bay of Quinte residents.

For many years John Weese of Weese's Greenhouse and Flower Shop, RR7, Belleville, has been going to Fort Meyers, Florida, each winter with fishing in the Gulf his No. 1 recreation.

This year his son Russell joined the Gulf fishing crowd during a 10-day visit in the south and has come home "hooked" on the sport.

During his brief stay at Fort Meyers, Russell went fishing in the Gulf on two occasions with his father and three other sportsmen.

On the first occasion the party landed 97 grouper, eight snappers and 10 porgy.

Then the day before Mr. Weese left for home the same party was out again and landed another 30 grouper along with 100 pounds of sea bass.

But that was not all.

On the last fishing trip the party hooked a 300-pound sea bass but had to let him go.

"He was so big we couldn't land him," said the Prince Edward vacationer.

Bogus Bills Back Again

Another counterfeit $10 bill has turned up in Belleville in a deposit from Claude Lucas' Spur Service Station on Cannifton Road.

Deputy Chief Harold Reid of the City Police Department said this morning that the serial number of the bill was R-E with the numbers 5911078.

It was the second bill to turn up in three days in the city, although its serial number is different from the first one. However, the number does match with a series of bogus bills turned up in other Quinte area centres.

Deputy Reid said that it was hard to tell if the area was still being flooded with bills or if this particular note was a previously undetected "straggler".

Belleville OPP have arrested a Kingston man and woman and still seek two other people for questioning.

Marketing Boards Act As Check on Power

Kenneth Wright, public relations officer for the Prince Edward Milk Committee, defends agricultural marketing boards in their efforts to get more money for farm products.

"Those who try to make the public believe that marketing boards are some special monsters ought to do their homework," Mr. Wright claims in a recent news release.

The milk committee spokesman says that labor groups have been granted power by legislation to organize in a way that has a direct influence on the terms and conditions under which work will be performed.

Also many professions and service groups have been granted power by legislation to determine the qualifications of those who would compete against them and the fees which are to be charged for services rendered.

"Power in the hands of such groups increases the cost to consumers," claims Mr. Wright. "Some of those who appear critical of legislation which allows organized marketing of food by farmers are the very ones who are benefitting from legislation which allows marketing of their own labor and skills."

Mr. Wright in conclusion say farmers need to improve their communications with others in society if they are to achieve any reasonable understanding on the part of those who depend on the farm for food supplies.

Five Seek Position As County Warden

The 1971 inaugural meeting of Hastings county council has been called for Tuesday, Jan. 19 at the county administration building.

Council will go immediately into caucus for the selection of a new warden to succeed Reeve John Wilkes of Marmora and Lake Township, and to recommend the composition of the various council committees for the new year.

Five reeves are in the running for the warden's chair. They are Tweed reeve Barbara Allen; Menton Hamm of Limerick; Kenneth Smith, Elzevir and Grimsthorpe, Jack M. Bush of Sidney township and Carman Gibson of Tyendinaga.

The inaugural session of county council is expected to last until late Wednesday.

Outside resolutions to be considered include one from Kitchener asking the Ontario department of highways to implement an urgent program of research to discover an alternative to the use of salt on highways.

In another resolution the county of Oxford is asking that municipal fire departments be reimbursed expenses by the province when called to fires involving vehicles on the provincial highways.

The county of Victoria is asking that the province give consideration to levying a 25 cent fee for admission to provincial parks with the municipalities in which the parks are situated to be paid the money in lieu of taxes.

Drug Store Loses Cash

Belleville City Police are investigating an overnight break-in at Geen's Drug Store on Front Street which resulted in the theft of $1,100 in cash.

According to deputy chief Harold Reid, the money was taken from cash registers in the store some time last night.

Entry was gained by breaking a window at the rear of the store 15 feet above the ground. Police have established that a ladder was used.

Deputy Reid said that there was no damage in the store and little to tell of the thief's presence save for the window used in entry.

Other details about the entry and theft were not released due to police department's continuing investigation.

Papoose Not too Interested

Aileen Cowie, eight months, of 74 Hastings Drive wasn't too interested in the free rose mother Mrs. John Cowie and sister Susette, 8, received at this morning's opening of the County Health Food Centre, 321 Front Street. The new store features natural food items as well as fresh spring water at 30 cents per gallon. This is first such venture for owners Frank and Rita Quinn.

Farmers Given Insight On Productivity Aids

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

New challenges in agriculture incorporating new production techniques and new policies in management, were topics of discussion at the final day of the 1971 farm conference on Friday.

The conference held at Club Canara attracted more than 200 Quinte district farmers for both Wednesday and Friday sessions.

Friday morning's session was given over to talks on production techniques including the use of Pro-Sil as a corn silage additive, and storing of grain crops with the use of organic acids.

R. W. Murray, beef cattle specialist with the Ontario department of agriculture and food, said that the use of Pro-Sil, a molasses-based non-protein nitrogen course added to corn silage could be expected to give feedlot performance roughly equivalent to corn silage treated with urea and minerals at the time of ensiling.

Its disadvantages were that it can be spread evenly into the silage; it is easy to apply and transforms corn silage into a complete ration.

Disadvantages include being more expensive than urea plus minerals, it lacks certain vitamins and special equipment for application and storage is necessary.

Dr. Elwood Hatley, extension agronomist with the crop science department of the University of Guelph said that grain storage using organic acids was another new production technique.

He said the technique could prove a valuable alternative to corn cribs, driers and silos for small corn growers, for farmers expanding their corn acreages but lacking storage facilities.

Problem weeds and their control was a topic of discussion by C. J. Smith, seeds and weeds specialist from the agricultural office at Brighton.

While there were numerous chemicals available for weed control Mr. Smith said farmers should not lose sight of the fact that good cultural and management practices were also tools to be using in efforts to combat weeds.

Professor Hatley talked on corn blights and their control, while William Hurst, soil and crops specialist spoke on corn borer and alfalfa weevil.

Friday afternoon's session was given over to discussions on farm management policies.

Dr. D. H. Plaunt, director, farm management division, Canada department of Agriculture, spoke on implications of the task force report on agriculture.

Menno J. Klassen, market development officer with the Ontario Food Council, told of new trends in marketing. Today's consumer wanted good food — quality is important and the consumer knows her grades she said.

She also wanted variety as is indicated by the fact that today's supermarket stocks 8,000 items as compared with only 2,000 in 1940. The consumer wanted convenience foods and while value is more important than price, the affluent shopper still prides herself on being "careful."

The consumer is also venturesome and is prepared to try many foods not grown in Canada.

An indication of this is the fact that in 1969 Canada became a net importing nation of agricultural and food products.

Mr. Klassen said that in 1966 Canadian agricultural exports exceeded imports by $826 million, while in 1969 imports exceeded exports by $35 million.

Agricultural imports in 1968 totalled $1,036 million as compared with imports of $1,246 million in 1969.

The final talk of the day was on estate planning by D. Lyal MacLachlan, farm management specialist.

He said estate planning for farmers was a complex field of law and taxation but pointed out that it was entirely proper to do all within the framework of the tax laws to reduce taxes.

"Only tax evasion is punished, not tax avoidance," Mr. MacLachlan said.

Although each farm family had to be treated as an individual case, the speaker said there were three general aims.

These were: an adequate amount of income and security for the parents as long as they live; parents generally want their children to be treated equitably and this might mean education or other assistance for those not associated actively in the farm business; and eeveryone wants to minimize death taxes.

In the course of his talk Mr. MacLachlan gave the legal interpretation of estate taxes, succession duties and gift taxes.

The two-day farm conference was sponsored by Quinte district soil and crop improvement associations, milk committee and beef improvement associations.

IN MEMORIAM

CONNORS — In loving memory of my mother, Luella Connors who went to rest Jan. 17th, 1961.

Gone from us, but leaving memories,
Death can never take away.
Memories that will always linger,
While upon this earth we stay.
Days of sadness still come o'er us,
Tears of silence often flow,
For memory keeps you ever near us,
Though you died ten years ago.

—Always remembered by daughter Betty, son-in-law Ray.

PRINGLE — In loving memory of our dear brother, Mervin Nelson who passed away accidentally on Jan. 17, 1969.

They say time heals all sorrow,
And help us to forget.
But time so far has only proved,
How much we miss him yet,
Each time we see his picture,
He seems to smile and say,
"Don't cry I'm only sleeping.
We will meet again someday."
Merv never said goodbye to us,
But perhaps it's just as well,
We never could have said goodbye,
To a brother we loved so well.

—Always remembered by sister Audrey, brother-in-law, Gordon nephews and niece Teddy, Tina and Terry.

NICHOLSON — In loving memory of Alta Reid Nicholson who passed away January 16, 1967.

As quickly passing seasons bring,
The hour of death to those we love,
Each pearl that leaves life's broken string,
Is set in Heaven's crown above,
As narrower grows the earthly chain,
The circle widens in the sky,
Dear are the loved ones who remain,
Remembered, the ones who dwell on high.

—Lovingly remembered by Wesley, Violet, Flowella and Milton, Marion and Jack and their families.

EMERSON — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Thomas H. Emerson, who passed away suddenly Jan. 16, 1965 at Talston River, N.W.T.

With [illegible] smile and a wave [illegible] the hand,
He h[illegible]ndered into an unknown land,
We th[illegible]of him still as the same, I say.
He is not dead, he is just away.

—Ever remembered by wife and families.

DOUGLAS — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, Ewart Douglas who passed away Jan. 16, 1970.

Though his smile is gone forever,
And his hand I cannot touch,
Still I have so many memories,
Of the one I loved so much,
His memory is my keepsake,
With which I'll never part,
God has him in His keeping,
I have him in my heart.

—Your loving wife Lena, family and grandchildren.

CONNORS — In loving memory of my dear mother, Luella Connors who passed away January 17th, 1961.

The way she talked, the smile she wore,
And all the thousand things so dear,
We loved about her while she lived,
Haven't gone with her from here.
We miss your presence in our lives,
Each day that we are apart,
And wish that death had not so soon,
Stilled your loving, gentle heart,
They who think that you are gone,
Because your face no more they see,
Are wrong, for in our hearts you live,
And always will, in memory.

—Too dearly loved to ever be forgotten by daughter and son-in-law Florence and Leo.

DAVIDSON — In loving memory of our parents, Martha and William Davidson who passed away, Father on Jan. 16, 1964, Mother on Nov. 20, 1964.

Today recalls the memory,
Of loved ones gone to rest,
And those who think of them today,
Are the ones who loved them best.

—Always remembered by the family.

Ice Dredging Precautionary Flood Action

An ice-dredging operation has been mounted on the Moira River after the waterway showed threatening signs of flooding.

The project is aimed at unplugging a channel in the river mouth recently clogged by ice and slush — a blockage that has caused a sudden rise in water levels near the downtown area.

The operation was launched by the city's works department after the higher water marks were spotted along the Victoria Park shoreline of the Moira.

City engineer Wilbur Purcell says the operation is only a "precautionary measure", and there is no danger of flood "at the moment."

Mr. Purcell said recent cold weather added to the volume of slush and ice being washed downstream where it settled in the channel, forcing river levels higher in the vicinity.

Experience in previous winters had shown such dredging was a helpful precaution, he said.

"We hope to be able to clear the channel and help the river to flow more freely," said the engineer.

Using a mobile crane, work crews yesterday punched a series of holes in the ice along the park shoreline. Slush and ice were then hoisted from the channel and pushed into the adjacent city harbor by bulldozer.

The holes meantime were marked by barricades and placards on the river's frozen surface, now frequently used by snowmobilers.

It is the second time in a month — with a record of floods and flooding in downtown Belleville — has shown signs of tipping over safe water levels.

In mid-December frozen snow partially blocked a channel causing the river to rise suddenly in the downtown area. The threat receded with finer weather.

today. Mauritius offered itself as an alternative naval base if such a move would please the Africans by negating the need for Britain to supply arms to South Africa.

External Affairs Minster Gaetan Duval said in an interview: "If it is agreeable to all members of the Commonwealth, and to stop the disruption of the Commonwealth, we will help by giving a base to Britain in Mauritius."

Duval said the offer would be made when Indian Ocean security is discussed at the conference early next week.

"If the suggestion is accepted there will be no need for Britain to supply arms to South Africa to meet the threat of a Russian naval buildup in the Indian Ocean," he said.

Duval said he hopes the Mauritian offer would help resolve differences between Britain and the many Commonwealth members who opose any resumption of arms sales to South Africa.

The minister said Mauritius has approached most of the African delegations at the conference and replies so far have not been unfavorable.

Duval did not specify if the base would be limited to Britain and said the Indian Ocean should be "kept free of big-power confrontation."

Last year, Mauritius agreed with Moscow to provide port facilities for up to 12 trawlers a year and landing rights for Soviet aircraft carrying trawler crews. Duval noted that before independence Britain allowed Soviet trawlers to use the port.

McKeough First Candidate To Woo Local Delegates

The campaign for leadership of the Ontario Conservative Party at last is making personal contact with the party's Quinte grassroots.

Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough is in Belleville today — the first candidate for the province's most powerful political post to meet with delegates from district party organizations who will vote at a leadership convention now only one month away.

Mr. McKeough is the first of five contenders today in the leadership race, to visit the Quinte area.

But his competition is not far behind.

Education Minister William Davis will be in Belleville next Saturday.

Mr. Davis will meet with Quinte - district delegates between 4 p.m. and 6 p.m., following an earlier meeting in Kingston, Dr. Richard Potter, MPP Quinte confirmed this morning.

And, said Dr. Potter, Mines Minister Allan Lawrence also is expected in the near future, although no definite date has yet been set.

Mr. McKeough was scheduled to meet with executive officers and delegates who will vote at the leadership convention at the Sun Valley Motor Inn at noon.

Personal contact with the candidates livens the leadership race for Quinte Conservatives.

Party associations in two ridings — Quinte and Prince Edward-Lennox — already have named their convention delegates.

Conservatives in Hastings will choose their voting delegation to the mid-February convention in Toronto next Saturday night at Madoc.

Winter Welfare Situation Compared to Hungry 30s

The number of jobless in Hastings County — including Belleville — is on the increase, keeping sombre pace with growing national unemployment.

The trend has evoked some sober reflections.

A local welfare official believes that — for welfare agencies — this winter could be the toughest since the depression of the 1930s.

A district labor spokesman says the real unemployment statistics could be even higher if persons on job retraining programs were included.

But, in Belleville, Mayor Russell Scott says the city itself has a current job climate more favorable than most Ontario communities at this time. Construction is active and some industries are hiring labor.

More people than ever before are now at work in Belleville, said the mayor.

The number of jobless in the Hastings area was 1,888 in December — 6.6 per cent of the local labor force. This compared with 1,477 — 5.4 per cent of the work force — in December 1969.

(Unemployment statistics released yesterday in Ottawa showed the national jobless average at 6.5 per cent in December).

The statistics represent the number of persons seeking work through the Canada Manpower offices in Belleville — which administers an area including the county, the city and Ameliasburg township.

The December total actually represents a drop from November when 1,982 persons — 7.3 per cent of the labor force — were seeking work.

Major cause of the decrease however was attributed to hiring of casual labor during the Christmas season.

Contraction of the labor market is creating pressure on public welfare operations.

Reginald Tucker, administrator of Hastings County Social Services Dept., says during November welfare payments reached $110,000 — the highest ever.

While figures for December still are being processed, indications are the totals will be even higher.

Mr. Tucker says he cannot see "any let up" in the situation for the next two or three months.

Welfare costs during the early part of this year will be "exceptional" he predicts — something that will have to be borne in mind when the 1971 welfare budget is struck.

"This is probably the worst year we have suffered since the depression (of the 1930s)," said Mr. Tucker.

A winter works program, he believed, "would have been a boon" this year.

Robert Andrus, Quinte District Labor Council president, said Canadians taking job retraining programs also were a hidden unemployment factor.

If such persons were counted as actually out of work, he says, the national percentage of unemployed could be as high as 8.5 per cent.

"Generally, it's a bad picture," said Mr. Andrus "There has to be a lot more involvement in the employment field from government — both provincial and federal."

Mayor Scott, however, emphasized that a distinction should be drawn between Belleville and the surrounding area. The city itself, he believed, was "better off than any place in the province."

A number of construction projects were currently under way in the city, he said, and "at least three" local industries had been hiring employees.

"This is unusual for this time of year," he added.

While the situation "could always be better" there are "more jobs on the go than we've ever had" in winter, said the mayor.

"We certainly have a lot more people working than at any time," he said.

Meantime, the rise in unemployment insurance claims in the east - central Ontario area, which includes the Quinte district, is slightly below the provincial average.

The Unemployment Insurance Commission's Kingston district — spanning an area from Cobourg to Prescott — had 7,803 claimants at Dec. 31.

This was an increase of 28 per cent over the same time last year, a spokesman at the UIC regional office in Belleville said yesterday.

This compared with an increase of 30 per cent for Ontario.

However, the number of persons registered for unemployment benefits does not reflect actual jobless statistics, the spokesman cautioned.

Ironically, the traditional winter rise in national unemployment now creates more work in Belleville.

To cope with the increased work load, the UIC regional office hires casual labor each winter.

The same practice applied this winter although, said the spokesman, he did not believe the office had hired more temporary help than usual.

QIT to Present Cactus Flower

Members of Quinte Island Theatre have embarked on production plans for the broadway and movie hit, Cactus Flower. This forthcoming play follows the QIT's November production of Barefoot in the Park, the Neil Simon hit that marked the theatre group's first presentation featuring actors over 21.

Cactus Flower will play in Picton on February 26 and 27 and again on March 5 and 6. The Quinte Island Theatre group also plans to seek a berth in the Eastern Ontario Drama League Three - Act Festival, to be held in Belleville in March.

A spokesman for the QIT recently observed that Cactus Flower is the group's "most ambitious venture." Director Rick Rolston and producer Dr. Roger Hirst expect this play to surpass the high standards noted in QIT productions enjoyed by the public in the past three years.

Work began on Cactus Flower in December and rehearsals have been in progress for several weeks. It was announced that the set for this play is unusual since it consists of multi-levelled platforms to accommodate the many scene changes required by the production.

Busy thespians working in the QIT expect to prepare a new children's play for presentation this spring following the close of Cactus Flower. The group is also investigating the possibility of touring the Quinte area this summer performing a series of children's plays.

Dr. Shulman Will Stay

We wonder how Dr. Morton Shulman can reconcile his views of Ontario politics and politicians with his statement that he, in effect, plans to abandon his crusading ways.

Disillusioned by the outcome of the recent judicial inquiry into provincial police affairs, Dr. Shulman says he will stay in the legislature but "I'm going to abandon my tilting at windmills and stand back."

We hope this does not mean Dr. Shulman will lose his personal effectiveness. For one thing he is critical not only of the parliamentary system ("everything we say is great, everything they say is terrible . . . and we are not much better when they bring in an idea"), but of the calibre of people in the legislature; the back benches of all parties in the house, he says, are occupied in many cases by persons with "low IQs."

Be that as it may, as the Ottawa Journal pointed out after the recent inquiry, the fact it failed to reveal anything drastically untoward in the conduct of police affairs should not deter individual members from the kind of probing beneath the surface which Dr. Shulman had made a personal specialty.

We need more Dr. Shulmans as well as other independent-minded people such as Quinte's Dr. Potter. They make for more stimulating politics, as well as for initiative likely to further the interests of the people of this province.

Mixed Fortunes

Miniskirts, it is plain to see, are still alive and well while midis and maxis have been a spectacular flop. But visiting Trenton the other day we encountered a confident looking teenage lass in a midi skirt and maxi coat and she cut quite a dash as she strode swiftly along the main street.

Now in Britain it appears that midis and maxis are faring much better than in Canada and they are worrying insurance men because suddenly "safe" women drivers are making accident claims that are being traced to maxi coats.

The coats are reported to be getting in the way of gear levers and brakes. But sporting fellows that they are, the British insurance men do not want to jeopardize the discount car insurance scheme which some companies give women drivers "because they are safer."

So they are compromising; as one spokesman put it: "We are trying to find a way of keeping the ten per cent discount for women drivers, but imposing a penalty if the woman was wearing a maxicoat at the time of the accident."

In Canada the problem does not seem to have arisen, probably because of the poor response to the midi-maxi style. In any event girls, if you do have one and drive a car too, then take extra care.

Meanwhile, it is interesting to draw attention to a noted fashion executive's words on the state of confusion of contemporary international fashion. Speaking at the opening of the New York Couture Group's fashion week, Vincent Monte-Sano, president of the Couture Business Council, said fashion had become "a masquerade, a giant put-on . . . I am critical of Seventh Avenue for dredging up the past — the look of the 30s has no place in a space and technological age. It would be as if we resurrected the DC-3 to replace the 747.

"We have succeeded in destroying the continuity of fashion in the minds of the consumer," said Mr. Monte-Sano, a former clothing manufacturer. "It was a year that finds our industry in its darkest period since the depression, a year marked by decline, indecision and style disaster."

It would appear that the industry now has nowhere to go but up. If success has been its constant companion in the past, it has now suffered the fate that many enterprises and individuals encounter at some time, and to one extent or another in life — failure — only to rise again. Mr. Monte-Sano thinks so — he said he hoped this period was now behind the industry and he had faith it would spring back once it had developed a new look and direction for the 1970s.

Rental Issue

We note that some organizations are being permitted free use of the Ben Bleecker auditorium and that a number of others are seeking preferred rental rates. It must be remembered, however, that someone has to foot the bill for heating, lighting and cleaning up afterwards — the taxpayer, that is. The regular fee is $160 and we wonder if consideration should not be given to charging a nominal sum at least, say $50, as a minimum maintenance fee.

The Farce of Diplomatic Immunity

Congo Versus Architect J. Venne Who Wants His $10,000

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Some day soon the Supreme Court of Canada will be bringing down a decision that could change the shape of diplomacy in Canada.

And if it does, perhaps the change could ripple around the world.

If the Supreme Court rules for the status quo, then nothing will change.

Diplomats will remain diplomats, a cut and a class above the common taxpayers who must pay for it all.

But if the Court finds that the denizens of Diplomatic Row, after all, are simply people like everyone else, ending, if indeed not ended, will be the day of what the privileged diplomats have chosen to call "immunity."

That is immunity from such hangups as taxes, the law — from traffic tickets to manslaughter charges — and many of those other curbs and restrictions that regulate your life and mine.

As things stand now, a diplomat may run down and kill — and it HAS happened here in the National Capital — a child, and pleading immunity, escape any penalty more severe than a recall to his home office.

No prosecution, no conviction, no punishment.

A diplomat's wife may have her chauffeur wheel the embassy's lordly limousine onto a pedestrian shopping mall closed to vehicular traffic — as HAS happened here, too — while she does her banking.

A diplomat may purchase all manner of goodies from Cadillacs to Crown Royal tax-free, and if he can manage it slickly enough — as HAS happened in Ottawa — turn a quick profit buck with a cut - price resale.

It has only been the tiny minority of the diplomatic corps that has engaged in such fun and games with immunity.

But there long has been more of an abuse of seeking sanctuary in immunity from the courts — particularly in traffic offences.

Stop signs? They are for taxpayers

Red lights? Not for the drivers of some CD (for Corps Diplomatique) plated foreign jobs.

Speed limits? No parking signs? You must be kidding.

But now the whole big bag of special privilege is being challenged before the highest court of the land.

It happened this way:

Back when Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau, with the help of taxpayers from all across the land, was putting together the miracle of Expo '67, the Republic of the Congo hired architect Jean Venne to fashion its pavilion.

Three years after Expo, the Montreal architect complained that not only had the Republic of the Congo not paid him his $10,000 fee, but pleading diplomatic immunity even from contracted obligations, was refusing payment.

So Jean Venne sued.

Right off the legal top, the Congo's counsel argued that no court had the required jurisdiction — even the lawful right — to hear Jean Venne's claim.

Why not, if the money was owing? And nobody was arguing that it was not.

Diplomatic immunity, remember? That is why.

Well the trial judge ruled this was carrying diplomatic immunity a little far, further perhaps than the authors of this strange device of special privilege might have intended.

The court said it would hear the case.

So the Congo, still pleading immunity, protesting the diplomatic injustice of the ruling, took the case to the Quebec Court of Appeal.

Mr. Justice George Owen of the Quebec Appeal Court in making his ruling — for Jean Venne and against the Republic of the Congo — was struck and obviously incensed by what he considered the incredulity of the diplomatic position.

"It is time," he wrote in his judgment, "that our courts repudiate the theory of absolute sovereign immunity as outdated and inapplicable to today's conditions."

The case, ruled His Honor, would proceed.

Taking the position that up to at least 1967 — the year of Expo and the disputed debt — Canada routinely had granted "full and complete" immunity even from court action to diplomats, the Congo took the case to the highest tribunal in the land

The Congo's counsel reminded the Supreme Court that indeed, in the past, this had been its very position.

Architect Jean Venne's lawyers pleaded that even so, might not the court now concede that this immunity no longer should cover such things as legally binding contracts that everyone in the community, except perhaps diplomats, had no choice but to honor?

And might not the Supreme Court agree with the Quebec Court of Appeal that the doctrine of absolute sovereign immunity was sort of out of joint with the changing times?

The full court of nine Justices is pondering these questions — the roll-call indicating not only interest but perhaps conviction that an important principle is at stake — and is due to deliver some judgments January 26.

This key case of the Congo vs Jean Venne could be among them.

Commonwealth Talks

Arms Issue—A Propaganda Victory for Red China

Cornwall Standard - Freeholder

Score one for Red China in the growing crisis over Britain's decision to supply arms to South Africa. The world's most active subversives (and our new-found chums) are, with the help of our own Prime Minister and others, achieving a victory from within they could never win in the open.

Asia, Africa and the Mideast have long been Red Chinese target areas, and former British colonies in Africa the prime targets of Red China's incitement to rebellion. Peking did spectacularly badly in its initial efforts, for all that it poured specialists, money and guerrilla arms into the former colonies; many a Red Chinese diplomat and his staff returned home in a hurry when national governments suddenly found their pals from Peking were, in fact, attempting to create colonies of their own to replace the new nations.

Now, all of that has changed. Sparked by Peking - oriented African governments, the Commonwealth meets in Singapore to demand that Britain maintain its arms embargo against South Africa, or else. The "or else," of course, means "or else we'll get out of the Commonwealth." And Mr. Trudeau, speaking in New Delhi to a group of students, informs the that if enough African nations get out, Canada may well be forced to leave, too. And the real villains of the piece — the Red Chinese who have conned the African governments involved into starting the whole commotion — are sitting back and rubbing their hands.

All but lost in the arms uproar is the reason for its existence — Britain's fear of Soviet naval domination of the Indian Ocean. The arms South Africa seeks, and which Britain is prepared to supply, are naval vessels and naval aircraft. South Africa doesn't need, nor has Britain offered to supply, weapons to maintain apartheid within South Africa.

On Controlling Population

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

May I comment on the thought provoking letter written by Mr. Wilbur Leonard of Bancroft, which appeared in a recent issue of your newspaper. Mr. Leonard prefaced his remarks by saying "there is alarm over the world's population explosion to the extent that a committee has been organized to see what can be done". He concluded his opening remarks by expressing opinion "that a committee such as this is as powerless as a committee formed in a mountain village of Brazil to dry up the Pacific Ocean".

I agree with Mr. Leonard that there is probably little or nothing that a Belleville-centred committee could do at this time to stem the rapidly advancing spectre of over population. We might therefore, I suppose, be justified in sitting on our hands while, as your headline suggests, "the natural order of things keeps the population in check". The agents of death to which I assume you make reference — war, plague, and famine — would undoubtedly in due course reduce any overcrowding: and let us not forget that the atomic bomb has the capacity to make its own contribution by ending it once and for all.

On the other hand we might, I suppose, attempt to do something by proposing reasonable alternatives. We might begin by drawing to the attention of our fellow citizens by whatever means possible, that the size of the world's population is fast approaching crisis proportions. We could point out, for example, that since man has already intervened in the natural order of things to prevent death, the time has come for him to again intervene this time to prevent birth. The form such intervention should take, I personally am prepared to leave to the conscience of the individual.

In the middle of 1969 Canada had a population of 21.3 million. It had a birth rate of 19. per thousand and a death rate of only 7.3 per thousand. It had one of the lowest death rates of any country in the world and in terms of life expectancy at birth, one of the highest. The doubling time of Canada's population is now estimated at 35 years. This means that for every person presently in Canada — 35 years hence there will be two! Beyond a doubt we could survive such a catastrophic increase though the land area available for recreational purposes, and our fresh water supply — not to mention clean air, would be at a premium. Highway 401 on a summer Sunday night would certainly tax one's patience, and the traffic on the Gardiner Expressway and the Don Valley Parkway in Metropolitan Toronto we can leave to one's own imagination.

It is information such as this that our local "committee" as Mr. Leonard calls it wishes to make better known — information which in the hurry-scurry of everyday living tends to become obscured. We hope that other people will share our concerns.

The Same Old Line

Ottawa Journal

We had nourished a small hope that the Christmas recess would have some healing effect upon the bickering mood which had settled upon the Commons before it adjourned last Dec. 18.

The very first exchange in the Commons yesterday dimmed that hope.

Gerald W. Baldwin (PC — Peace River) raised a reasonable, if debatable, case that the committee on Health, Welfare and Social Affairs had applied unreasonable curbs on what witnesses would be heard in connection with a bill on packaging and labelling.

Baldwin's tone was set in his second paragraph when he said: "The opposition has experienced three sessions of rather arrogant attempts by this authoritarian Government to cut out the heart of the parliamentary process."

The government has much to answer for in its attitude towards Parliament. There has been ample evidence of arrogance. But if Baldwin wanted to obtain a change of policy in this new year, and was not just seeking an easy occasion to attack, he should have put his case more clearly and more moderately.

As a matter of tactics, his opening blast could not have been designed, and certainly was not destined, to improve the tenor and the efficiency of the Commons.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS
Jan. 16, 1971 . . .

The Japanese army invaded Burma 19 years ago today — in 1942 — only five weeks after capturing Malaya. Simultaneously there were successful Japanese landings on Dutch and American islands in Southeast Asia. The Burma campaign lasted barely three months before British and Indian armies were driven back into India and the Burma Road to China was captured. The first check to the Japanese came in naval battles of the Coral Sea and Midway, when the United States Navy intercepted fleets in May and June, 1942.

1942 — Carole Lombard died in an air crash.

1906 — Shackleton reached the magnetic South Pole.

In History, Clergymen Often Have Been at Odds with State

NEW YORK (AP) — In the long view of history, clergymen repeatedly have come into conflict with state authority and been accused of crimes. But it is a relatively new phenomenon in the United States.

Only in the last decade has it become a frequent occurrence for them to land in prison. The turning point was the civil rights effort of the early 1960s.

Since then, hundreds of U.S. priests, ministers and seminarians have gone to jail, briefly or for longer terms, both in the civil rights struggle and in resistance to the Vietnam war.

But the new federal indictment Tuesday again three priests, a nun, a former priest and a layman, accusing them of a kidnap-bombing plot, is probably the gravest of recent cases against professional religious personnel.

"Historically, arresting clergymen and even executing them is not especially unusual," said Rev. Robert Trisco, a church historian of the Catholic University of America.

"But the action with which these people are charged does seem to be quite a rare case of its kind in this country."

Besides the six charged with plotting to kidnap presidential aide Henry A. Kissinger and to blow up heating systems in federal buildings in Washington in opposition to the war, seven others were named co-conspirators but not defendants. These included another priest, three nuns and a former priest.

Although many other Roman Catholic and Protestant ministers have been prosecuted lately, most of these cases have involved passive resistance or impersonal acts of violence, such as destruction of draft files.

In a series of these draft-raid cases across the U.S.—in Washington, D.C., Milwaukee, Catonsville, Md., Baltimore and Chicago—at least 15 clergymen have been imprisoned, and two others remain fugitives.

Scores of other clergymen have gone to jail for varying periods in protests against the war or in demonstrations in behalf of blacks or the poor, especially in the 1960s, when busloads of clergy and seminarians sometimes went to jail in civil rights upheavals.

The late Dr. Martin Luther King was jailed 21 times before being assassinated.

Another repeater, Rev. James Groppi of Milwaukee, has been arrested numerous times, once serving a short jail term for leading a mass incursion of the Wisconsin state assembly to protest cuts in welfare payments

In a different sort of clash with the government, Rabbi Meir D. Kahane, leader of a campaign to harass Soviet representatives in the United States in protest against treatment of Jews in Russia, was arrested in New York this week and freed on bail.

In other lands in the modern era, both Christian and Jewish leaders have come under more severe charges, including a Roman Catholic bishop sentenced to death Jan. 6 in the Cameroon, West Africa, for an alleged role in a plot to assassinate the president. His death sentence has been commuted to life imprisonment.

Other clergy have faced expulsion, or prison in Rhodesia, South Africa and Latin America.

Anglican Synod To Pick Primate

TORONTO (CP) — When the General Synod of the Anglican Church of Canada meets in Niagara Falls, Ont., later this month, one of its most important jobs will be to elect a new primate-top man in the Canadian church's hierarchy.

The new primate, succeeding Archbishop Howard H. Clark who retired in August after 11 years in the office, will preside over the General Synod and the national executive council.

He will be chosen in an age-old voting procedure from among 34 eligible bishops by the 298 men and women delegates, representing clergy and laity, at the Jan. 25-Feb. 2 synod meeting.

Among those mentioned as among the five most likely successors is the 66-year-old acting primate, Archbishop William L. Wright of Algoma, who lives in Sault Ste. Marie.

He has been a priest for 43 years and a bishop for 26.

George B. Snell, 63, Bishop of Toronto and another member of the national executive council, is a possible successor to Archbishop Clark. He served as a Dean in Calgary and in 1953 was appointed Archdeacon of Toronto. He was consecrated in 1956

Although all active bishops in Canada under 70 are eligible for nomination, some have so recently been appointed that it is unlikely they would be nominated. Others in poor health would make it known they could not carry the extra responsibilities.

ST. ANDREW'S WMS

The January meeting of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Women's Missionary Society was held in the Sunday School auditorium. The meeting was preceded by a pot-luck luncheon presided over by the president, Mrs. W. Clendenan.

Following the luncheon Rev. A. L. Sutherland led in the devotional period and gave an inspiring and thought provoking address.

During the business portion Mrs. H. Elvidge, on behalf of the auxiliary, presented a life membership and pin to Miss L. Burnside. This was in recognition of excellent leadership during the past two years. In turn Miss Burnside expressed appreciation to the members.

Many items of business were discussed and it was decided to have a Valentine tea on Feb. 10.

Mrs. Clendenan closed the meeting.

EASTMINSTER UCW

Eastminster United Church Women held the first meeting of 1971 last Monday evening which opened with a devotional service conducted by Doreen Throop and Jean Belch. Musical accompaniment for this portion was rendered by Evelyn Throop at the piano.

Marta Wishart presided over a short business period during which time Vivian Britton read the minutes of the last general meeting and Trudy Shugg, as treasurer, gave the financial report.

Peggy Cameron introduced the guest speaker Mrs. Rosie Persard who recently returned from Trinidad and now a teacher at the William R. Kirk School. Mrs. Persard who was born in Trinidad gave a short talk about life there and illustrated it with a display of post cards.

The ensuing question and answer period was enjoyed by all, and the speaker was extended a vote of thanks by president Wishart.

Refreshments were served by the Emerald Group.

Next meeting will be held March 9 at which time the Silver Group will be hosts.

CANNIFTON-CORBYVILLE WI

Mrs. Ralph Sills, district and area curator displayed the history book she had compiled for her own branch of the WI as well as the book for the district during the recent meeting of the Cannifton - Corbyville WI held recently at the WI hall. Mrs. Sills also outlined the procedure to follow in laying out the book and answered members' questions on the subject. She explained that involvement, interest and patience were necessary in seeking out sources of information about the past. Mrs. Sills is now very much involved in tracing family trees. This too needs the help of many people.

Earlier, Mrs. Sills was introduced by Mrs. Meale who was in charge of the program in the absence of Mrs. C. Avery. After the talk, Mrs. Sills was thanked by Mrs. Meale who also presented her with a gift on behalf of all the members.

The meeting which was attended by 13 members and one guest was chaired by the president, Mrs. Ellsworth. Lunch was served at the close of the meeting and a social time was enjoyed by all.

GLOBAL HOUSEKEEPING

"By 1980, we'll have to wear some kind of mask when we go out . . . ." - Betty Ann Ottinger.

Of interest to Belleville, Hastings County, Prince Edward County and environs was a recent anti-pollution seminar to which representatives from these districts were invited to attend. It was co-sponsored by Loyalist College and the Quinte Labor Council, and held at Loyalist College under chairmanship of William Babbitt.

This resulted in the formation, in November, of a Belleville Antipollution Committee to deal with the pollution problem in the Belleville area and membership is open to the public.

Pollution, being a non-respecter of persons or nations, is a growing concern, whereby such committees are being formed from coast to coast, to aid communities in becoming ecologically aware.

Members are taking an active part. Such as Betty Ann Ottinger (a young housewife and mother, wife of a poltical figure in the United States), holder of a master's degree in social work. A regular dynamo and articulate in the anti-pollution movement, she has written a small handbook with a serious message: "What Every Woman Should Know — and Do — About Pollution: A guide to Good Global Housekeeping"

Among the suggestions she makes are:

"Water: Don't waste it by letting water run until it gets cold; keep a bottle of drinking water in the refrigerator. Use dishwater infrequently, waiting until you have a full load. Don't pollute water. Use detergents with the lowest phosphate content. Don't flush filter-tip cigarettes down the toile, the cellulose fibres live forever, so does the dye in colored tissues.

Cans, bottles, wastepaper are also harmful. One of the greatest new polluters is the glass-like container used for shampoos and mouthwashes, which is made of polyvinyl chloride. When burned it produces corrosive and lethal hydrochloric acid. The book suggests boycotting it, or buying large sizes of the products, in glass, and refilling the plastic bottle for convenience.

Nonreturnable bottles are great waste producers. Agitate for the soft-drink bottle that can be returned, and buy only products in returnable bottles. Buy large sizes of canned juices or cereals; large cans or cartons create less waste than a lot of small ones.

Use covered refrigerator dishes instead of aluminum or plastic wrap. Don't use paper napkins, cups, plates or plastic spoons. Return metal hangers to the dry cleaner. Shop as European women do, with your own string bag.

Outdoors: Don't burn leaves or grass cuttings; mulch or compost them. Beware of DDT and pest killers. A bird or harmless garden snake can destroy many insects. Pull out weeds instead of using chemicals. The exercise will do you good.

Automobiles: Think in terms of small cars, instead of big ones. Buy unleaded gasoline. Better yet, bicycle or walk. Carry a burlap bag for trash, don't litter the countryside."

Above all, Mrs. Ottinger urges women to form pressure groups to influence industry and governments.

"As long as you keep the heat on, they'll change," she says. "But if you stop, they stop."

Club Activities

PARENTS WITHOUT PARTNERS

Belle - Trent Chapter

Five prospective members were welcomed by the Amigo committee at the January 7 meeting of the Belle - Trent chapter of Parents Without Partners held in Queen Alexandra School at 7.30 p.m. Anyone wishing to join the chapter is asked to contact the club through the listed phone number.

The nominating committee for the forthcoming elections was selected. The Belle-Trent chapter will host the EORC meeting to be held on March 6 and 7 at the Park Dale community centre in Belleville. This is considered a big step forward by the members.

Over coffee and cookies a discussion was held on what children of all ages like to do in the way of activities. All ideas put forward were recorded for future reference. The club newsletter which contains a calender of coming events was distributed. During the past year the membership has increased by 50 per cent.

In 1972 the Toronto chapter will host the international parents without partners conference. It will be the first one to be held in Canada and all Canadian chapters are co-operating to make it the most successful conference ever held.

MR. AND MRS. DAVID PRESTON

Preston — Long

Olivia Alma Long, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Long of Shannonville became the bride of David John Preston, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Preston at a ceremony conducted by Canon R. B. De Blois Wright, recently at Christ Church, Belleville. Wedding music was played by John Withers at the organ.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white crepe dress with a woven rose pattern outline. Her three-tiered veil fell from her headdress which featured a teardrop pearl on the forehead. She carried a cascade of deep pink roses.

Cyndie Mae Long, the bride's sister who was the maid of honor wore a green crepe dress with a green and pink trim of woven roses. She carried a nosegay of pink carnations. Dressed identically to the maid of honor were the bridesmaids Sheila Lynett and Marie Maksymiev. Carnation nosegays completed their costumes.

The best man was Robert Preston while the ushers were Larry Lewis and Robert Green. After the ceremony a reception was held at the Masonic Temple.

The bride's mother chose a dress of green antique satin and a corsage of talisman pink roses. The bridegroom's mother's ensemble consisted of a jacket and long-sleeved dress of beige lace. She wore a corsage of talisman pink roses.

The newly married couple left for their wedding trip to a ski resort in Quebec, the bride in a gold pant suit. Upon return they will reside in Toronto.

Grandpa Makes A Fine Suggestion

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just read the letter asking what has happened to the old fashioned grandma who used to be so important in the lives of young children and it started me thinking. I agree with the person who wrote. Grandparents of young children can add a lot to the life of a child. May I make a suggestion?

If children don't have a grandma or a grandpa in their own family they might try adopting one from the old people's home. Thousands of old folks sit day after day. They never get any company. Weeks pass and they never even receive a card or letter. No one cares about them. These old people would love to have some youngster come to visit — someone they could tell stories to. Old folks enjoy talking — and they have so much to tell. A visit with a make-believe grandpa can be lots of fun. So please, Ann Landers, publish my letter. It could bring so much sunshine into the lives of so many old folks — and young ones, too. — SACRAMENTO GRANDPA.

DEAR GRAMP: Thank you for a beautiful suggestion. Someone, somewhere is going to be happier because you wrote.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This friend of mine, I'll call her Celia, has an odd sense of humor. By that I mean she is always making jokes at someone else's expense. For some reason she does not like my boyfriend. Rollie is a swell guy but he's about an inch shorter than I am and quite thin. This does not bother me at all, but it seems to bother Celia.

Last week Celia asked me if I would go to a movie with her. I told her I had a date with Rollie. She answered, "Oh that little runt. I'll bet I weigh more than he does." This made me mad and I said, "O.K., it's a bet." That minute Rollie came by and Celia blurted out, "We were just talking about you. We have a bet on how much you weigh." Rollie looked hurt and embarrassed. He said nothing and walked on.

I am sick about this because he probably thinks I was out to humiliate him. Please tell me what to do. Rollie has avoided me since that day and I feel terrible. — LONESOME FOR HIM.

DEAR L.F.H.: The next time you see Rollie tell him you are sorry about the incident and you hope he will forget it. Don't go into detail about who said what. Just say it was a bad scene and you are unhappy about it. Between us girls, Celia sounds like a creep. You need some new friends.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Grapefruit Marmalade

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: When I was in cooking school ('m too cagey to tell you how long ago) my greatest success was marmalade we were taught to make from one grapefruit, one orange and one lemon. That recipe is long gone but my husband and I are left alone as all of our children are married so I have time to do some jam making. Are you familiar with the recipe I refer to? I think other readers would appreciate seeing it in your column at this time of year. Anna McK.

ANSWER: I do too, so here is the old favorite.

G-L-O MARMALADE

(economical and easy)

One grapefruit, 1 lemon, 2 oranges. Cut in half to squeeze out the juice and pulp on a lemon squeezer. Put the peel through a food chopper twice, using finest disc or blade, add to the juice and measure. Put into a large pan and for each cup of prepared fruit add 2 cups cold water. Let stand overnight. Boil moderately for ½ hour, remove from stove and measure again. There should be about 6 cups. For each cup of cooked fruit add 1½ cups of granulated sugar. Stir over low heat with wooden spoon until all sugar is dissolved, bring to boil, stir often for about 30 minutes, then test for set. An easy way is to remove pan from heat and put a spoonful on a saucer and place in freezer part of refrigerator until cold; if cooked enough it will set softly; if not, boil until a soft set is obtained. Pour into hot jars and seal with hot paraffin. Cover and label. This is cheap, quick and good.

QUESTION: Please reprint your winter chili sauce. Miriam W.

ANSWER:

(using canned tomatoes)

Two 28-oz. cans best quality tomatoes (drained), two 6-oz. cans tomato paste, 2 green peppers, 4 medium cooking onions, 6 large outer celery stalks with leaves, ½ to ¾ cup sugar, 2 tsps. salt, ¾ cup vinegar, 2 tbsps. mixed pickling spices. Into heavy kettle measure the tomatoes from which excess juice has been drained to shorten boiling period. Chop and add the peppers, onions and celery. Add vinegar and salt and sugar and spices tied in bag. Bring to boil and stir frequently to prevent sticking. Boil gently ½ hour. Add tomato paste and boil ½ hour longer. Remove spice bag. Pour into 3 sterilized pint jars and seal.

Trembleuse Considered Rare Antique Item

Chocolate as a drink was introduced to Europe about 1600. It competed with coffee and tea as a beverage and was sometimes mixed with coffee as a separate drink, mocha. When porcelain and china became popular in Europe in the middle of the 18th century cups were designed especially for the drinking of tea, coffee or chocolate.

Early tea bowls were made in imitation of Chinese originals — a small bowl without a handle that sat in a larger, shallower bowl or plate. Later tea cups were much the same shape, with handles. Special cups were designed for coffee with straight sides, called coffee cans. About 1800, sets of china were made with two sets of cups, one for coffee, one for tea, with one set of saucers.

In the early 18th century, special covered cups were designed for chocolate. During the reign of Louis XV, a period that covered the middle 50 years of the century, yet another type of cup and saucer was developed, called the trembleuse.

The trembleuse is ideal for anyone with a shaky hand. A straight-sided or tapered cup is set in a well in a very deep saucer. In Louis XV's day it was the practice to receive the court while in bed. The daily levee was an important event and usually involved some eating and drinking.

It was also the practice of court ladies to receive in their boudoirs, both publicly and privately. Sometimes the guests stood and sometimes they sat. Eating and drinking arrangements were much more haphazard and they did not always eat from tables. If the guest or host was the least bit shaky, either from age, debility or the previous night's entertainment, the trembleuse prevented chocolate or tea or coffee from being spilled on clothing or linen. In the days before dry-cleaning, removal of a stain was frequently impossible.

The trembleuse passed out of fashion about the time shallow wells were formed in saucers. This change was universal before the middle of the 19th century. The trembleuse became a collector's item, in fact so rare that although examples may be found, the trembleuse is hardly ever listed in any antique directory and very few come up for sale.

Recently the trembleuse has been revived and although a reproduction, is a larger size and design than the majority of early trembleuses. One of the remarkable aspects of the present day reproduction is the price. The pattern in the foreground retails for $32.50, about the price of a cup and saucer in the original design in fair condition. The pattern in the background retails for $82.50 and the most expensive in the series is $165, a price that is certain to go up if the trembleuse is discontinued again. That pretty well guarantees the trembleuse will be looked at rather than used.

The Reminiscing of Days Gone By

By DORIS CLARK

DORIS CLARK

A middle-aged couple went for a ride in the country. He was driving and she was dreamily reminiscing.

Finally, she spoke. "Dear, remember when we were first married, how close together we used to sit in the car?

A twinkle in his eye, her husband said, "I haven't moved." — Modern Maturity.

I hope she took the hint and moved over.

• • •

Dear Doris: At school the girls are not allowed to wear pant suits. Our teachers say we will slouch or start wearing grubby pants.

Most of the parents agree to pant suits for we have asked them. Our parents say pants are better than wearing a short dress where you see everything.

We even got a petition up about it which both boys and girls signed but our principal won't budge. — Senior Elementary School.

Dear School: Can you say for sure your pant suits would always be clean, neat, in good taste? There's the rub!

The students who would go off the deep end with old, tight, frayed jeans — the kind you wash the car in — spoil it for the rest of you. There is nothing nicer than a neat pair of clean well-fitted pants, with jacket to match. We see them now on the streets, in offices, even in clinic uniforms. Evening styles include some elegant trouser-legged outfits.

Canadian dress and pant fashions are in a state of transition, and that's for sure. I'd hate to be a school principal and have to lay down the law about it.

• • •

Dear Doris: At 20, I have the biggest persecution complex this world has ever known. I am now considering poisoning myself so everybody can feel really sorry for me.

Because any sex was taboo I was very up tight when guys came near me. To get rid of my extreme anxiety I went to bed and lost my virginity not too long ago. I also smoked grass that same night.

I have come to believe that the sky is the limit and have started taking small things from people and stores, leading guys on to make them take me to bed, stealing traffic signs.

Maybe my world fell through when I realized my parents are not always right and aren't sure about everything either. I'm afraid I might do something very irrational and that I'll be sorry for. — Doomed.

Dear Doomed: Trouble with suicide — apart from the fact that in Canada it is a criminal act — is that you won't be around to watch people feel sorry. And mostly their pity will be mixed with real puzzlement about what was bothering you.

A girl that will put her thoughts down and ask for help has a glimmering of hope that help is to be had. Help to sort out her thinking; to get back on the beam and decide between right and wrong. And even the most enlightened parents are just people, mere humans who don't have all the answers.

Person-to-person counselling can and will help you — far more than the long-distance type you get from me. Seek it at the Family and Children's Services of Hastings County, 311 Front Street, Belleville.

• • •

(When writing in, allow Doris four weeks for private reply, which will be sent if a six-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed.)

A REMINDER

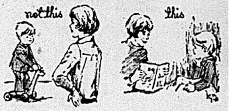
Wedding forms for write-ups are available at The Intelligencer and should be completed and returned BEFORE the ceremony so a report can be published immediately after the wedding.

Pictures may be submitted by your photographer up to three days after the wedding. We cannot publish wedding write-ups submitted later than six days after the date of the ceremony.

Accounts of showers and entertainments in honor of the bride do not belong with a wedding write-up and should be sent in immediately after they are held, for publication separately.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Small children usually dawdle over getting ready for bed until parents — eager to relax — are exasperated, and the restful evening is spoiled. The dawdling seems most acute when parents are looking forward to a special TV program or want to get ready for guests.

A child resents being rushed to bed simply because parents want to relax. Start him on preparations early enough so there will be time for a leisurely bedtime story or chat. He will be ready in half the time if he can anticipate a pleasure of his own.

It takes calmness, patience and ingenuity to end a child's day on a quiet, peaceful note. However, it can be done and parents and child will benefit.

Brazilian Revolutionaries Claim Tortures Commonplace

SANTIAGO (AP) — Nancy Mangabeira Unger was a pupil in a New York parochial school a decade ago. Today she is a revolutionary, her thumb removed by a police bullet, one of 70 prisoners flown to Chile as ransom for the kidnapped Swiss ambassador to Brazil.

Held in a Chilean government dormitory before the release today in Brazil of Ambassador Giovanni Enrico Bucher, she and the others told Friday of physical and psychological torture in prison.

"I was never tortured physically," Miss Unger, 22, said. "I think that was because I was so sick.

"My case had already been in the newspapers. The police were afraid I would die."

Miss Unger was shot in the thumb, the lungs and liver during her arrest last summer. Police said she belonged to a group planning to kidnap a U.S. diplomat and had been involved in bank robberies. She allegedly shot a policeman during her arrest.

After 45 days and three operations, she said, she was turned over to DOPS, the security police.

"There was horrible psychological torture," she said. "even in the hospital the police would keep coming in, threatening to torture me. . . .

"They were asking me all about subversive activities, people and plots."

The daughter of an American father, Miss Unger said representatives of the U.S. consulate visited her in Brazilian prisons but that no representatives have seen her since the prisoners arrived in Santiago early Thursday.

"Brazil is a country where there is no liberty or justice," Miss Unger said. "Anyone in Brazil who has any idea against the government is almost certain to be put in prison."

Another former prisoner, Jean Marc von der Vair, a Swiss-Brazilian, read a three-page statement of principles that he said reflected the thinking of all 70. It vowed: "We who were born revolutionaries will die as revolutionaries." The paper said that a man named Eduardo Leite was tortured in Sao Paulo jail until he died.

"They took out his eyes," it said.

Mingling with reporters in gardens outside the yellow-brick dormitory, many of the 59 men and 11 women told of such tortures as electric shocks, beatings and punctured eardrums. Several displayed scars on legs and arms they said were caused by police and soldiers under the guidance of DOPS agents.

"This is why the kidnappings continue," said Antonio Expedito Perera, a lawyer.

"As for me, they hung me by the feet. Later they attached electrical connections to . . . all the sensitive parts of my body. My body was kept wet so the shocks hurt more.

"One time they brought my wife in to see how I had been tortured. They disrobed her completely." He said she also was tortured.

A Dominican priest, Tito de Alencar, said he was whipped with bamboo sticks and his ears were cuffed, apparently to harm his eardrums. He said the government is carrying out religious persecution against the Dominicans "because we are together with the people."

Sixty persons exchanged by the government for three victims of political kidnappings during the last 15 months made similar claims of torture, but the Brazilian government denied that torture is practised in its jails. The government gave medical examinations to the 70 prisoners before flying them to Chile to back up its position.

Hawks Could Help Bowman Avenge Western All-star Defeat

BOSTON (CP) — A year ago, Scotty Bowman was happy with the effort he got from the West Division team he coached in the annual National Hockey League All-Star game, but he was stung by the beating his team took.

"Those guys played their hearts out for me," Bowman said in the dressing room after the East had beaten his West squad 4-1 in the game at St. Louis.

The loss prompted Bowman to look forward to 1971 when the West Division would be strengthened with the transfer of Chicago Black Hawks from the East.

"There'll be a difference next year," Bowman predicted. "Bobby Hull and Tony Esposito will be on our side then."

Bowman has since vacated the post of coach with St. Louis Blues, defending West Division champions, but he leaves his general manager's desk to return to the West bench for Tuesday night's All-Star encounter here and a chance to coach Hull and Esposito.

The game will be televised on the CBC national network beginning at 8:30 p.m. EST.

This will be the third all-star fixture in which East meets West. In the first such divisional clash at Montreal in 1969, the teams played to a 3-3 tie.

Bowman and his West team have had their chances improved considerably this year with the addition of not only Hull and Esposito, but also seven other Hawk stars.

Along with Hull, Chicago's bullet-shooting left wing, and Esposito, the 1970 all-star goalie, rookie of the year and Vezina Trophy-winner, the Hawks are represented by defencemen Pat Stapleton, Keith Magnuson and Bill White, centres Stan Mikita and Pit Martin, right wing Chico Maki and left wing Dennis Hull, Bobby's brother.

Esposito, whose brother, Phil, is playing for the East team, will share the West goaltending with Ernie Wakely of St. Louis, one of five Blues named to the squad. The other St. Louis players are defenceman Barclay Plager, centre Red Berenson, and right wings Gary Sabourin and Tim Ecclestone. Sabourin was named as a replacement for Pittsburgh Penguins' Ken Schinkel, out with a cracked collarbone.

Boston Bruins and New York Rangers, staging a red-hot race at the top of the East Dvision, dominate the East squad. Each team has six players on the team.

Boston's contingent is headed by Phil Esposito and Bobby Orr, the sensational 1-2 scoring punch that fired the Bruins to the Stanley Cup last spring.

Other Bruins named were defenceman Dallas Smith, left wing John Bucyk and right wings Ken Hodge and Johnny McKenzie.

The East's goaltending will be divided by New York's Ed Giacomin and Gilles Villemure, the NHL's leading goalie tandem over the first half of the season.

The other Rangers selected to the team were defencemen Brad Park and Jim Neilson, left wing Dave Balon and centre Jean Ratelle.

The remaining members of the East All-Stars are defenceman J. C. Tremblay, right wing Yvan Cournoyer and left wingers Frank and Pete Mahovlich of Montreal Canadiens; right wing Gordie Howe of Detroit Red Wings; centre Dave Keon of Toronto Maple Leafs; centre Gil Perreault of Buffalo Sabres; and defenceman Dale Tallon of Vancouver Canucks.

The East squad will be coached by Harry Sinden, who piloted the Bruins to the Stanley Cup last spring before quitting to go into private industry.

Cooke Guesses Fight Gross At $35 Million

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sports entrepeneur Jack Kent Cooke—with Muhammad Ali at his side—estimated Friday that Ali's March 8 fight in New York's Madison Square Garden with Joe Frazier for the world heavyweight boxing title will gross in the neighborhood of $35 million.

But the Canadian-born Cooke hastened to add at the news conference:

"There is a vast difference in the gross and the net."

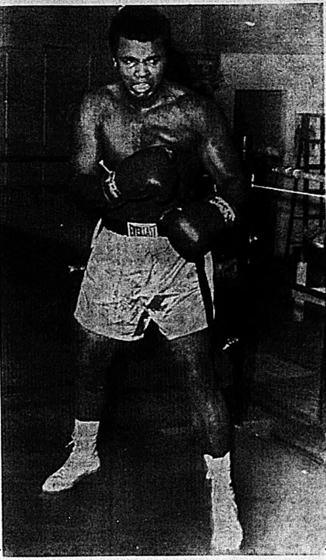
The same applies to the $2.5 million each he and his partner in the worldwide closed circuit screening of the fight, young Jerry Perenchio, have guaranteed to Ali and Frazier. He referred primarily to taxes of the fighters' purses.

Ali's main reason for being here was to attend a dinner-sponsored by the Los Angeles Brotherhood Crusade at which he was the guest of honor. Proceeds go to needy black causes.

Muhammad disclosed he has temporarily disengaged himself from the Black Muslims because, he said, the religion and fighting don't mix. Once his boxing days are over, he said he would return to the sect.

He was asked to give "an honest" appraisal of Frazier untainted with buildup ballyhoo.

"Joe Frazier is a good, rough fighter, not a boxer. He's strong, takes a lot of punches and wears his opponents out in the first few rounds." Ali answered, and later in his discourse added: "While he's trying to get to me I'll be hittin' him with jabs, jabs. Now you'll see who is the real champion. Joe is another amateur compared to me."



Getting Serious

Muhammed Ali, talking and shadow boxing started training for his title fight with Joe Frazier, Thursday ,at Miami Beach, Fla. Weighing in at 222 pounds, Ali said: "I never wanted to whup anybody so bad." "I'll be sharp and readier than I ever have," Ali predicted. The Ali-Frazier bout is scheduled March 8 in New Yorks' Madison Square Garden. (AP Wirephoto)

Hextall Gives Glover Rare Reason to Smile

By IAN MacLAINE

Canadian Press Staff Writer

If Fred Glover has any reason to smile, and the occasions are few, it has to be the coup that brought Dennis Hextall to California Golden Seals.

The 28-year-old centre from Winnipeg gave his National Hockey League coach more reason to chuckle Friday night, scoring the winning goal in a 3-1 victory over New York Rangers.

The loss, in the only game scheduled, prevented the Rangers from moving into first place in the East Division ahead of Boston Bruins. The Golden Seals, with their 13th victory, continue to occupy the West basement with 29 points, one less than Los Angeles Kings.

Hextall, a rugged performer who never quite caught on with New York, Los Angeles or Montreal, was purchased outright from the Canadiens last July for an undisclosed amount of cash.

In parts of two seasons with New York and Los Angeles he totalled the unimpressive record of six goals and 17 points before winding up as a Montreal Voyageur in a trade that sent Dick Duff to the Kings.

Son of former NHL great Bryan Hextall, Dennis appeared destined for minor-pro stardom until Glover plucked him from the Montreal system.

DENNIS HEXTALL

The biology graduate of the University of North Dakota was an immediate success with California. The game-winning goal Friday, his 14th of the year, came in the first period and snapped a 1-1 tie, ending a Ranger win streak at six games.

Goalie Gary Smith, whose brilliance enabled the Californians to salvage a 1-1 tie in Toronto Wednesday night, was again instrumental in the Seals' win, turning aside 38 shots.

Meanwhile, the Red Wings have lost recently-acquired winger Mickey Redmond with a sprained right ankle. Redmond, injured in Detroit's 2-2 tie with Buffalo Thursday, was playing his first game in a Red Wing uniform.

He was part of a trade that included Bill Collins and Guy Charron to Detroit from Montreal in exchange for Frank Mahovlich.

Another injury victim, Bryan Watson, was replaced in the Pittsburgh lineup Friday by Yvon Labre. Watson fractured a leg Thursday and is expected to be out the rest of the season.

Orr Sues

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Boston Bruins hockey star Bobby Orr filed a $100,000 suit in U.S. district court Friday against Pasquale F. Alosa of Concord and Robert K. Orr of Gilford, charging damages to his name, reputation and "good will."

The suit stems from a restaurant name registered with the New Hampshire secretary of state. The name, "Bobby Orr's Eating Place," was registered by the two men Sept. 14, 1970.

Orr's lawyers, Robert Upton and John Graf, both of Manchester, charged the New Hampshire men used Orr's name "with intent to mislead or deceive" the public into believing Orr was associated with their enterprise.

Orr, the hockey player, recently opened two restaurants in Toronto, both under the name of "Bobby Orr's Pizza."

NHL Leaders

Jean Ratelle of New York Rangers scored his 19th goal of the season as the Rangers were defeated 3-1 by California Golden Seals in the only National Hockey League game scheduled Friday night.

Unitas Pits Passing Skills Against Football's Big Preventers

MIAMI (AP) — Johnny Unitas pits his passing magic against one of pro football's mightiest preventive forces Sunday as Baltimore Colts and Dallas Cowboys square off in the fifth Super Bowl, a potentially-perfect match of contrasting styles and attitudes.

The crusading Colts, led by Unitas, take on the rejuvenated Cowboys, spearheaded by a virtually impregnable defence, before an audience that figures to be largest in United States sports history.

A capacity Orange Bowl crowd of 80,000 and another 64 million NBC television viewers are expected to watch the National Football League championship bout, which unfolds at 2 p.m. EST, in balmy Florida weather.

The CBC will also televise nationally the game between the American and National conference champions starting at 2 o'clock.

At stake are $15,000 payoffs per-man to the winners and the Vince Lombardi Trophy.

"I'd be a liar if I said the money didn't mean a lot in this game," said Dallas tackle Ralph Neely.

"It does. But it means a great deal more than that. This is the game. This is as high as you can go in professional football. If we win this, we're the best."

The summit clash is the first without the overtones of AFL-NFL rivalry. Both finalists are old-line NFL clubs, the Colts having shifted to the realigned American Conference this past season.

The Colts, who beat Oakland Raiders 27-17 two weeks ago for their sixth straight victory and the AFC title, are bent on atoning for their stunning 16-7 loss to New York Jets in Super Bowl two years ago.

The Cowboys feel they already have proven they can win the big games—by winning seven in a row, including a 17-10 verdict over San Francisco '49ers for the NFC pennant, to end a 10-year title famine. Their pre-Super Bowl training camp has had a carefree atmosphere.

In Sunday's showdown—which will be played to a sudden death finish if necessary—it will be Unitas, 37-year-old opportunist with a penchant for the sudden, long strike, going against a Dallas defensive unit that has given up just one touchdown in six games.

"Anytime you have a quarterback like Unitas, you fear the bomb more than anything," Cowboys coach Tom Landry said Friday. "Almost everybody gets beat deep at one time or another, and he's the guy who can put the ball there when it happens."

Unitas sat out most of the 1968 season with arm troubles before mounting a touchdown drive in relief of Super Bowl starter Earl Morrall against the Jets.

In another battle within the war, the Cowboys' league-leading rushing attack, paced by powerful rookie Duane Thomas and Walt Garrison, will be trying to control the ball against the aggressive Baltimore defenders, whose forte is forcing the turnover.

Landry said Garrison, hobbled by a chipped collarbone and sprained ankle, would start "but is only about 75 per cent."

If the Colts contain the Dallas ground-gainers, they'll force quarterback Craig Morton, erratic in the playoffs because of injuries, to go to the air—with Bob Hayes his primary target.

"I just hope we can shut off their running game, our offence can put some points on the board and they have to change their game plan," said Bubba Smith, the Colts' mammoth defensive end. "Then we'll just have to get to Morton."

The Colts' running game, which jelled in mid-season with the development of rugged rookie Norm Bulaich, must contend with big Bob Lilly and his cronies up front in the Doomsday Defence.

Baltimore points are more likely to come from Unitas and a gifted receiving crew paced by Eddie Hinton and Roy Jefferson.

Don McCafferty, the Colts' first-year head coach, hopes the points come early.

"We'd love to break on top," he soid. "We've had trouble doing that this year. If they have ball control and we're not stopping them it'd be good to have those early points."

Toronto Wants Ball

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says the CNE's board of directors has approved plans for a $12-million to $16-million modification of Exhibition Park stadium in an effort to attract big-league baseball.

The plans, prepared by A. D. Margison Associates Ltd., represent an updated version of plans drafted in 1965 for an $8-million horseshoe shaped extension of the stadium.

The Globe and Mail says the plans have been sent to Metropolitan Toronto council's stadium committee for further study.

The revised plans, says the newspaper, would add 27,000 seats to the 33,000-seat stadium owned by the municipality. It says the board feels the enlarged open-air stadium would serve the community for the seven- to 10-year period required to complete a proposed 65,000-seat domed stadium at the north end Downsview airport.

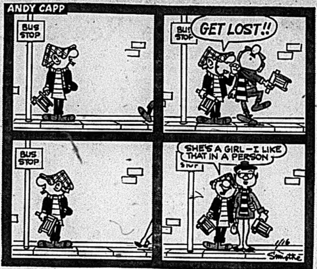
The design, says the Globe and Mail, favors four sports—baseball, football, soccer and track and field. The immediate objective, says the newspaper, would be to redesign the field to allow Toronto to negotiate for a major league baseball franchise.

The Stadium serves as the home field for Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Football Conference who recently negotiated a new five-year contract for use of the grounds.

Clair Dealing For Duncan

OTTAWA (CP) — General manager Frank Clair of Ottawa Rough Riders said today that he is trying to make a deal with Winnipeg Blue Bombers for full back Dennis Duncan.

Clair said in an interview from the Houston general managers meeting that he has been in touch with Winnipeg football officials on a possible deal.



Sport Briefs

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — Former heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson buried Levi Forte under a barrage of punches Friday night, twice sending him through the ropes before scoring a second-round knockout. A crowd of 6,000 cheered wildly as Patterson decked Forte twice before finally ending the mismatch. "I will fight Oscar Bonavena in New York next month," said Patterson. If Patterson gets by the Argentine heavyweight, a 15th round knockout victim of Muhammad Ali last month, the aging former champ hopes to meet the victor of the Ali-Frazier bout.

FLINT, Mich. (AP) — A suspended minor league hockey player has filed a $7.5-million-dollar suit against seven defendants, including the National Hockey League, charging they violated anti-trust laws in conspiring to prevent him from playing professional hockey. The suit was filed by Jimmy Booth, 21, who was suspended by the IHL commissioner Bill Beagen in December when he failed to report to the Fort Wayne Komets of the IHL.

LONDON (Reuter) — South Africa and Rhodesia were barred Friday from the 1971 Davis Cup tennis competition. Basil Reay, secretary of the Davis Cup nations, said before the draw for the emergency committee which barred South Africa from the 1970 tournament has not changed its policy. Rhodesia, which like South Africa had entered 1971 European zone of the competition that the for the 1971 European zone, could not play because "about 23 nations in Europe are unable to accept a visit from a team from Rhodesia because of the United Nations ruling," Reay said.

Palmer's Charge Steals Show

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Arnold Palmer's finishing charge, missing when he needed it most lately, is once again stealing the show on the professional golf tour.

The 41-year-old Pennsylvanian treated his huge gallery to seven straight holes of spectacular shots Friday, producing six birdies, and posted a four-under-par 68 that put him one stroke from the leaders after two rounds of the $135,000 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am tournament.

"I liked that back nine," said Palmer, after complaining about a lack of consistency in his game on the opening holes of the 6,972-yard Spyglass Hill course. He went out in 37 and came back in 31 and finished with a 36-hole total of 140.

Paul Harney, Tommy Shaw and Howie Johnson shared the tourney lead, at 139. Bobby Nichols and Bob Murphy were tied with Palmer.

Play continues on three courses today. The field of 168 pros will be cut to the low 70 for Sunday's final round, and only 33 pro-am teams will remain after the cut.

Toronto's George Knudson fired his second round of 72 and at 144 was tied with seven others, five strokes back of the leaders. Al Balding, also of Toronto, had a 75 and 36-hole total of 152.

Palmer needed only one putt per green on hole 11 through 17 Friday, with the longest an 18-footer for his bird on No. 17. He parred No. 13 by coming out of a trap and sinking an eight-foot putt.

Chuck Courtney had the best round of the tourney, a 67, and was with Miller Barber, George Archer and Dave Eichelberger at 143.

Jack Nicklaus shot a 75 and was at 147, while Billy Casper faded to 150 with a 78.

Betsy Heads Back to Slopes

OTTAWA (CP) — Betsy Clifford, one of Canada's brightest hopes for world ski honors, left for Europe Friday night to rejoin her teammates on Canada's national ski team.

"I don't know what all the fuss was about," she said in an airport interview about her sudden departure from the team last week.

"I just needed a rest."

She was reported as having quit skiing at the time. But a day later, after talking it over with her family at nearby Camp Fortune, Que., it was announced she would rejoin the team for slalom events in Austria next Thursday.

Betsy, a four-year veteran of the ski team although only 17, confirmed reports she won't compete in downhill events for a time at least. She wants to concentrate on slalom and giant slalom.

"And that's my decision," she said.

There had been some criticism voiced of coach Peter Franzen's handling of Betsy but she pointed out that she hadn't spoken to any reporters up to this interview.

"Anyway, it's his fault," she said.

"He keeps saying the same things. I don't know if I need a coach or not."

One Step too Many Costs Braves Ball

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Buffalo Braves lost the ball when Mike Davis stepped out of bounds with the National Basketball Association game tied at 97-97 in overtime Detroit Pistons won when Jimmy Walker capitalized on the miscue and threw in a 20-footer at the 18-second mark for a 99-97 Detroit win.

It was close all the way. The game was tied at each of the quarters and at 93 at the end of regulation on Buffalo Bob Kauffman's basket with four seconds remaining.

Just as close in the extra period, Walker hit a foul shot to give Buffalo a 97-95 lead, and Detroit's Bob Lanier knotted it once more with two foul shots.

It set the stage for Walker's game-winner, the only Detroit field goal of the overtime.

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Boston Celtics 134, Atlanta Hawks 123; Philadelphia '76ers 99, Chicago Bulls 96; Milwaukee Bucks 135, Cincinnati Royals 116 and Baltimore Bullets 124, San Diego Rockets 117.

Walker's 19 points led Detroit while Kauffman took game-high honors, scoring 28 for the Braves.

John Havlicek, Jo Jo White and rookie Dave Cowens combined for 78 points in leading Boston's victory. Havlicek had 27, White 26 and Cowens 25, while the Celts' defence forced Atlanta into 19 turnovers in the first three periods.

Philadelphia blew all but one point of a 13-point lead, but held on to defeat Chicago. Hal Greer scored 23 points for the winners.

Milwaukee had a 21-4 burst at the start of the third period, starting the Bucks toward a Royal rout. The spurt, led by Bob Dandridge and Jon McGlocklin, lifted Milwaukee from a 65-57 led to an 81-61 advantage.

Earl Monroe connected for seven straight points in the final three minutes, leading Baltimore over San Diego, the Rockets fifth straight loss. Jack Marin led the Bullets with 29 points while Monroe and Gus Johnson added 27 for the winners. Elvin Hayes pumped in 29 points for San Diego.

Junior Hockey Cougars Defy Book Definition

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

Websters New World Dictionary defines a cougar as "a tawny-brown animal of the cat family with a long slender body and a long tail, found from Canada to Patagonia."

The average Eastern Ontario Junior B combatant would be more likely to describe the Cougar as "a muscular, green-garbed hockey player equipped with six elbows, four knees, and the disposition of a Doberman Pincer, often found in the penalty box."

Certainly the second definition could aptly describe Cobourg Cougars in their 6-3 loss to the Belleville Fairways last night.

In addition to picking up 61 minutes in penalties, a match misconduct for a deliberate attempt to injure, a game misconduct, a major misconduct and an ordinary 10 - minute misconduct penalty, the Cougars required the intervention of a half - dozen of Belleville's Finest," following an altercation with a number of Fairway fans behind the visitors bench.

Play was halted at the 1.25 mark of the final period while a hastily summoned detachment of city police restored law and order.

Action on the ice proved to be anything but orderly as the two teams engaged in a pitched battle at the 10.13 mark of the third frame.

Ray Bevan started the melee by crashing into Belleville goalie Ron Jury, who responded with a chop across the Cobourg forward's legs. Winger Dave Smith joined the battle in aid of his netminder, while Joe Clarke and John Lunn squared off in another match.

Bevan and Lunn, along with Smith, were given the gate for the remainder of the game. Earlier in the contest, David Giles of the Cougars was banished by referee Don Ogden for a deliberate attempt to injure Rod Palmer during a second period skirmish.

Virtually lost in the cops-and-robbers action was a strong effort by Belleville in winning the key contest and some unbelievable puckstopping by Mike J. Caine in the visitors net.

Speedster Danny Lupenette opened the scoring for Belleville slamming a rebound past Caine.

Lupenette came back minutes later to set up Terry Meagher for the second goal, with the right winger snapping a 15-footer into the top left hand corner.

Meagher showed that he is well on his way to regaining his 1969-70 form that earned him fourth spot in the league scoring by tallying a second goal with a minute and two seconds remaining in the opening period.

Jury was sharp on a number of good Cobourg chances early in the middle frame, but the remainder of the period belonged entirely to Caine. The be-spectacled goalie stopped 14 of the 15 shots that he faced, including at least four almost certain goals.

His finest moments came during a stretch at the nine-minute mark, with his team playing two men short. In one series of plays, Caine kicked out a screened shot by Lupenette, smothered a hard point shot by Meagher in his chest pad, gloved a wrist shot by Meagher from point blank range and sprawled to block a rebound attempt by Joe Clarke.

Later in the frame, he slid out to stop Dave Smith's break away attempt after the right winger had been sent in alone by John Mulvihill.

Cliff Janitsch was the only Fairway marksmen to break Caine's spell, driving a shot into the top corner on a clear-cut breakaway.

John Lunn, who stuck pretty much to hockey until the third period blow-up, capped a strong performance at forward by driving a 30-footer between Jury's pads for the first Cobourg goal.

Caine continued his Houdini impersonation in the final 20 minutes stopping Meagher on two more breakaway chances. He faced a total of 45 shots in the game, while Jury was tested 28 times.

Lupenette's third period breakaway goal upped the count to 5-1 and it appeared that the home team would break things wide open.

However, the Cougars picked up considerably playing four men a side after the brawl had filled the penalty box and scores by Smith and McDonald narrowed the lead to 5-3.

Defenceman Rick Holmes notched an important tally for the winners, taking a rebound off Jury's stick and breaking into the clear to deflect a shot in off Caine and spoil any Cobourg comeback hopes. Jury's assist marked the first scoring point of the season for the Belleville goalie.

Belleville's defence played well, particularly Mulvihill, whose smooth playmaking was a big key to the Fairway attack, and Peter Ackerman, who was especially tough to beat in his own end.

The victory left Belleville two points behing Cobourg with the Fairways having played three less games.

Monday night the two teams meet in a return match in Cobourg. A bus will be leaving the Belleville Memorial Arena at 6 p.m. Monday night with some seats still avilable for interested spectators.

BRUCE CLARK

Bruce Better Late

As far as goalkeeper Bruce Clark is concerned, some things are better late than never.

Clark, rookie goalie for Belleville's Blake Kerr Imperial OMHA midgets, received word Friday he had been chosen outstanding goalkeeper of the Orillia Midget Tournament held two weeks ago.

Clark recorded two shutouts and allowed only 11 goals in the five games the Imperials played en route to winning the tourney's consolation round.

Pride of Thurlow

Key figures in Eastern Ontario Baseball Association championships won by Thurlow teams were Farley Vader and David Dent. Farley, a catcher who sported a .343 season's batting average for the Ontario finalist Foster-Thurlow Peewees, has been awarded the Mulroney's Sunoco Most Valuable Player trophy. David played first base and batted .328 in the regular season and .545 in the playoffs for Thurlow's Merchant Bantams who advanced as far as OBA semi-finals. David was awarded the Harry Hodgson Memorial Trophy as his team's most valuable member.

Nip and Tuck

Actually, their names are John Gutteridge and Joe Clark but in this puck-chasing episode during Friday night's Eastern Ontario Junior B hockey game, they were nip and tuck. Clark and his Belleville Fairways' mates stayed a step ahead of their Cobourg opponents, coming up with a hard-fought 6-3 home-ice win.

Trenton's Best Not Good Enough

TRENTON — The best effort of the season wasn't quite enough for the Trenton Golden Hawks as they dropped a 6-5 Friday decision to the powerful Oshawa Crushmen, who moved into a first place tie with Peterborough as a result of the win.

Trenton scored twice in the final period to erase a 4-2 Oshawa lead, but two deflected goals by the Crushmen in the final 10 minutes ensured the win for the visitors.

"It was our best game of the season," claimed team manager John Yott. "The boys were checking hard and covering their men well.

Jeff Howard scored in the first period for the Hawks, while Wayne McGeachy tallied in the second on a well-executed breakaway effort.

Dave Jack and Steve Barker tied things up in the third period, with Bim McFall pulling his team to within one goal after Oshawa had taken a 6-4 lead.

Trenton pulled goalie Tony Minaker with a minute remaining in the game but were unable to come up with the equalizer.

Dennis Higgins played extremely well in goal for the winners, stopping Mike Walt of the Hawks on no less than four breakaways.

Luc Charbonneau scored twice for Oshawa with single goals going to Don Hudgin, Larry Hopkins, Al Bathe and Len McAvoy.

JEFF HOWARD

Each team was assessed six penalties.

THANK YOU . . .

FOR PAYING YOUR CARRIER PROMPTLY

Collections by your Intelligencer carrier are timed to provide you convenient service and best meet his school and study schedules. He may begin collections Thursday and complete his collection on Friday, so that he can pay for his papers on Saturday morning.

Your thoughtfulness in paying him the first time he calls to collect will encourage him in giving you prompt service. It will save him extra work for which he would receive no additional profit.

It will give him more time for school and other activities . . .

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Child Discipline Difficult Subject

Are you too permissive or too strict with your children? Are you too easy? Or do you have a home where there is balanced discipline and intelligent love?

Occasionally I receive a letter from a reader that should be quite helpful to many. I am printing one which came in today's mail and I think you will agree it is as close as you can get to listening to a patient reveal her innermost thoughts to a psychiatrist:

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have just finished reading your column, and feel that I must write. The subject is child discipline — spanking in particular. Well, here is what I think about it.

My sister and I were raised in a permissive home. Our parents detested each other and each feared that if they said "no" we would side with the other. (Which, of course, we would have.)

As young children we had no curfew and played outside until lack of light and friends forced us home. I was the problem child of every class — every party — every group. Parents hated to see me arrive at their homes. My sister and I were a definite social liability.

As we grew, so did our contempt for our parents. They were both heavy drinkers by the time I reached my teens. My sister quit school and married to escape the hell we all lived. My father told me that if I wanted to drink at home I could. We shared nothing else, at least we could share a drink.

It wasn't long before there were three drunks in the house. As soon as I graduated from high school (in the top fourth of my class) I took my bottle and moved into an apartment. There I discovered men and pills.

The next year and a half I don't remember too clearly — until one month my period didn't start. I went to the one person whom I trusted — my doctor. Misery overwhelmed me and I told him everything, laying all the blame on my parents.

He listened calmly. When I had finished he handed me his handkerchief and said, "Yes, but who will you blame from now on?" He explained that I was allowed to place the blame of my childhood unhappiness on the home because no one is born knowing right from wrong — it must be learned.

But I was going on 21 already a drunk, a tramp. From that day on, the doctor said, I would have myself to blame for whatever I did.

As I was physically and emotionally unable to bear the child, I lost it. I was under close care for a year. Today, 10 years later, I am a respected leader of my community. I have a fine husband, two lovely children (whom I spank).

I don't double up my fist and hit them in the mouth. I don't use a weapon. Only my open hand on their bottoms. Occasionally I yell. I never, never, never call them names. Everyone scatters, and then it's over and we laugh.

The Bible tells us to "Honor thy parents" but respect can't be given, it has to be earned. It is possible to love someone and not respect him. But how much more fulfilling, satisfying, to have both.

Our children love and respect us — as we do them. We have a great deal of mutual respect. I could spend the rest of my life hating my parents and myself, but that's not much of a sensible occupation — is it? Regret is yesterday, hope is today, and tomorrow is anticipation. Such a lovely world. (Signed A Devoted Reader).

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I almost feel guilty in admitting that I'm a grandma. What has the world come to when the gap seems to be widening so much between parents and their grown children?

I can't help but say I don't approve of the way some parents beat up their children. I know one woman who carries a strap around with her all the time. Her two-year-old boy is already a nervous wreck.

Is this the way to prevent teenagers from becoming juvenile outlaws? I'd rather err on the side of being too permissive than too strict. It's natural for any human being to overreact to cruelty. Love never "spoiled" a child. — Mrs. M.

Substitute Discovered For Mercury on Seeds

EDMONTON (CP) — It has taken more than seven years and more than $2.5 million but a Canadian research scientist now believes he has a non-toxic replacement for the mercurial treatment of seeds that has been accused of harming birds and animals.

Dr. Marshall Kulka, 59, of Guelph, Ont., attended the unveiling of his preparation here this week.

Dr. Kulka, a native of Warspite, Alta., joined Uniroyal chemical 27 years ago and now is the firm's manager of organic chemical research. He started working on the seed treatment compound in 1964 and since then has been aided by more than 50 research workers. His product has been tested in both Canada and the United States at universities and company plants.

Company officials say the liquid is the only systemic non-mercurial seed protectant available and represents a "major break-through" in agriculture.

Systemic compounds enter the plant via roots or shoots and pass through the plant tissue.

The liquid, which can be applied to seeds using existing treatment procedures, is safe to handle compared with present highly-toxic mercurial compounds.

New Wheat Pact To Be Discussed

GENEVA (CP) — With the somewhat unworkable and largely unsuccessful International Grains Arrangement expiring next June, senior officials from some 60 countries will gather in the Palais des Nations Monday to consider what form a new three-year pact should take.

That there will be a new agreement is virtually taken for granted by many leading negotiators. But there are deep differences on the essential ingredients. The result, after four or five weeks of closed-door bargaining, is likely to be a compromise, with Canada possibly yielding more than it receives.

Some Canadian officials hint that if other countries don't meet essential Canadian demands, Canada may just as well do without a new agreement. But Canada has shown over the years it is the greatest supporter of such pacts, to promote market stability as well as assured revenue. It is unlikely that it will turn its back at this stage, even if the outlook is not as bright as it might hope.

Critics have suggested that the 1968-71 International Grains Arrangement, with its dazzling pledges of big price increases, sagged partly because negotiations were linked with huge tariff bargaining on industrial goods. The strength of the wheat agreement was reduced in exchange for industrial tariff concessions.

This time there will be no tariff bargaining, such as that initiated by the late President John F. Kennedy, hanging over the negotiators' heads. They also are unlikely to include the general body of grains covered in the previous agreement.

They may concentrate on wheat sold through commercial channels and wheat given to needy countries.

They likely will narrow their ideas to a resumption of the old pattern of wheat agreements started in 1949 and continued until the IGA budded and tended to wither under the blaze of huge surpluses and shrinking markets.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For January 17

Your birthday today: Development of psychological and intuitive powers may be a part of your goal this year. Search for peace and order in your surroundings. Meditation and prayer may become a regular part of your daily life. Whatever encumbrances you retain through the end of the year will become much greater hindrances in the following year. Today's natives are impatient of spirit, often of uneven temper, fond of sports.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Share in the community expression of faith, dress well and with dignity. Find out what is going on, organize get-togethers with younger people. Sports, pastimes are favored.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You can be of great help just by being there, standing to be counted. Rummage through closets, cabinets; there's some treasure to rescue, and a lot of things to discard.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Project what you actually are today. No amount of light talk will quite substitute. Make it a day full of sociable visits, reunions. Avoid excess.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The experience of this Sunday should be memorable. Pursue romantic and sentimental interests. Offer respect and good manners to all; notice the response.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): It is useful to you and your group that you be about and visible at the community's services. Much is to be learned visiting among friends. Fresh contacts are promising.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Practically everything you had planned works out fairly well now. A chance meeting enlivens the whole day. Indulge an epicurean mood, within reasonable limits.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your spiritual nature expands. Fine nuances of cooperation come from a touch of intuition. Casual encounters are more than coincidence, perhaps arranged, perhaps destiny.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Much of what you want can be had through reasonable effort. Your persuasive powers are high, your presence of mind adequate. Attend to household details nobody else touched.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Go along with a bright and breezy mood. Changes in your usual routines are inspiring and helpful. Informally pursue sentimental interests this evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): Take stock of where you are, what you have in the world: obligations and liabilities. Make a similar survey of what you are as an emotional human being.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Get in step and help organize collective activities, contests, debates. A long mislaid item of personal property turns up in a most unlikely place.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Loved ones relate well to you now, depending on your inner growth. The more the merrier. Seek interesting sights, unfamiliar places, fresh contacts.

For January 18

Your birthday today: This is a year of many starts and changes of direction, as openings into new fields develop. Your progress, for all its erratic off and on quality, is overall rather rewarding. You shed old limitations at unexpected moments both at work and at home. Intuition grows along with the rest of your healthy nature. Today's natives are patient, determined, and usually make out best running their own businesses.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): A friendly personal touch works well today. Ask for everything you want, and you'll get enough. Earnings promise to increase. Add to your savings.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Come on strong, ask for what you've earned. Put in consistent effort at work, especially on routines requiring co-operation. Give a small party tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): You are likely to start so many things today that you'll have the problem of getting them all settled. Think about what you are getting into. Take complete change of pace.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Work and home life prosper, if you join in the march of constructive activity. Younger people are at a peak of interesting activities, need attention and praise.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): You are asked to listen to somebody complain of his own self caused troubles. Avoid physical travel, seek aesthetic experiences and symbolic travel.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Now is the time to be thrifty and slow to talk about personal affairs. Entertaining should be put off a few days. Meditation, prayer offer much this evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Take the initiative, present your best side. You can charm your way into more rewarding situations. Explore with friends new and interesting places to visit.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Now you can meet some helpful people again under favorable circumstances. Younger people prove enterprising, full of surprises. Routine schedules reach an impasse today; adapt as you go.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): This is not the day for shortcuts or skipping formalities. There's a possibility of local confusion, failure of routine supplies. Rely on your own home and its resources.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Try different tactics on the job today. Rivals and friends alike expect that you have plans far ahead of what you have announced. Take your time in travel, watch out for something new.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Seek a second opinion on business proposals; work out details carefully. Give everybody something to do. Travel is complicated, so allow extra time.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Group projects are easier to organize, more likely to work out this week. You can make a better use of your resources than you have been achieving.

Kidnapped Envoy Is Released

RIO DE JANEIRO (Ruter) — Kidnapped Swiss Ambassador Giovanni Bucher was released apparently unharmed today after nearly 40 days in the hands of Brazilian leftist guerrillas.

Bucher turned up at the home of an embassy official more than 48 hours after the Brazilian government met all demands for his ransom by freeing 70 political prisoners and flying them to Santiago, Chile.

Bucher was driven to his embassy residence. He posed for cameramen but would say only: "I am well. I am not in a position to make a statement right away."

A news conference was scheduled for later in the day.

The envoy arrived at the embassy residence in slacks and a pink sport shirt. He was driven to the building, just a few hundred yards from the presidential palace in Rio's hillside Laranjeiras district, by Swiss embassy official William Rock.

Good U.S. News Boosts Markets

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Prices continued to climb on Canadian stock markets this week, following favorable economic developments in the United States.

It was the fourth consecutive week that markets have moved higher.

The Torono Stock Exchange's industrial index, a key indicator of market movement, was up 1.04 points to 177.55.

On Wall Street the Dow Jones average of blue-chip industrial issues was up 8.69 points to 845.70. Activity was brisk at the New York and American exchanges throughout most of the week.

At the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, the composite index gained .98 to 175.41.

Several U.S. banks, led by the First National City Bank, announced reductions in their prime rate.

Prime rate is the interest charged on loans to a bank's best customers.

This is the second round of prime-rate reductions in as many weeks.

Markets pushed higher last week on news of reductions by both U.S. and Canadian banks.

In addition, several Canadian financial institutions last week reduced interest rates on conventional residential mortgages and National Housing Act mortgages.

Trading was moderate to heavy at exchanges throughout the week.

Volume at Toronto was 13.54 million shares, up from 10.81 million last week.

On index at Toronto, base metals were up .35 to 93.09 and western oils 1.97 to 199.93. Golds dropped .40 to 168.70.

At the Montreal and Canadian exchanges combined volume was 6.96 million shares, compared with 6.04 million last week.

Missing Sailors Turn up Alive

FREEPORT, Grand Bahamas (AP) — Two "ancient mariners" turned up Friday safe and still sailing.

Robert Munro, 83, a former Sumatra tea planter, and Ian Campbell, 69, a retired skipper from Andros in the Bahamas, had been feared lost on a voyage from Glasgow, Scotland, to Great Harbor island in the Bahamas aboard their 33-foot yacht Pajova. An Atlantic search was launched.

The pair, reported missing and feared lost was found by a merchant ship that happened on them 300 miles south of Bermuda.

CITY MADNESS

LONDON (CP) — Nearly half the working population of southeast London travel out of the area to work when there are identical jobs on their doorsteps, an industrial organization says. A spokesman said that although working in the city added glamor to jobs, rising travel costs cancelled out any wage difference.

Stanfield Sups With Sally Ann

VANCOUVER (CP) — Robert Stanfield handed out welfare cheques and supped onion soup at a Salvation Army mission on skid road Friday as part of his campaign to whip up concern over unemployment in Canada.

The Progressive Conservative leader chatted about unemployment with several men in a long lineup at the city's social services building Friday morning and gave out some cheques.

One young heckler shouted: "Hack" and "rotten bureaucrat." He called Mr. Stanfield's visit a "campaign tour" and told him "you got millions of dollars and you come here to tell us what to do."

Mr Stanfield talked to members of a women's liberation group and was given some Communist party literature on the subject of unemployment.

At noon he went to the Harbor Lights mission where he had a light lunch along with several hundred destitute men. He ate in a small dining room off the main hall with the men who work at the mission. He sang with them: What a Friend We Have in Jesus.

He said the soup was "very good. They must have a good cook."

Later he held "open house" on the steps of the Vancouver courthouse, competing with the noise of heavy equipment at a construction project next door.

He told about 25 young people there he believed their unemployment problem could best be helped by stimulating the economy. Mr. Stanfield said he also suported student travel in the summer.

At a morning press conference, he said problems with the federal youth hostel in old army barracks this past summer should not stop the program this summer.

He also said Finance Minister Edgar Benson was cavalier and complacent about the troubles of a half-million unemployed in Canada although he thought Canadians slightly apathetic as well.

He proposed to "get the economy moving again" with an income tax cut, incentives to industry and a re-pegging of the Canadian dollar to achieve stability in exports.

Mr. Benson "vastly exaggerated" the loss of $1 million revenue if the three-per-cent surtax on income and the 11-per-cent building materials tax were removed, said the Tory chief.

Hees Suggests Economics Chief

OTTAWA (CP) — The government lowered the thermostat in the Commons Friday after a two-day roasting by the opposition over unemployment and the controversial young offenders bill.

But before the House could begin mild debate on a bill to amend the Crop Insurance Act —House Leader Allan MacEachen stuck it on the schedule Thursday after opposition spokesmen had heaped invective on the young Offenders Bill —the opposition got in some more licks at current unemployment figures.

The manpower department and Dominion Bureau of Statistics announced Thursday that the number of Canadians counted as unemployed in December was 538,000—an increase of 13 per cent over November.

George Hees (PC—Prince Edward Hastings) suggested that the government appoint one minister to oversee the six different departments he said are involved in economic activities. Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp said the approach had been tried in other countries and failed.

Indians and Metis Pleased with Parley

EDMONTON (CP) — Indian and Metis leaders from Fort Chipewyan, Alta., left the Peace-Athabasca rivers delta conference Friday convinced that someone is concerned about their plight.

"I feel more brave than I was," said Fred Marcel, chief of the Chipewyans living in the northeastern Alberta settlement. "Every spokesman at the conference seems to be behind us."

"There's no doubt we'll get more done now," said Frank Ladouceur, leader of 450 Metis people living in the community.

"They all weren't able to attend but to us who were there we feel it was something big for our people. It was worthwhile."

The 1,500 native people at the settlement, 450 miles northeast of Edmonton, have said they are being forced to live on welfare because the delta is drying up and hunting and trapping success is dwindling. They have blamed the W. A. C. Bennett Dam on the British Columbia end of the Peace River for low water levels in the area.

The two-day conference, sponsored by the University of Alberta, heard more than 20 speakers, most of them scientists. The consensus was that the dam, which began producing power in September, 1968, was 50-per-cent responsible for low water and ancillary problems in the 1,000-square-mile delta.

About 200 conference delegates were told Friday that the native people are not the only ones affected by the dying delta.

"Their suffering also represents a cost to society, W. E. Phillips and G. L. Hetland, members of the university's department of agricultural and rural sociology, said in a brief.

The paper said loss of income from fishing and trapping has caused residents to rely heavily upon welfare and this is costing the Canadian taxpayer money.

Davis Denies Education Costs Out of Control

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Faced by increased sniping by his political rivals, Education Minister William Davis disputes contentions that education costs have blossomed out of control.

Mr. Davis made that plain Friday night at Hespeler where he told area delegates to the Ontario Progressive Conservative leadership convention in Toronto Feb. 10-12 that he would not apologize for the spending on education.

"That money will be returned in economic growth," he said. "The two are very directly related."

He was disagreeing with a suggestion by Mines Minister Allan Lawrence, repeated at North Bay Friday, for a three-year freeze on education costs at this year's level.

At London Friday night another candidate for the leadership, Bert Lawrence, commercial affairs minister, criticized "extraordinarily lavish spending on educational research" and promised to reorganize the system of allotting funds.

Indians Want Time for Study

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

TYENDINAGA — Spokesmen for 16,000 Ontario Indians Sunday condemned what they believe is apparent federal government disregard for a crucial understanding given Canada's Indians.

The Association of Iroquois and Allied Indians — which includes the Bay of Quinte Mohawks — voiced concern that the government may intend implementing proposals in its controversial White Paper on Indian Affairs without waiting for alternative policies from the Indians themselves.

A motion passed Sunday "strongly condemns" the government for maintaining its White Paper policies despite an understanding that no action would be taken until Indians had an opportunity to submit their own counter-proposals.

The protest stemmed from a statement last week by J. B. Bergevin, assistant deputy minister of Indian Affairs, that staff in his department would be reduced from 4,000 to 200 in 10 years.

This, said the association's motion, reiterates government policy set out in the 1969 White Paper.

As the association met here Saturday, the Bergevin statement came under attack from George Manuel, president of the National Indian Brotherhood.

Mr. Manuel described the statement as "another typical example of unilateral hogwash of the dreaming, paternalistic civil servant."

"The Department of Indian Affairs will only be realistically phased out when the Indian people are not only fully consulted but also involved," he said.

The NIB takes "strong exception "to such statements which "confuse and mislead the Indian people" and affect the efficiency of department personnel by creating a sense of insecurity, said Mr. Manuel.

Toronto Blaze Kills 7

TORONTO (CP) — Seven members of three families, including six children, died in a fire that swept through two east-end apartments Sunday morning.

Three other persons were also injured in the fire, including a man who stood on a second-floor ledge shouting "My God, the children are in there, somebody help them," until neighbors took him down a ladder.

Dead are Rose Deschamps, 20, and her two children, Tracy, 15 months, and Robin, 3, who lived in the second-floor apartment; two children visiting the Deschamps, Georgina Sykes, 13, and her sister, Noreen, 11; and Diana Arsenault, 8, and her brother Daniel, 7, who lived in the third-floor apartment.

Their mother Anita, 29, leaped barefoot from the second-floor rear, where the fire was fireest.

Sh was in fair condition in hospital today with possible internal and other injuries, and shock.

Two visitors to the building, Richard Dunlop, 22, who was staying with the Deschamps, and Robert Noble, 35, who was a guest of the Arsenaults, were discharged from hospital after treatment.

Russia Promises to Replace Egypt's Losses in New War

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Soviet President Nikolai Podgorny has pledged that the Soviet Union will replace Egypt's "material losses" if another war with Israel breaks out and also will improve living conditions in the Arab nation.

Podgorny told a cheering crowd of 5,000 shipyard workers in Alexandria Sunday that his country would "bear any material losses to help Egypt repulse Israel."

With Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, he took a special train from Cairo to the Mediterranean port.

Podgorny and Sadat, making his first visit to Egypt's second largest city since he became president, spoke near what appeared to be two huge oil tankers Soviet engineers are helping the Egyptians to build.

Egyptians Want More Protection

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Angry Egyptian officials demanded better police protection for their diplomats today after a bomb attack Sunday night burned out the front door of the Egyptian mission to the United Nations.

A mission spokesman said there were no police in front of the mission at the time of the blast, although there always are in normal circumstances.

Because of the current police strike the city has been hard pressed to provide protection for diplomatic missions. Special federal police have been brought in from Washington to bolster security at diplomatic buildings.

Douglas Says Waffles Won't Take Over NDP

TORONTO (CP) — National Leader T. C. Douglas of the New Democratic Party says he can see no threat of the radical Waffle group ever taking over from the party moderates.

"I think it is always good in a party to have people pushing forward new ideas, even if I don't agree with some of them," Mr. Douglas said, commenting on a weekend meeting of the party's federal council which saw Waffle influence dominate key policy issues.

"I'd be more worried if our party was turning out to be a mutual admiration society," he said in an interview. He said the moderates and militants in the party eventually will "work out some common ground."

The Waffles, followers of ultra-nationalist Prof Mel Watkins, make up less than a third of the 130-member governing council. They won two of three hectic battles, forcing a revision of the membership in the key resolutions committee to include more women, and committing the council to a policy of federal control of the drug industry.

Their only major defeat was in a resolution to impose public ownership of all Canada's resources industries. The resolution, put forward by James Laxer, failed to come to a vote after heated debate.

Canada Backs Compromise Declaration

SINGAPORE (CP) — Canada is backing a compromise declaration of Commonwealth principles after conference officials failed to reach agreement on the Zambian code during the weekend.

Neither the original Zambian declaration which would commit members to denying any assistance to racist regimes like South Africa nor an Australian amendment which would eliminate the 'denial of assistance' clause were winning the necessary support.

Canada, Guyana and one unnamed member have therefore drafted another form of words which they are hopeful may win the support of the heads of government when the item is debated Wednesday or Thursday.

Sudbury Wants Machinery Tax

SUDBURY (CP) — A city of Sudbury motion calling for the taxation of "machinery and equipment and the foundations upon which they rest" has been endorsed by the Association of Mining Municipalities of Northern Ontario.

While the motion was aimed primarily at the mining industry for this area, a city financial adviser said it also pertains to other industries elsewhere in the province.

Only a bare 2-3 majority, the minimum requirement under the association's constitution, carried the resolution at a meeting Saturday.

Pipeline Could Damage Canada

EDMONTON (CP) — A university of Alberta economics professor says a multi-billion dollar gas pipeline through Canada from Alaska to the United States might do Canada more harm than good.

Dr. S. E. Drugge, associate professor of economics, said the proposed pipeline could push the Canadian economy into a state of turmoil during the construction period.

And the pipeline would satisfy American demand for natural gas and so weaken Canada's position regarding sale of Canadian products to the U.S. markets.

Dr. Drugge was taking part in a panel presentation sponsored by the Engineering Institute of Canada Edmonton branch, the university's engineering student society and the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy.

Earlier, two panelists representing groups doing major studies in the north outlined proposed pipeline projects.

The fourth panelist, Dr. W. A. Fuller, chairman of the zoology department at the University of Alberta, criticized the Canadian government for its failure to gather data on the environmental effects of industrial activity in the north.

"The Canadian government has been promoting northern development for the past 15 years, but have only been gathering ecological data for about two years."

It is important that the environmental aspects of major projects be considered before such massive projects are undertaken, he said.

Pipeline planners generally say they can plan to build gravel overpasses so that reindeer can cross berms (built-up pipeline areas), he said.

But he said that pronghorns in Alberta had been expected to jump fences, but generally won't.

"You'd better test a few caribou or reindeer on crossing a berm before you build the line."

Oil Envoy Is in Iran

TEHRAN (AP) — Premier Amir Abass Hoveida of Iran welcomed the arrival of President Nixon's special oil envoy, Sunday but said foreign pressure would not modify the demands by 10 major oil-producing nations for more revenue.

Hoveida said his ministers would be pleased to meet with John Irwin, U.S. undersecretary of state, who arrived Sunday from Washington. But Hoveida added that Iran will not allow "any foreign power to interfere in its affairs," and new royalty and tax rates "must be fixed outside and away from political crisis and to the benefit of the producers."

Iran is the world's fourth largest producer of petroleum and the leading Middle Eastern spokesman for the 10-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting countries made up of the Middle East Oil countries, Algeria, Libya, Venezuela and Indonesia. Together they account for almost 60 per cent of the oil production outside Communist nations.

Growing Gap in Division of World's Wealth Worries Parley

SINGAPORE (CP) — Commonwealth leaders turned from politics to economics today against a background of simmering African discontent over the proposed sale of British arms to South Africa.

Within the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference itself, heads of government ranged over trends and problems in the world economic situation, with most speakers underlining the ever-growing gap between the developed and developing nations.

Foreign Minister Swaran Singh of India noted that the average annual earnings of the people in the developed world now is running at $1,650 a person, or about 13 times more than in the developing countries.

"It is little comfort to the economically and socially underprivileged to know that they are winning the fight against poverty, when they witness the rich becoming richer even more rapidly.' Prime Minister Keith Holyoake of New Zealand told his colleagues.

Prime Minister Errol Barrow of Barbados complained that the new nations are suffering especially because the industrialized ones keep hoisting shipping rates. This has been a big factor in the increased cost of goods and commodities.

Singh urged the need for world agreement on commodity prices of crucial importance to most developing Commonwealth countries. And he called on Prime Minister Heath to abandon planned changes in Britain's policy toward the import of Commonwealth textiles—changes which he said would make it harder for Commonwealth countries to sell their manufactures in Britain compared with sales in the European Common Market area.

Speaker after speaker voiced fears that Britain's entry into an enlarged Common Market, despite Heath's promises to safeguard their interests, will penalize their countries.

"British entry should be made painless for developing Commonwealth countries," Singh said. "The bridge over the English Channel should not become a bridge of sighs."

While the Commonwealth leaders met for their fourth working session of the nine-day conference, two Russian navy ships, one of them outfitted with extra radio equipment, anchored today two miles off the Singapore waterfront, reliable sources said. It appeared that the equipment on the smaller of the vessels could be used to monitor the flow of diplomatic cable traffic into and out of Singapore.

The two ships were earlier described as support craft for the 19,000-ton Russian cruiser Aleksandr Suvorov with 1,000 men aboard and the destroyer Blestiuashiv which passed Singapore Friday on the way to the Indian Ocean.

Indians Not Ready To State Policy

Such a staff cutback, Mr. Manuel said later, would mean abolition of the Indian affairs department.

The department is a necessity, he said, although there may be areas within its framework that need to be abolished. But such moves would have to be discussed and negotiated with the Indian people.

"I think the present framework of Indian Affairs has failed miserably," said Mr. Manuel.

The contrast between "plush" departmental offices in Ottawa and poverty on Indian reserves showed how "miserably it has failed the Indian people."

Chief Earl Hill of the Bay of Quinte Mohawks said Sunday Canada's Indians need much more time to evolve alternatives to the White Paper proposals.

White governments have had 400 years of policy-making experience in Canada, he said.

"We have had a measly two years. Yet they expect us to come up with policies better than what they (the government) propose."

A consensus of all Canadian Indians is necessary to such a policy - making process, said the chief.

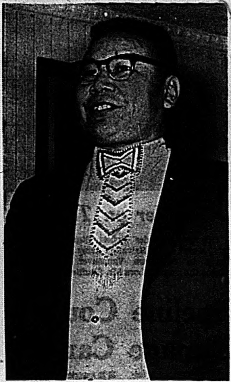
Necessary to such a consensus is closer contact among Indians, he said.

Closer relationships between Indian groups was one of the reasons for George Manuel's presence at the meeting, where association members queried him at length about the NIB.

Indians have to develop confidence in each other nationally and work together, Mr. Manuel said.

Unlike the department, Indians do not have a national policy.

"We fight . . . individually and we get swallowed up and crushed in this bureaucratic machine," he said.



Voice of Protest

George Manuel, National Indian Brotherhood president, — at Association of Iroquois and Allied Indians — Saturday rejected any phasing out of Indian affairs department without consulting Canada's Indians. Association, meeting on Tyendinaga Mohawk reserve, later passed motion condemning any such move.

Chill Safari A Success

Safaris are usually attributed to warmer climates.

Be that as it may, RCAF 418 Wing held a safari for youngsters on Saturday at their clubhouse on the 4th Concession of Sidney Township.

Organizer Cecil Matier and association members plotted a route through picturesque farmland, rendezvousing in a glade for hot dogs and marshmallows over hot coals.

Temperatures notwithstanding, the youngsters were bundled up and eagerly took to the trails with their parents.

Following this first organized family outing, the barbecue was concluded outside the clubhouse.

A torchlight safari is being planned for the near future.

Saturday evening, the day's events ended with a capacity crowd at a dance and social evening.

First Arrival

Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough (right) Saturday became first Ontario Conservative leadership candidate to campaign for Quinte support. He talked with convention delegates and leading party members — including Dr. Richard Potter — during lunch at Sun Valley Motor Inn.

McKeough's Emphasis Is on Local Autonomy

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Government must now move closer to the people — and, for both, stronger local government is the key contact point, predicts Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough.

Government in the 1970s will have to respond "far more than it has in the past" to the needs and aspirations of the governed, he told Quinte - district Conservative party delegates scrutinizing his potential for party leadership Saturday.

"And I think more effective local government, properly financed, is a way to accomplish a great deal of that," said Mr. McKeough.

The need for readjusting political wavelengths between the empowered and the people was a major theme of Mr. McKeough's bid to attract support of local party delegates who, one month from now, vote on a new Ontario Conservative leader.

The man chosen to succeed Premier Robarts must be a man "tuned in" to the problems of the decade, said Mr. McKeough as he presented his leadership bid while host for delegates and prominent party supporters for lunch at the Sun Valley Motor Inn.

"We have been in power now for 27 years in this province and we have a record and we should be proud of it," said Mr. McKeough.

"But we can't expect to go on doing business at the same old stand for five more years — let alone 27 more years.

"We must be in keeping with the times. And we must be aware of the issues which the people of Ontario feel today are issues."

Mr. McKeough was the first of the party's five (so far) contenders for leadership to visit the Quinte area. More than 60 delegates and leading Conservative party workers from its three constituencies (Quinte, Hastings, Prince Edward-Lennox) joined at the Sun Valley lunch to assess his leadership ability and prod him on policy.

In Belleville, Mr. McKeough was in tough policy testing territory for an area that is traditionally Conservative.

The local arrival of the first candidate for the Robarts' succession came little more than a week after the resident provincial political personality — Dr. Richard Potter, MPP Quinte — ended a province-wide tour demanding that leadership contenders specifically state policy stances.

Whatever the spinoff elsewhere in Ontario, the hard-nosed Potter approach undoubtedly has had a stiffening effect in the MPP's home consistency. In 1971, provincial cabinet ministers, just because they're seeking the province's highest office, are not personages to be rather shyly quizzed by workers in the grassroots wards. Now, they are expected to positively articulate policy attitudes.

The result, for Mr. McKeough, was a question period that ranged from cabinet membership to drugs, and expressways to foreign investment.

Inevitably, Mr. McKeough was fired a question about his policy priorities.

"I don't know where you start in terms of priorities," he admitted. "We are faced with some very dicey ones at present time in terms of government."

Two such priorities being discussed were inclusion of nursing homes on medicare and education costs, he said.

Cost of putting nursing homes on medicare is now estimated at $60 million — equivalent to a three per cent rise in the government's share of local education costs.

Mr. McKeough said he had not made up his mind which demand should get priority.

(Dr. Potter has repeatedly pressed for nursing homes to be included in medicare.)

The need for government to be more "people-conscious" was stressed by Mr. McKeough in his opening statement to the delegates.

Hitherto, provincial government, striving to meet an expanding population demanding more services, has grown while municipal authority has eroded.

There's now no reason why "effective" units of local government, supported by fund transfers without strings, cannot assume wider powers and administer them "as efficiently . . . and more economically."

Efficiently organized government "probably means — to start with — regional government," said Mr. McKeough.

At present, there are no plans to regionalize municipal government in the Quinte area, he said.

Meantime, at Queen's Park, the need for closer contact with the people demands more effective use of the legislature's committee system, the party caucus and the party itself, in a "two-way street" of communication with the government hierarchy.

A crucial issue for provincial government in the 1970s is how it will reconcile Ontario's economic expansion with environmental needs.

There is now public recognition, said Mr. McKeough, that "we can't go on taking the resources of this province for granted in quite the same way as we have in the past."

If the Conservative party doesn't anticipate and respond to such issues "then someone else is going to do it for us," said Mr. McKeough.

"And I don't particularly relish the thought . . . of having the response, or the reaction to that kind of an issue made by a government headed by (NDP leader) Stephen Lewis," said Mr. McKeough.

The problem of foreign ownership can only be solved "positively" — by convincing Canadians to invest in their country, said Mr. McKeough.

But national ownership is an "enormous" problem and if Canadians want to control their development over the next 10 years they must invest twice as much in that time as in the past century.

Stimulating Canadian investment has to be a priority for the Conservative party, said Mr. McKeough.

Candidate Avoids Potter Question

Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough Saturday rejected a query as to whether he would name Dr. Richard Potter,, MPP Quinte, to his cabinet if the minister won leadership of the Ontario Conservative Party.

The question was sprung on Mr. McKeough while answering questions of Quinte-district delegates to next month's Conservative leadership convention.

"That's not a fair question," retorted Mr. McKeough.

Other delegates in the audience at the Sun Valley Motor Inn reception laid on by Mr. McKeough agreed with him.

"I'd be very pleased to have Dr. Potter in my cabinet — and I think any one of the leadership candidates would say exactly the same thing," added Mr. McKeough. "We have no dearth of talent in our party. There are a great many fine people from all over this province who are very well qualified to serve in any government which I might have the privilege of heading."

Snowmobiler Hurt During Speed Run

TRENTON (Staff) — An Ameliasburg area man is being treated at Trenton Memorial Hospital today for injuries received in a snowmobile collision near the Winterama site yesterday.

Morley Moy of RR 1 Ameliasburg sustained a broken ankle when his vehicle crossed the path of another snowmobile driven by Frank Newbery of RR 2, Brighton. Mrs. Moy, riding on the same machine as her husband, was treated for shock at Memorial Hospital and released.

The Moys were setting out from the Winterama snowmobile races at Bain Park for a ride on the Bay when they crossed a straight-away track where snowmobilers were "opening up" their vehicles to have their speeds clocked by a radar device.

Striking the Moys broadside was the Newbery snowmobile which was bearing down the track at the time. Mrs. Newbery said this morning that the track was so icy that her husband had been unable to stop.

Cold Spell To Remain

Button up your overcoat and pull on a pair of slacks under that mini — it's cold outside.

And likely to stay that way until Thursday, says the duty forecaster at CFB Trenton.

Last night's low of 12 below zero ties the record set for Belleville and Trenton in 1934. This was the second record - breaking morning for the Quinte area. On Sunday, 19 below zero temperatures were three degrees lower than the Jan. 27 record of 16 below reached in 1940.

But it was chillier in the north. At 6 a.m. today people in Killaloe shivered at 35 below temperatures.

The cold spell started Saturday with a low of 11 below zero. Temperatures of 10 to 15 below are expected for the next three nights, with a warming trend starting Thursday.

The warmer air toward the end of the week will bring snow with it, but it's too early to predict how much, says the Trenton weatherman.

IN MEMORIAM

THORN — In loving memory of a dear father and grandpa Charles Edward Thorn who passed away January 18, 1968.

It seems so strange that those we need,
And those we love the best,

And took them home to rest.
But everytime I think of Dad,
I seem to hear God say,
Have faith and trust My promise,
You'll meet again some day.

THORN — In loving memory of a father Charles Edward Thorn, who passed away Jan. 18th, 1968.

THORN — In loving memory of our dear father, Charles Edward Thorn who passed away January 18th, 1968.

Three years ago dear Father,
Our Saviour called you home,
To dwell there with the angels,
Around the heavenly throne.
The days have been so very long,
Since you were called away,
And left us all so lonely here,
That dreary January day.
No longer do we see you smile,
Or loving voice do hear,
And when the evening shadows fall,
We shed a silent tear.
We never got to say good-bye,
Perhaps its just as well,
For we never could have said good-bye,
To a Dad we loved so well.

—With all our love Dad, sadly missed and never forgotten by daughter (Jennie) Virginia and son George E. Thorn.

THORN — In loving memory of a dear brother Charles who passed away January 18, 1968.

Our family circle has been broken,
A link gone from our chain;
But though we're parted for a while,
We know we'll meet again.
Some day we hope to meet you,
Some day we know not when,
We shall meet in a better land,
Never to part again.

—Remember always by brother Percy and family.

THORN — In fond and loving memory of a dear father, Charles Edward Thorn who passed away 3 years ago, January 18, 1968.

THORNE — In loving memory of a wonderful father, Charles Edward who passed away Jan. 18, 1968.

Our hearts still ache with sadness,
And secret tears still flow.
What it meant to lose you father,
No one will ever know.
They say time heals all sorrow,
And helps us to forget,
But time so far has only proved,
How much we miss you yet.
When we are sad and lonely,
And everything goes wrong,
We seem to hear you whisper,
Cheer up and carry on.
Each time we see your picture,
You seem to smile and say,
Don't cry I'm only sleeping,
We'll meet again some day.

—Lovingly remembered by his son Charles and daughter-in-law Sandra.

THORN — In loving memory of a dear brother Charlie who passed away Jan. 18, 1968.

Lying within our hearts concealed.

THORN — In sad and loving memory of a dear husband Charles Edward Thorn who passed away 3 years ago Jan. 18, 1968.

I do not need a special day,
To bring you to my mind,
For the days I do not think of you,

If all this world were mine to give,
I'd give it, yes, and more,
To see the face of you my love,
Come smiling through the door.

—Always loved by wife Marjorie.

Big Crowd For Races

TRENTON (Staff) — A bright sun and low wind made conditions ideal for the Winterama snowmobile races here yesterday.

Despite uneasiness on the part of program organizers that snowmobile enthusiasts might stay at home to watch the Super Bowl, the number of paid admissions was up by at least 200 from last year when more than 1,000 turned up to watch the town's first Winterama on a slushy track.

Response to Winterama '71 passed all expectations. The snack bar set up on the site in Bain Memorial Park ran out of all provisions early in the day.

The track was fast as snowmobilers from the town, Carrying Place, Tweed, Madoc, Belleville, Picton, Huntsville, Brighton and Port Hope converged for the races.

In the day's competition, Mike Mason placed first in the A Stock race, Dennis Dempsey first in B and D. Ray Baker took top honors in the C Stock class.

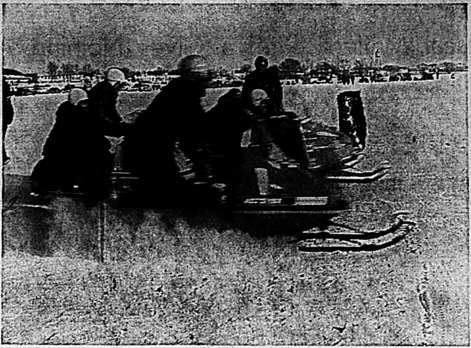
Doug Thompson won both A and B modified class competitions, Bob Weese took the C modified race.

Top lady racer of the day was Mrs. Deborah Weese, top junior was Brett Cairns and in the open class event Ross Chalmers was the victor.

Throughout the program, organizers were hard put to control the crowds. One race was interrupted when a car passed at the end of the track and at times snowmobile racers had to dodge spectators and sightseeing snowmobilers entering the track area.

Prime attraction for the children was a horse-drawn sleigh always filled with passengers setting off for rides down the Bay. Free snowmobile rides were also provided for the children.

There were two special events on the day's program, a para-drop by three members of the Trenton Skydivers Club and a race for members of the local news media won by Larry Lietar of the Trentonian advertising department.



Hard Pressed at Starting Flag

Highlighting the Trenton Kiwanis Winterama snowmobile races Sunday at Bain Park was the Press Radio Race. Winner of the event was Larry Lietar of the Trentonian. Participants were Ken Smith, Intelligencer Trenton Bureau, Bob Rowbotham, CJBQ News, Trenton and CJBQ personalities Peter Thompson, "Daryl D." and Dick Lovering.

Industrial Milk Supply Shrinking

Attrition, together with younger farmers going out of the dairy business because of low returns, is resulting in a severe falling off in industrial milk production across Canada.

This was stated Wednesday in London by R. M. Sinclair, marketing supervisor for the Ontario Milk Marketing Board.

Mr. Sinclair, addressing the 104th annual convention of the Dairyman's Association of Western Ontario, said that milk production had fallen off so severely that industrial quotas will not be met this year.

The milk marketing board official said this year's milk supply will hit only 90 per cent of the industrial quota and a further five to 10 per cent cut in production is forecast for next year.

Arnold Johnston, manager of the Ontario Milk Marketing Board (Cheese Division) in Belleville said that national dairy production figures for last year bore out Mr. Sinclair's statement of reduced production of industrial milk.

Cheese production for all of Canada for the first 11 months of last year was up about one per cent — from 157.9 million pounds to 158 million — but Ontario production of cheese was down by three per cent.

Cheese production in Ontario for the 11-month period last year was 78.7 million pounds as compared with 81.2 million in 1969.

Cheese production in Quebec was up about four per cent from 65.1 million pounds to 67.8 million last year.

But there was a considerable falling off in butter production and in the production of skim milk powder.

Mr. Johnston said national figures showed milk powder production was down nine per cent — from 373.4 million pounds to 338.5 million — and butter production was down five per cent from 330.7 million pounds in 1969 to 312.6 million last year.

There is no short supply of fluid milk for the bottle trade as prices received by farmers in the No. 1 pool are almost double that received by suppliers of industrial milk which goes into production of cheese, butter and powder.

Last week the Ontario Milk Marketing Board announced a 20 cents per cwt. increase in the price of "bottle" milk, bringing it to $6.85 per cwt., with another 15 cent increase expected in September.

However, the price of industrial milk, currently $3.65 per cwt., is not expected to be increased until April or the beginning of the Federal government fiscal year.

Harold Elliott, owner of the Foxboro Cheese Factory also confirmed that there was a sharp falling off in the production of industrial milk.

He said his plant quota for this year was only 92 per cent of the quota which he had been given in 1970.

"Some of the older farmers are quitting and many younger men are going out of dairy cattle into beef or are taking other jobs away from the farm," he said.

Of 72 patrons sending milk to the Foxboro factory last year, Mr. Elliott said that in the past 12 months 'at least six or eight," or approximately 10 per cent of his suppliers had gone out of dairy cattle.

Snowmobile Races Out For Winter Carnival

Snowmobile races for the 1971 Belleville Winter Carnival have been ruled out.

This announcement came this morning from Jack Trembley, chairman of the carnival committee.

Ray Worrell of the Quinte Snowmobile Club Thursday night indicated that the club couldn't get insurance for the races.

"We can't put the onus on the club . . . they can't take the risk," Mr. Worrell said, referring to the operators.

Mr. Trembley stated that "these people (the snowmobile club representatives) are dictating to us now.

"We went into it thoroughly with the insurance companies and if we had the money, we wouldn't even talk about it," the carnival chairman said.

He explained that insurance to cover the races would run to $250 per day for the two-day event previously scheduled.

"We'd love to have them but we don't want anything to happen to the spectators. The drivers sign waivers so we don't have any worries there."

Ontario's first snowmobile racing death occurred this weekend at Owen Sound. Mervin Keller, a 31 - year - old racer competing in the Georgian Cup Challenge, was killed instantly when his machine was involved in a three-machine pileup.

In Quinte region, an RR 1, Ameliasburg resident, Morley Moy, sustained a broken ankle during the Trenton Snowmobile Races Sunday.

A non - participant in the races at the time of the accident, he was in collision with one of the competition vehicles.

"We've got to protect the citizens," said Mr. Trembley. "Once you charge admission, you are responsible for your spectators."

Although "the budget won't allow insurance for races," Mr. Trembley said that rides would be provided.

The Chamber of Commerce, sponsors of the carnival, hope to hold snowmobile events every year.

Pipes Thawed, Fire Guts House

TRENTON (Staff) — The home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Weeks at 86 Princess Street was gutted by fire Saturday after a Public Utilities crew had finished thawing out water pipes in the residence.

Mr. Weeks said he noticed flames running up his living room wall at 4.30 p.m., shortly after the PUC employees had finished their job. He said they were still on the property when fire broke out and he called them back to help him fight the blaze until a fire truck arrived.

Water pipes in the home ran behind the wall where flames were first sighted according to Mr. Weeks, who adds that the clamps of the generator used to heat up the plumbing system were so hot one PUC worker could not hold onto them and had to throw them in the snow to cool them off.

The family did not have time to remove many of their possessions from the house. "What is not water damaged is smoke damaged," Mr. Weeks said.

Although the shell of the house is still intact, no decision has been made on whether to rebuild. The building was not insured.

Mr. and Mrs. Weeks and their daughter Stephanie, 15, are now living with relatives near their home.

Mr. Weeks told The Intelligencer last night that he will have talks with PUC officials today to determine their position in the matter.

Free Swim

Sunday was open house at the Belleville Family YMCA. As well as free swimming, displays of judo, kindergym and outlines of all YMCA facilities were offered.

Farmers Critical Of Milk Policy

The National Farmers Union is pressing for a $1 increase from the present base price of $3.65 per hundredweight for industrial milk.

And it also feels that the recent price increase of 20 cents now and a further increase of 15 cents in September for fluid (bottle) milk should have been brought about in one stage for 38 cents instead of 35 cents.

The two price increases for fluid milk were announced last week by the Ontario Milk Marketing Board at Toronto, bringing the September price to $7 per cwt.

Blake Sandford, co-ordinator for the Ontario Region of the National Farmers Union said there was immense disappointment by dairy farmers with the price increase announced by the marketing board.

He said the two-stage increase in the price of fluid milk gives distributors the opportunity of increasing the consumer price twice and putting the blame both times on the farmers.

He said the fluid producers should have received a one-stage price increase of the equivalent of one cent per quart bringing the base producer price to at least $7.03.

"If the price had been raised to $7.03 per cwt. on Feb. 1, it would also have assisted in bringing further pressure to bear for a satisfactory price to industrial shippers," he said.

Industrial milk was not included in last week's price increase announced by the OMMB and it is expected the present base price of $3.65 per cwt. will hold at least until April 1 or the beginning of the new federal fiscal year.

STILL AT WORK

It is estimated that there are still about 5,000 blacksmiths at work in the United States.

ANAF News

One of the largest turnouts for a general meeting was on hand last Thursday evening for the election of the 1971 executive and presentation of twenty - five - year buttons. Among the honored guests was Provincial President Lou Murphy, vice - president F. Jackman and secretary-treasurer Mel Rogers who had been invited to conduct the election and installation of the new executive. Another welcome guest was advocate manager Mel Ward.

The final results of the election were as follows: president, J. Browning; 1st vice, W. J. Ford; 2nd vice, H. Ford; treasurer, L. Shore; secretary, G. R. Christopher; beverage, R. Reid; house, W. A. Storms; sports, K. MacLeod; entertainment, J. Fitzgerald; membership, A. W. Jordan; sick, H. Calnan; publicity, A. S. Hobbs.

While the votes were being counted, there was a coffee break in the downstairs lounge. The scrutineers, chaired by Cde. H. Northey, did a fast and efficient job and the members assembled in the Tartan Lounge again. After the installation of the executive the new president thanked the guests for their efficient and capable handling of the ceremonies and they were given a hearty round of applause.

A couple of presentations were then made. Cde. Stan Melbourne, chairman of the 608 Royal Canadian Air Cadet Squadron committee, presented a certificate on behalf of the League, appointing the Duke of Edinburgh Unit as sponsors of the local Air Cadet Squadron, to the president. Cde. Mel Ward then requested the president to present a valuable present to Cde. Art Hobbs for his services as the local press officer for the Veterans' Advocate.

There were 51 members eligible to receive their twenty-five-year pins and, with the exception of just a few who were working or out of town, they were on hand to receive this award. Dominion President J. C. Lundberg, who was attending the meeting as a unit member was invited to make the awards. He made them all but one. This one was presented to him by the Provincial president. The meeting then adjourned to the lower lounge where a bountiful portion of chili con carne was served with other refreshments thus ending a quite long evening which everyone really enjoyed.

This week will be a busy one for the executive as they line up their committees and get down to the serious business of running the club.

Entertainment chairman, Jack Fitzgerald is carrying on from last year with a good line up of live music for the regular Friday socials in the Tartan Lounge with no charge at the door. A pleasant spot to invite your guests, and Cde. Jack is looking forward to larger crowds than ever.

Membership chairman Archie Jordan is also back on the job and ready to accept the 1971 dues if you haven't paid them yet.

The new sports chairman, Ken MacLeod, is busy organizing his committee and will have news for the sports minded in the next news. The new sick chairman, H. "Kelly" Calnan reports that Cdes. R. Woods, room 711 and J. Lucciola, room 715 are still in the Belleville General Hospital. Cde. H. Smale is quite ill and is confined at his home at present. Cde. Kelly asks that any comrade who knows of a sick member to phone him or the stewards so they can be visited and cared for.

How The Reds Operate

Much of the dissent, drug addiction and alienation of youth today are right in line with the erosion of western society which the Communist world, so subtly is attempting to achieve.

Here are words attributed to Stalin, the late Soviet dictator, and quoted in the Belleville Rotary Club club bulletin: "If we can effectively kill the national pride and patriotism of just one generation, we will have won that country. Therefore, there must be continued propaganda abroad to undermine the loyalty of the citizens in general and the teenagers in particular.

"By making readily available drugs of various kinds; giving a teenager alcohol; by praising his wildness; by strangling him with sex literature and advertising to him or her, the psycho-political preparation can create the necessary attitude to chaos, idleness and worthlessness."

We see many of these tendencies at work today; indeed, it could scarcely be more easily recognizable than in those sinister words of Stalin. Let them be a warning to this and future generations of what Communism is striving to accomplish.

In a related context, that story of the three women of Latvian extraction who fled their home in Winnipeg to seek asylum in the United States is a curious one. Now apparently back in Canada after being refused permanent entry to the U.S., the women say that they feared for their lives under Manitoba's "Communist" government and had been threatened by Communists from time to time. One of them claimed that under former Conservative Premier Duff Roblin the Communists in Manitoba had "kept their mouths shut, but now they threaten violence."

While the women could offer no concrete examples of the threats, this latter statement about the Reds being more open under the province's socialist-oriented government, may have significance. In recent years there have been instances of harassment of people from the Communist world now living in Canada.

It may be these women do have legitimate fears, in which case their story should be of interest to the RCMP who are responsible for countering Communist subversion in this country.

Publicity's Value

A great many injustices would go unnoticed in our society were it not for the media and the publicity thus afforded the happenings of our day. For it is in the light of publicity that people and groups tend to cool any tendency to perpetuate or condone injustice.

There have been two examples of late. First, Virgil Polston would have been just another young American deserter who had been three times jailed in his homeland had he not written to President Nixon. After his third term, during which he says he was beaten and harassed he escaped to Canada where he did odd jobs and married Lorraine Provost, a waitress. They moved to her home town, Niagara Falls, but Polston was homesick for the United States. It was then that he wrote to the president, pointing out that he had volunteered for active duty in Vietnam after enlisting in the Marines on his 17th birthday and that he had deserted after being refused leave to visit his dying stepfather in Baltimore just before Christmas in 1968, then was refused leave to attend the funeral. He told the president he wanted to return, but did not want to have to return to jail; he would volunteer for Vietnam again rather than that.

The letter was published in the Baltimore Sun Dec. 17 and has received wide publicity in the U.S. since. Whatever becomes of Polston likely will be less severe than if his story had not become public knowledge. True, desertion is a serious offence but Polston seems to have had rather a raw deal.

The other story revealed how Mary Perkins, an 11-year-old Miami girl was tormented for taking four homeless black children on a pre-Christmas shopping spree. Neighborhood children taunted her with the term: "nigger-lover" and she was attacked by four teenagers. When the circumstances were reported in The Miami News the telephone rang constantly in Mary's home, with callers of all ages congratulating her.

Again, had it not been for this recognition, an 11-year-old's thoughtfulness and compassion could have gone unnoticed. The experience, moreover, might have caused her regret, perhaps left her embittered.

In Fiscal Matters Ottawa Gives Nothing Away

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — No matter how "participatory," as Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau likes to call his particular and in some ways very personal brand of democracy may have become, he has made certain there is no "participation" in federal money matters.

This new and modern Prime Minister has a swift change of pace and image to match the changing times, but when it comes to the Ottawa cash register, the style is static.

First there was the "swinger," even the playboy Prime Minister, full of the old joie de vivre, often colorfully dazzling in his mod threads, scattering kisses among the adoring female multitudes, and reflecting the very essence of he-mannishness in his easy, graceful mastery of those sports demanding high degrees of special skills, skiing, skin-diving to 150 foot - deep coral beds, flipping into difficult - to - execute one and a half backward gainers off the high board.

Then there was the Iron Man of Decision moving masses of police and troops against the kidnap - murder terrorists of the Front de Liberation du Quebec — and demonstrating for all Canadians to see that he would not hesitate, should the crunch come within his time of power, to use the military to crush any move by Quebec towards separation.

And now there is the internationalist, jetting off to Singapore as the hero of the hour, pre-billed by the publicists to save the Commonwealth. And two months from now he will be flying to Moscow for a tour de force of the usually "secret" Soviet deep into the Russian Arctic and far behind the Urals.

What next from this most amazing Prime Minister for all Canadians in all seasons and circumstances?

Almost anything except in the dollar department.

In nearly if not entirely everything PET may be as new as the day after tomorrow, but in money matters he is as old - fashioned, conservative, institutional and strictly conventional, as, well, uh, as Mackenzie King.

Budgets, even the new-style supposedly socially - slanted budgets, are as secret as ever.

So, too, must taxes and tax changes be.

And you remember when Pierre Trudeau, Edgar Benson and Company first set up financial shop?

It was all going to be so different.

There was going to be "consultation," even, as Finance Minister Benson put it, stealing one of Trudeau's lines, "participatory.".

There was to be tax "reform," but in the reformation everyone would have his say, and would not only be heard but LISTENED TO.

The Government would accept "guidance."

That White Paper on Taxation, written in the name of reform and the "redistribution of income" for purposes of what was called "social justice?"

Not to worry. Nothing would be rammed down anyone's throat. There would be a special parliamentary committee, its door and ears open to one and all.

Then there would be full debate in Parliament.

And the will of the people — not the Government — would be served.

It was all so new and wonderful as to be almost unbelieveable. And that is what it is turning out to be: beyond belief.

First the Finance Minister, conveniently forgetting all about "consultation," never mind "participation," cut the Parliamentary Committee off in mid-sentence of testimony with dozens of other witnesses waiting patiently to be heard.

The Committee, its job only partly done, dutifully reported back to the Commons and that was it for the White Paper.

It went into official hiding.

Then came word from Edgar Benson that he will present his tax reform legislation, or a good part of it, in the next Spring's Budget, and with the recommendation that it become the tax law of the land in the opening of 1972.

That is less than 12 months from now.

Budgets being what they are, Edgar Benson and his moneymen in the Finance Department have to have decided now what sections of the controversial and in some ways confiscatory White Paper will stick, and how far they might bend — but break never — on other parts.

Thus ends the first chapter in the continuing saga of "participatory democracy."

And from here on in until next Spring, it will be back to the old political process of laying on the Liberal whips in the Government caucus and during the debate on the tax legislation in the Commons — with a bit of subsequent tinkering or fiddling with the phraseology should public reaction make it seem politically expedient.

Modern budgets no longer involve the once simple process of taking money out of your pocket and putting it in the Government's. It is no longer just an exercise in revenue.

It has become an instrument of social and economic needs.

And this being so, the Finance Minister should go back to the process of "consultation," if not "participation" and give the taxpayers, business and individual, some clue as to how they will stand up in the White Paper instead of keeping it a secret, in the old-fashioned Mackenzie King way of doing things.

Christmas Gift Program Benefited More Than 500

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

May we take this opportunity on behalf of the Canadian Mental Health Association, Quinte Branch to thank all for being so generous in their donations during our Christmas program of 1970.

It is through the interest and support of the citizens like yourselves that 550 people had a beautiful gift to open Christmas morning.

In the past five years many homes which are called Homes for Special Care have been opened to accommodate patients from Ontario Hospital. These patients are beyond medical help but could receive a little more personal care in a home, and also leave room for the person who needs immediate attention.

Volunteers of the Association visit as many homes as possible on a regular basis. During the visits games are played, sing-songs are held, and there is some occupational therapy if possible. Anything the patients are capable of doing.

Our special thanks to the volunteers, to the Picton Fire Department, to the stores who gave 10 per cent discount on merchandise bought or had boxes in the stores. To the BCI Key Club for looking after the boxes in the stores, also a special thank you to the Conservative Association of Belleville for their generous donation of $300 to the CMHA and to Dr. Potter and President of the Association, Roy K. Jeffrey, for their interest.

Our thanks to all those who helped in any way, to make someone's Christmas just a little more brighter.

Today In History

Jan. 18, 1971 . . .

Wilhelm I of Prussia proclaimed himself emperor of Germany 100 years ago today—in 1871—at Versailles, after the brief Franco-Prussian war. The new empire excluded Austria but included four kingdoms, five grand duchies, 13 other duchies or principalities and three free cities. The empire lasted until Nov. 9, 1918, when Wilhelm II, son of Wilhelm I, fled to Holland after the collapse of order in Berlin just before the end of the First World War.

1957—Three USAF B-52 bombers completed circumnavigation of the world non-stop in 45 hours 19 minutes with in-flight refuelling.

1956—Leon Balcer, a 38-year-old member of Parliament, became the youngest president of the Progressive Conservative Association of Canada.

1951—The Mount Lamington volcano in New Guinea erupted aith a death toll estimated at 40,000.

65 Per Cent Membership Clause Is 'Anti-Union' Says Labor Council

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The decision of the Ontario Government to demand unions sign up 65 per cent of all employees in the bargaining unit before they can be certified as the collective bargaining agent is blatant anti-unionism. Not only do the employees have to sign union cards but they have to pay $1 and sign and countersign a receipt before their intentions to join the union is accepted by the Labor Board.

The government with its new legislaion now adds new obstacles to union certification, if a vote is ordered, a third choice is to be placed on the ballot, do you want no union? This, with the 65 per cent majority requirements, makes it almost impossible to organize the small plants where the lowest wages and worst working conditions are encountered.

This legislation is vigorously opposed by the union movement. To our knowledge it has not been sought by the larger companies that are already organized. It can only be interpreted as showing the anti-union bias of the present government and its determination that workers who need union protection most will have as difficult a time as legally possible in obtaining it.

ROBERT ANDRUS,
President, Quinte Labor Council

Quebec Scene

Dilemma of the Catholic Church in A Restless Society

Montreal La Presse—The Catholic Church in Quebec is in a dilemma. It was criticized not long ago for talking too much. Today it is asked to pronounce itself on most of the important questions preoccupying Quebec society.

Formerly it was not appreciated if the church mixed with political power. Many Christians now want it to point out the people's complaints . . .

The church in Quebec is worried It now must make choices which will decide its influence on the growing generation.

It knows the physical and moral miseries of men and women in the poor areas of our cities and the poor parishes of the countryside. It wonders about the causes of violence in our society. It knows that the language it uses is sometimes too obscure or too subtle to be really understood by those who must understand it. . . .

The church has become more humble. . . . Thus, the phenomenon of anti-clericalism which marked the 1950s and 1960s has gradually disappeared. The church no longer unites everyone, but it has no enraged enemies. However, it found out too late it had let apathetic people multiply around its steeples. . . .

In 1970, the Quebec episcopate drew itself closer, by word and deed, to disfavored groups. In Montreal, Msgr. Paul Gregoire made the poor one of his principal concerns without paternalism. During the October crisis, Quebec bishops stated without fanfare that "injustice feeds violence" and that justice should be given "to the legitimate aspirations of groups." . . .

Despite the dilemma in which it finds itself, the church is not mistaken in making the anguish of deprived social groups its preoccupation. . . . Neither is it going wrong by associating itself with the worries and hopes of a people still to decide their own destiny. It may make errors. It may sometimes draw reproach on itself. But the worst error it could make would be to be absent.

Irving's A Lively Teacher

Computer with Sense of Humor Helps Vancouver Students

NORTH VANCOUVER, B.C. (CP) — Irving, the talkative computer, is a lively teacher with a sense of humor.

At Handsworth secondary school in North Vancouver, the students are in love with Irving and rely on him when faced with problems in chemistry, physics, mathematics or biology.

Actually, Irving "lives" in the library at Simon Fraser University, 15 miles away. He is connected with two computer receivers in the North Vancouver school by a special "dedicated line."

Handsworth students told a reporter recently that Irving kids them along a lot and they like it. He doesn't get angry or blow a fuse when they give wrong answers to try to confuse him. He exhorts them to do better. Then, when they do, he praises them.

A reporter sent a message on one of the Handsworth receivers and was warned not to fool around.

"Your name is mud if you goof!" warned Irving.

But aside from his quips and wisecracks Irving is loaded with useful information.

Bob Johnston, chemistry teacher at Handsworth, said the students spend long periods enjoying individual instruction with him.

"He's sort of a cross between mechanical programmed learning and a human teacher," said Mr. Johnston. "His process is known as computer-assisted instruction."

Students take questions on a variety of subjects to Irving, type them out, punch the "return" button and Irving replies immediately with the correct answers.

The school is planning to extend the use to English and French lessons shortly.

Each student is given a code number. So as not to take too much time of human teachers, a corps of students has been trained as guides for the others in the correct use of the machines. Two are always on duty.

Not only does Irving answer questions, but he can deliver a neatly typed mini-lecture in any of his subjects on call. He usually follows up with questions on the material and makes students keep repeating until they hit the correct answer.

If the student succeeds after several false starts, Irving will compliment him with "fantastic," "genius child," or some other commendation.

This is the first term of a one-year experimental program which costs the North Vancouver school board nothing. It is being financed by grants from International Business Machines and from the Educational Research Institute of B.C. with B.C. Telephone providing the "dedicated line" without charge.

"It's a real success so far," says Pat Bell, Handsworth principal. "We hope computer-assisted instruction can be continued in future years."

Color Determines S.A. Position

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — The term "non-white" is resented in South Africa, the Institute of Race Relations says.

The institute is important in the only major country which officially arranges the lives of its citizens according to skin color.

Whites run things. The vast "non-white majority" includes Bantu, Colored and Asians, each with precise sub-groupings.

Bantu is the official term for Africans, or blacks, once known as natives or kaffirs. The 14.8 million blacks are divided into major tribal groupings: Xhosa, Zulu, Sotho, Tswana, Shangaan or Tsonga, Swazi, Ndebele, Venda, and more than a quarter million others.

Coloreds are those of mixed ancestry, an indigenous people in a land once fought over by white settlers and nomadic black tribesmen. The 1.9 million colored community includes descendants of Hottentots and some bushmen. Cape Malays are a distinct colored sub-group which for centuries preserved its identity, culture, customs and Mohammedan religion.

The 614,000 Asians are mostly Indians plus a smattering of Pakistanis. They first arrived to labor in sugar plantations along the Indian Ocean in the 19th century. Few of the Asian community have taken advantage of a government immigration plan which subsidizes those who want to return to their country of origin.

The institute feels that the sweeping label "non-white" is negative and offensive to those so designated.

"If we have to use terms while there are different systems of administration for different groups, we must try to use terms acceptable to the people concerned," says Muriel Horrell, the institute's chief researcher.

A mild and so far non-militant strain of the "black is beautiful" idea is spreading in South Africa. But there's little chance of the cumbersome "non-white is beautiful" catching on.

For some years the labels European and non-European have been used for white and non-white. A couple from the United States living in a Johannesburg apartment found odd the warning painted on the elevator doors: "Europeans Only."

Even more mind-boggling has been the development of "honorary whites" and "other coloreds."

Honorary white is an unofficial designation used for special non-white visitors. It allows them to enjoy pure-white status.

Japan buys a lot of South African iron ore and other goods. Japanese are honorary whites. There is no vital trade with Formosa, Hong Kong or mainland China. Chinese are Asians.

Iran's Davis Cup tennis team played in South Africa. Iranian technicians are helping build an oil refinery. They are regarded as honorary whites.

The official term "other coloreds" has evolved since 1967.

Many people of mixed blood dislike it as derogatory and meaningless.

An interior department spokesman defines an other colored as "a person who is not included in the Cape colored group, the Malay group, the Griqua group, the Chinese group, the Indian group or the other Asiatic group and who is not classified as a white person or Bantu."

There is a trend among some Africans to term whites "non-blacks."

Safety Goggles Injure Driver

PICTON (Staff) — A Carrying Place man injured while snowmobiling on the bay this weekend received treatment for facial cuts at Belleville General Hospital.

Richard Kirby, 47, lost control of his machine while riding on the bay in the Rednersvill area, an OPP spokesman said.

The snowmobile overturned and its driver skidded on the ice, injuring his face which was cut by the protective goggles he was wearing.

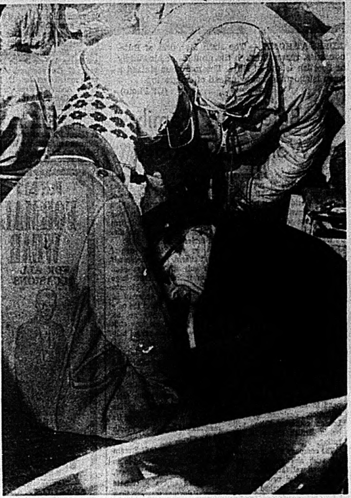
Clergy Addressed By Y Secretary

A meeting of the Belleville Ministerial Association was held recently at which time D. G. Diamentides general secretary of the local YMCA spoke to the clergy.

Having been associated with the Y here for a number of years Mr. Diamantides recently returned from Greece where he worked with the Y. He gave a short history of the Y in Greece and told of the "dark ages of the Y" during the war. At this time the organization was banned and the facilities used in turn by the Italian, German and Allied armies.

The speaker also shared his feelings and impressions about the social and political situation in Greece today. This political takeover prevented a Communist victory at the polls that would have ultimately led to Russian access to the Mediterranean Sea — a matter that the British, and now the Americans, have blocked for more than a century. The Greek people feel that their King is a self imposed exile and would not hinder his return if he would forfeit such powers as his right to appoint military personnel.

It was felt by the members of the association that this was a most interesting account of a prime world news item.



Trenton Race Casualty

David Pratt received St. John Ambulance first aid from Frank Burger following a run-in with a snowmobile. David sustained bruises to the lower portion of his body after he was struck by a snowmobile at the Trenton Snowmobile Races held Sunday at Bain Park. According to bystanders who witnessed the accident, neither the boy nor the vehicle operator were near the main race site.

Under-channel Tunnel Is Alive

PARIS (Reuter) — The concept of a tunnel joining Britain and France under the English Channel is still on the drawing board with Paris pushing hard for the project and London apparently wavering.

Although the French are possibly keener than ever, the British are considered to be as hesitant as they were when the first experimental shafts were sunk almost 100 years ago.

A formal decision from London is expected soon on whether the British governments wants to go ahead with the formidable $720 million project. Thirty-three miles in length, it would be the world's longest tunnel.

Sensing a lack of enthusiasm in London, the French are making a display of vocal support for the tunnel with the usually-guarded President Georges Pompidou as cheer leader.

"This project will transform Britain's relations with the rest of Europe—and above all with France," Pompidou said recently.

Some thought he was hinting that it might help Britain's bid to join the European Common Market.

At the same time, the French government went on record as taking a "frankly positive" attitude toward the tunnel. Its private backers see the idea as a rail link bored into the channel floor between the ports of Dover, England, and Calais, France.

French officials hope for a similarly positive attitude from London when Prime Minister Edward Heath's government—a newcomer to the tunnel wrangle—makes known its decision. This is likely some time this year.

It seems clear that France stands to gain more immediate economic benefit from the tunnel than Britain. Many more British tourists go to France than the number of Frenchmen going to Britain.

More important, much of France's industry is situated in the north of the country not far from Calais and therefore close to the British market. With a tunnel to speed the transport of goods to England, France could hope to gain over West German, Dutch and other European exporters.

But Britain's industrial heart is in the midlands and the north. The Dover tunnel terminal, although not far from London, would lead into the fields of Kent and Sussex in England's rural south.

According to British thinking, the heat is more on France than on Britain to get the tunnel project under way.

Another cause for possible hesitation by London is the Heath government's reluctance to become involved in expensive new projects at a time when the British economy is still in difficulties.

The history of the tunnel concept is full of stops and starts. Britain's sense of island security has usually been the barrier.

As far back as 1802, one of Napoleon's engineers suggested a carriage-way under the Dover Straits. The British said they thought a pipe laid on the channel floor would be better, but nothing came of either plan.

In the 1870s, shafts were sunk and tunnels started on both sides of the water. Britain stopped the digging amid fears it might be inviting an invasion from the Continent.

The same fears were uppermost in 1924, and probably again in 1930, when Britain turned down further proposals to start work on a tunnel.

But modern warfare, with its nuclear weaponry, made such fears outmoded and in 1966 France and Britain reached a promising consensus on the need for an undersea link.

They gave tentative blessing to plans drawn up by private British, French and other financial interests. The private promoters eventually crystallized their dream into a proposed rail tunnel for freight and passenger trains.

Trains travelling at 100 miles an hour could carry close to five million tons of merchandise and nine million passengers a year between the two countries.

Passengers could drive their cars onto trains at one terminal and drive off at the other in a short time.

Management Request Stalls Negotiations

A request by management for continuation of the present contract for another year with no wage increases for employees, continues to stall settlement of a new work agreement for boot and shoe workers at the Bata Shoe Company.

The contract between the Bata Shoe Company and Boot and Shoe Workers Unions at Batawa, Picton and Campbellford expired on Oct. 3 last year and after 10 meetings settlement has still not been reached.

Wages and seniority rights are the main issues at stake in the dispute.

The latest negotiating meeting between union representatives and management was held last week at the Sun Valley Motor Inn in Belleville, with G. D. Greenaway of the conciliation branch of the Ontario Department of Labor present in an effort to bring about an agreement.

The meeting, however, was unsuccessful and a further meeting at Sun Valley has been arranged for Friday, Feb. 5.

Approximately 800 workers, the vast majority at the Batawa plant, are involved.

Giant Model of Gas Plant 10 Months in the Making

FOX CREEK, Alta. (CP) — Mike Akerson loomed over the brightly colored plastic model, looking like industry's answer to the Jolly Green Giant as he nudged a tiny conduit into place instead of a can of peas.

Mr. Akerson has been working on the model for 10 months and he's still not quite finished.

The model is an intricate scaled-down copy of Chevron Standard's Kaybob South plant 3 which now is being carved out of the wilderness on a plateau 35 miles south of this tiny community in west-central Alberta.

Mr. Akerson, 38, employed by Ralph M. Parsons Co. of Los Angeles, prime contractor for the plant, had been building similar models for 14 years, a well-paying occupation he "just sort of grew into."

"I went to a junior college shortly after I left the seas, that was the U.S. merchant navy, and one of the courses was piping draughting. This is what it led to."

The model of the Chevron natural gas plant covers 855 square feet and for convenience in moving it, usually by aircraft, it breaks down into 45 sections.

Costing between "$100,000 and $150,000," it is a precise 1-32 three-dimensional blueprint of the $80 million plant being hammered together around the building where Mr. Akerson works.

"It's hard to put a precise figure on it at this stage. I'll work 50 to 60 hours a week when they're really pushing some part of the construction, but it usually runs about 40 hours a week. This is why it's hard to put a price on the model right now."

Color coded to represent different pressures in thousands of pipes and numerous functions of the plant, the model is used by engineers during construction and will be used as a training aid when the plant goes "on stream" next summer.

By then the plant will be pulling 445 million cubic feet of gas out of the Kaybob South formation and extracting 35,400 barrels of condensate, a ligh crude oil; 8,300 barrels of propane, 6,900 barrels of butane and 2,850 tons of sulphur as well as 50 million cubic feet of gas that will be fed into Alberta Gas Trunk Lines Ltd. pipelines.

The rest of the gas will be recycled back underground to maintain pressure for more efficient recovery instead of being "flared" or burned off as waste.

Mike Akerson is one of 18 people employed by the Parsons firm in its industrial modelling division and his job has taken him to Cape Kennedy for work on the Titan 3 project and to other parts of the U.S. for work on Minuteman missile installations.

"I was at the Cape when they worked on Dynasoar, the space glider project, and the Titan 3 work consisted of the launch complex, the mobile service unit, the umbilical tower and the carrier that transports the booster to the launch site."

It was obvious he enjoys his work, finding in it a relaxation most people abandon when they outgrow plastic model kits of cars, aircraft and ships when they are teenagers.

"I built many models in those days," he said, bending and squinting as he tried to line up a four-foot length of miniature pipe, "but of course there was nothing quite like this."

Commission Wants To Legislate Change

TORONTO (CP) — Though the royal commission on the status of women was, in part, a byproduct of revolution, the revolution is not acknowledged in the commission's report, says Prof. Janet Salaff.

She says the commissioners produced a legislative report that looks at the status of women in isolation.

"They want to legislate changes where they can.

"But they never really analysed why we have these reports now Why are we interested in the status of women? This is a bourgeois humanitarian report. It deals with status as an individual problem.'

Prof. Salaff, assistant professor in the department of sociology at the University of Toronto, has specialized in the study of women in Asia. Next year she will teach a course on the role of women in history.

She suggested in an interview one reason the status of women commission was appointed is that this is a period of revolution.

"In revolutionary periods feminism has always been a key issue, because when you question the authority structure, then you question the authority of men.

"Women are treated as a second-class group partly because there is a dominant group. Women are bypassed, excluded, often quite casually.

"There are cliques. Men play sports, join clubs. The ability of women to rise to the top is limited because they cannot participate . . . in this wheeling and dealing.

"It is difficult for men in our society to have a decent relationship with women.

"I don't think there's ever been a society that has solved this problem."

She says she believes the legislation recommended by the commissioners can go part way to solving it.

"It is important to establish equality under the law for men and women. It allows women to rise to the level of their ability, because it gives them recourse to law.

"It is a critical foundation for us, to get rid of this feudal legislation.

"But what we really need to change are the stereotypes and images that put women in a mould."

She says the report does deal with some other facts of life that have added to the interest in women's status, but often in terms of the work force, where legislation might be effective.

It discusses the changed medical, birth and death statistics, the demographic facts. Women live longer, have fewer children over a shorter period of time than ever before When the children leave home women have what amounts to a third life before them.

"This seems to be the commissioners' problem, how to get women in the third cycle integrated back into society.

"The demographic change is really important. Without it, you have had to tie women to child-bearing.

"But participation in the labor force is not the sole source of oppression. Now that we have solved the problem of birth, the rigid nuclear family controls women more than participation in the labor force."

The nuclear family is the isolated family of husband, wife and child that operates without the extensions of former years, without the aunts, uncles, cousins and grandparents.

Something new in all this, says Prof. Salaff, is the effort to blur sex role definitions, especially among the young. Pink is not necessarily for girls or blue for boys.

The report deals with this factor by calling for changes in text books, in family life courses and for legislative changes to make it illegal in most cases to specify male or female as a qualification for a job.

Prof. Salaff says the women who worked at jobs or as volunteers during the two world wars also helped establish the demand for a status of women commission.

"The parents of women in their 30s now taught them that they mustn't just stay at home."

She says economics could provoke a backlash.

"An immediate problem has to do with the depression we're in now.

"And there could be a redundance of women any year now, an abundance of people able to work as the large families of the 1950s grow older.

"Then we can expect a backlash, people saying: 'that's all very well, but we can't hire all the men. This is no time to think about such problems.' "

KEEPING THE ISLANDERS AT HOME — The sixth Marquess of Bute, salesman for his island industries, roams through the grounds of his stately home, Mountstuart, on the Scottish Island of Bute. The marquess started a program of local jobs to keep islanders at home instead of emigrating. (CP Photo)

Marquess of Bute Puts Family Fortunes to Work in Industry

ROTHESAY, Isle of Bute (CP) — John Crichton-Stuart, sixth Marquess of Bute, Earl of Dumfries, Viscount Ayr, Baron Mountstuart and holder of nine other historic titles, might well have settled back on his ancestral acres and become just another big Scottish landowner spending most of his time in London or southeast England.

Instead, he quit the Scots Guards on his father's death in 1956 and started putting the family fortune to work developing some light industry on the island of Bute, a balmy enclave off the west coast of Scotland almost entirely owned by the Bute family.

For the first time in decades, there now is the incentive of local jobs to keep the islanders home instead of moving to mainland occupations in Glasgow or emigrating to Canada and the United States.

Canada was always the traditional goal for Bute islanders seeking a new land. The most prominent natural landmark on the 15-mile-long, crescent-shaped island is called Canada Hill because it was the last feature emigrants saw as they sailed out of the Firth of Clyde to settle in Nova Scotia or Ontario.

The present Lord Bute's father, the fifth Marquess, began the task of providing jobs on the island after the Second World War, setting up a tweed-weaving business which gave work to demobilized soldiers.

When the present marquess succeeded, he found Bute Looms "just bumbling along" with less than a dozen employees. Since then, it has expanded into a flourishing export trade, with do-it-yourself packs of skirt lengths and matching knitting wool selling well in Canadian and U.S. stores. The glowing colors of Bute tweeds now are also featured in several leading British couture collections.

This year, Bute Looms is going into the ready-to-wear market for both men and women, and its staff is to expand to about 100. The first collection, designed by the London couturier Clive, will be in British stores in the spring.

The company also is exploring such sidelines as upholstery and wall fabrics, and recently installed new machinery in its whitewashed Rothesay headquarters—formerly an old convent building—to cope with the wider lengths required for the new midi fashions.

With a special eye to the North American market, Bute's designers have planned a range of lightweight tweeds for 1971 which bear scant relationship to the hairy, thick Harris tweeds of the Hebrides farther north.

The colors are subtle and sophisticated—a particularly attractive one being rosewood, a brownish-pink, stripes or plaid patterns. But for traditionalists, some of the cloths still feature the interweaving of deer hair which gives tweed its characteristically rough and hardwearing feel.

Lord Bute, now 37, spends most of his time travelling through Britain and across the Atlantic in the interests of his island enterprises, which in addition to tweed include tourism and a seafood firm supplying scallops to the dinner-tables of Paris.

A shy and diffident man of great charm, he finds himself with only a few days each month to relax in his huge Victorian mansion Mountstuart, set in 100 acres of island woodland. About the only time all the family get together is when his four children are home on school holidays.

Tourism is Bute's biggest industry after agriculture and provides a livelihood for a considerable slice of the island's 9,000 population, most of them concentrated in the resort town of Rothesay on its magnificent bay at the mouth of the Clyde.

Washed by the Gulf Stream on two sides and nestled in an arm of the Argyllshire coast, the island enjoys a climate several degrees warmer than the mainland, only six miles away.

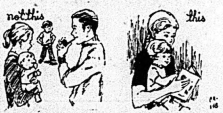
Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "Milly fusses and whines most of the time these days. Do you suppose it's just part of the 'terrible twos' stage."

Father: "I'm sure she's not jealous of the baby. She's crazy about him, wants to hold him and wouldn't hurt him for anything."

Milly may not show her fears by acting antagonistic toward the baby but if she's whiny and uphappy, it may be she feels the little newcomer is claiming her mother's love and time. Give her more special attention and reassure her constantly about her place in your life."

It's easy to consider behavior as "just a stage she's going through," but if a child is unhappy most of the time, it's likely the environment needs changing. Be understanding while she learns there is plenty of love to go around.

Hitchhiking No Answer To Pollution Problem

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We of the University of Michigan Environmental Action group are greatly upset at your anti-hitchhiking philosophy. Private automobiles are perhaps one of the most ecologically damaging factors in our society. When a person rides alone in his car he contributes a great deal more to environmental destruction than a group of people who ride in one car.

Your column is doing a serious disservice to those of us who feel strongly against cars and have decided not to own one. Public transportation is an alternative but it is often inadequate. It seems unfair that the people who own cars will benefit from our decision not to own cars (they, too, will have cleaner air) but thanks to you, they will refuse to assist us in our transportation needs. We suggest that you encourage the social acceptability of hitchhiking instead of knocking it. — J. W. L. ANN ARBOR, MICHIGAN.

DEAR J W. L.: I, too, am distressed about air pollution. The exhaust from cars does indeed present a threat to the ecological state of our country, but there are other threats to society — such as drug abuse which has accelerated violence and crime and produced a frightening disregard for, if you will pardon the expression, law and order. Drug addicts will do anything to get money.

I am not about to encourage my readers to pick up strangers when I know that muggings and burglaries are at an all-time high. In fact, hitchhiking is against the law in Illinois and many other states.

A better solution to the problem is community-organized car pools — workers driving friends, homemakers driving neighbors to do their marketing, mothers taking other people's children to school, along with their own. And better yet is the bicycle. If more Americans got off their duffs and did some exercising, they'd live longer.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Two months ago our little girl died of a heart defect. She was only a few weeks old so we didn't have much time to love her. Many of our friends have small babies. Since we lost our wee angel we have not been invited anywhere. I could not understand why we were suddenly cut off. My cousin told me yesterday and I am in a state of shock.

It seems our friends all have babies. They are afraid we will be reminded of our tragedy and the wounds will be re opened if we see how happy they are with their little ones so they don't invite us. Please, Ann, tell everyone who has this mistaken notion that they are not doing us a kindness. In fact, just the opposite is true. We have lost our child and we have accepted the loss as part of our lot. Now we are lonesome and we want to be around our friends. Thank you. — BILLINGS, MONTANA.

DEAR BILLINGS: Here is your letter and I hope your friends see it and include you once again. Thanks for writing. A letter such as yours can help to educate millions.

SIDNEY SOUTH WI

The January meeting of the Sidney South WI was held at the home of Mrs. L. May with 19 members and two visitors present.

Mrs. J. Campbell presided over the numerous items of business and reports were given by Mrs. G. Sills on birthday cards to Hastings Manor and by Mrs. L. May on the annual Christmas Party. 4-H leaders for the new club are Sidney South No. 1 - Mrs. G. Wilman and Mrs. G. Sills; Sidney South No. 2 - Mrs. J. Caddick and Mrs. C. Moon; Sidney South No. 3 - Mrs. J. Best and Mrs. G. Reid.

Mrs. J. Best reported on the 4-H Achievement Day which was most successful and Mrs. F. Meens gave the consumer's report.

The program was turned over to Mrs. W. Shortt, convener for Health and Home Economics who gave an interesting reading and introduced Mrs. Bill Jeune, guest speaker for the evening.

Mrs. Jeune and her husband holidayed in England last summer and returned to many places of interest from childhood days. She showed beautiful colored slides of the Irish Sea, Old Castles, movie stars' homes in Brighton, the English countryside and gardens as well as Westminster Abbey. Views inside different cathedrals showed the immense structure and the tremendous amount of work put forth in the building of these. Pictures also included the gifts given to Queen Victoria on her Golden Jubilee as well as the famed "Stonehenge".

A lively discussion period followed.

Mrs. K. Bush on behalf of the Lnstitute thanked Mrs. Jeune and presented her with a gift for a most enjoyable evening.

Make Your Own Decision About Separation

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I had a severe nervous breakdown and when I went to my sister's during my convalescence I was accused of running out on my children, by my fault-finding husband and his mother.

I eventually got into such a fight with his mother I ordered her never to set foot in my home again. Then last Christmas she wanted to forgive and forget. For my children's sake I gave in.

But, Doris, it is still no good. All of a sudden I just hate him. He has killed all feeling I had for him.

He won't consider a legal separation and our children (seven and nine years) don't want to leave as he is quite nice to them. They mean everything to me, and I wouldn't trust him with them. Is it possible that a legal separation could be forced on him? — All Through.

Dear Through: There are some apparently healthy people who think that anyone else who is ill is just putting it on. Or could it be that your husband has never let go of the apron strings?

If you honestly feel the jig is up, no seven - year - old child should hold you back. I have yet to hear of a youngster who really wanted his home to break up, yet the turmoil in yours would suggest that it does no one any good for you to be staying together.

You can leave without his consent on grounds of cruelty, mental or physical, and still claim support. Better stiffen your spine and take the steps which will promise you and your children a better future.

• • •

Dear Doris: This guy is 21 and I am 19. Just lately I haven't heard from him and I really am hooked on him and I am worried.

The last time we went out together we went to a party and he made me mad and I just walked out, but he came after me and we made up. — In Love.

Dear In Love: If your friendship can't survive a lover's quarrel, there is not much to do about it — unless you think now that you were unfair when you walked out on him.

In that case, send him a "missing you" card with a note on it to say that you are sorry about what happened and are looking forward to seeing him again. But don't sit around waiting for the phone to ring.

• • •

Dear Doris: I wrote to you about our daughter, who was 15 at the time. She wanted to quit school and we were having a lot of trouble with her.

Your advice was wonderful. After we dropped the subject, as you suggested, and let her have the summer free she came and said she wanted to continue at school. Things went very smoothly after that and I just wanted to say thank you. — Grateful.

Dear Grateful: You've made my day. It takes two to make advice work. Then to add the bonus of reporting back — well, that's really super!

Kitchen Tested Recipes

This French Recipe Can Make Fish Popular

By MARY MOORE

Two close relatives of mine were talking in my living room about Canadian fish and lamenting the fact that fish was not a regular item on all Canadian dinner tables. Many varieties of Canadian fish are available at nearly half the price of beef and our cooks should take advantage of this. The French who seem to hang on to their reputation of being the world's gourmet cooks, do wonders with the delicate sauces they apply to their fish.

I was encouraged to hear this conversation for we had just finished a fish dinner and it is the ease with which it was prepared and the sauce under which it was baked that I want to describe to you.

BAKED FISH FILLETS FRENCH STYLE

(Serves 6 or 7)

2 lbs. ocean perch (or other small fish) fillets
2 tbsps. margarine
2 tbsps. flour
1 cup hot milk
½ cup finely chopped celery with leaves (packed)
1 tsp. freeze-dried chives
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. MSG
¼ cup wine (or apple juice)

In a single overlapping layer in a large shallow baking dish, which may be carried to the dining room table, arrange the fish fillets. I have a large Corningware platter that is ideal for this. The beauty of the dish would be disturbed if you attempted to transfer the cooked fillets to a platter.

Make a sauce by blending together the margarine and flour and stirring in the milk until thick. Add the celery, chives, salt and MSG and cook stirring for about 2-3 min. Stir in the wine and spoon over the fish fillets, being sure all are covered. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. about 15 min. or until fish is opaque and will flake at the thickest parts. Do not overcook fish. Overcooking fish is the commonest of cooking faults. Keep in mind that it is a delicate, tender protein that does not require long cooking to make it tender.

Buy and serve Canadian fish at least once per week.

Economist Alarmed

U.S. Firms Drain Money from Canada

EDMONTON (CP) — A Toronto economist said Saturday that United State investment in Canada now has reached the stage where there is a financial drain on the Canadian economy, and nothing can be done about it at the moment.

Abraham Rotstein, an economics professor at the University of Toronto, said the profits of U.S.-controlled companies in Canada are taking out more than $1.6 billion a year but U.S. investment in Canada has fallen below that level.

Curiously enough, he said, much of the financing for these companies to expand in Canada is being done through Canadian banks and with Canadian money. But all the profits are going into American hands.

In 1969, about 60 per cent of the expansion of American companies in Canada was paid for in this way.

Dr. Rotstein said Canada is the only industrialized country in the non-Communist world without a clear policy about foreign investment.

More than $40 billion in U.S. capital has been invested in Canada, accounting for 90 per cent of the financial control over such industries as automobiles, rubber, petroleum and tobacco, he said.

Dr. Rotstein, speaking for the Committee for an Independent Canada, said he was not advocating nationalization of foreign-controlled industry but advocating a minimum of 51-per-cent Canadian ownership.

He told about 500 persons at a public meeting organized by the committee that Canada's economic growth has not benefited particularly by the lack of a policy on foreign ownership.

Canada's economic growth fluctuates at around three per cent annually, he said. Japan, with one of the strictest foreign-ownership policies, has an economic growth rate of about 13 per cent a year.

Dr. Rotstein said that if Canada is to determine its way of life in the future it must regain control of its economic future. The first step in this direction was a definite policy on foreign ownership.

Since 1960, he said, about 1,000 Canadian corporations have been taken over by U.S. international conglomerate companies which, by 1980, will control two-thirds of world production.

Toronto Meeting Cheers Man Accused in Quebec

TORONTO (CP) — Jacques Larue-Langlois, charged with seditious conspiracy but free on $5,000 bail, drew a two-minute ovation Sunday when he spoke at the Ontario College of Education on political events in Quebec.

At a meeting sponsored by the Emergency Committee for the Defence of Political Rights in Quebec, the former CBC radio producer in Montreal said:

"The War Measures Act and the political repression that followed are nothing but the reaction of the French-speaking and English-speaking Establishment against all that can threaten scandalous profits."

Mr. Larue-Langlois, also charged with being a member of the outlawed Front de Liberation du Quebec, also criticized the "witch hunt" he said is going on not only in Quebec but in all of Canada.

"Those who are still in prison," he said, "are not more guilty than those who are still outside."

He was referring to the fact that some people arrested after the War Measures Act was invoked last Oct. 16 have not yet been released on bail.

Among them are four of his co-accused—labor leader Michel Chartrand, lawyer Robert Lemieux, author Charles Gagnon and teacher Pierre Vallieres.

They will face trial Feb. 1.

Mr. Larue-Langlois also explained that revolution is "the radical change of a political and economic system by the will of the people and by the will of the majority."

More than 400 attended the meeting including about 50 marshalls. A committee spokesman said the marshalls were there to ensure order because of the possibility that members of the right wing Edmund Burke Society might attempt to disrupt the meeting.

Dunlop Locals Reject Request for Pay Cut

OSHAWA (CP) — The two union locals at the Dunlop Canada Ltd. plant at nearby Whitby rejected at separate meetings here Sunday a company request that they take 10-per-cent pay cuts.

The company was to consider early today a counter-proposal approved by both locals, and union and management were expected to issue a joint statement.

Details have not been released of the counter-proposal approved by United Rubberworkers of America Local 494, plant workers, and Local 743, office workers.

Local 494 president David MacKinlay said Sunday company officials asked him and Audrey Donaher, Local 743 president, to meet with them at 8 a.m. today to issue a joint statement.

"They didn't get all they wanted, but they're quite happy with what we're doing," said Mr. MacKinlay.

John Crittenden, the company's vice-president for manufacturing said company officials would have to discuss implications of the union's counter-resolution before any statement would be made.

He said a statement might be issued later today.

When Dunlop president B. E. James of Whitby requested the wage cut for all employees "from the president down," he said the company might be forced to close its Whitby plant as an alternative.

NDP Leadership Candidates Will Tour 17 Canadian Cities

TORONTO (CP) — A 17-city tour of Canada by candidates for the leadership of the national New Democratic Party was announced Sunday by the party's governing council.

Starting Feb. 4 in Thunder Bay, and ending March 24 in Ottawa, the tour will take the form of public meetings at which the candidates will appear for what was described as "bear-pit confrontation."

John F. Kinzel of Ottawa, co-ordinator for the leadership convention April 21-24, said the bear-pit sessions will be financed by the party. Each candidates will be provided with a limit of $1,000 for travelling costs, with the party paying for hall rentals, and advertising campaigns.

Mr. Kinzel said each candidate will be permitted to make a brief opening statement, and then the meeting will be turned over to questions from the floor.

Among the five declared candidates so far are David Lewis, deputy party leader, and two NDP members of Parliament—Ed Broadbent, Oshawa-Whitby, and Frank Howard, Skeena, B.C. Other hopefuls are John Harney, former secretary of the Ontario NDP, and James Laxer, Queen's University lecturer and follower of the radical nationalist policies of Prof. Melvin Watkins.

Retiring Leader T. C. Douglas said he will remain in the background during the tour, appearing only at one bear-pit session, in Edmonton Feb. 6, because the Alberta provincial convention is being held on that weekend.

Other meetings: Saskatoon Feb. 5; Sudbury Feb. 13; Halifax Feb. 18; Moncton Feb. 19; Montreal Feb. 20; Toronto Feb. 26; Winnipeg March 3; Brandon March 4; Regina March 6; Nanaimo March 8; Vancouver March 9; Kamloops March 11; Hamilton March 19 and Windsor March 20.

Ali Takes Cake

Muhammed Ali cuts pieces of his birthday cake for Jerry Perenchio, left, and Jack Kent Cooke, during news conference in Los Angeles. Cooke and Perenchio are the financial backers of Ali's title fight with Joe Frazier which they announced Friday would gross in the neighborhood of $35 million. Besides the birthday cake, Perenchio and Cooke presented Ali with a huge cheque for $2½ million, which is his guarantee for the fight. Ali will be 29 on Sunday. (AP Wirephoto)

Most Elusive Super Bowl

Colts Win Comedy of Errors

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — For almost 59 minutes, the most elusive of Super Bowl titles ticked off anxious fingertips and slipped through desperate hands before finally settling in the vise-like embrace of Mike Curtis and the relentless Baltimore Colts.

Curtis's interception, fifth of six pass thefts in a struggle full of errors, set up a 32-yard field goal by rookie Jim O'Brien with five seconds to play Sunday that gave the Colts a 16-13 comeback victory over Dallas Cowboys.

"I grabbed that ball so hard I almost squeezed the air out of it," said the hard-rock middle linebacker, who picked off a deflected pass with 69 seconds remainig.

"I didn't even think about runig with it right away," Curtis said. "I felt maybe I should just fall on the ground so I wouldn't fumble it away."

Fumbles had given Dallas 10 points and cost the Colts seven more.

But Curtis rambled 13 yards to the Dallas 28. After two running plays gained three yards and consumed 60 seconds, Earl Morrall, the Colts' 36-year-old backup quarterback, called time out.

Morall, scapegoat of Baltimore's 16-7 Super Bowl loss to New York Jets two years ago but a hero Sunday in relief of battered Johny Unitas, then spotted the ball for O'Brien. The mop-haired, 22-year-old kicker split the uprights for the winning three points before an Orange Bowl crowd of 80,055.

"It was so sweet," Morrall said.

The favored Cowboys led 13-6 at the half, and Unitas, flattened by George Andrei as he threw his second interception of the game, went to the sidelines in the second quarter with cracked ribs.

Morrall drove the Colts to a first down at the Dallas two, but failed to get a touchdown across just before intermission.

In the second half, Chuck Howley's interception in the end zone and Eddie Hinton's fumble through the end zone blunted two more Baltimore scoring bids.

After Cornell Green stripped the ball from Hinton, who had caught a desperation pass from halfback Sam Havrilak, Dallas quarterback Craig Morton tried to hit fullback Walt Garrison with a third-down pass.

But Baltimore's Jim Duncan tipped the ball to safety Rick Volk, who sprinted 30 yards to the Cowboys' three. Two plays later, Tom Nowatzke, the Colts' prize free agent pickup, bulled into the end zone.

O'Brien, whose earlier extra point kick had been blocked after a deflected Unitas pass wound up in John Mackey's arms for a 75-yard touchdown play, then booted the tying conversion.

There were 7½ minutes to play. But the $15,000-a-man winners' shares appeared certain to be up for grabs in sudden-death overtime when neither team could move the ball on its next series.

The Colts had beaten the New York Giants 12 years earlier in the NFL's only other sudden death championship game. And Unitas, architect of that victory, was warming up on the sidelines after having his ribs x-rayed, as the minutes ticked away.

"I wasn't looking over my shoulder," Morrall said.

Dallas' Dan Reeves was doing just that at the 13:51 mark when Morton's pass bounced off his outstretched hands and Curtis made the biggest interception of his life.

"It was right in my hands," Curtis said.

Curtis had come up with an earlier saver after Duncan fumbled away the second half kickoff to the Cowboys deep in Baltimore territory. With a first-and-goal from the two, Curtis jarred the ball away from rookie Duane Thomas, who was held to 37 rushing yards, and Duncan recovered the fumble.

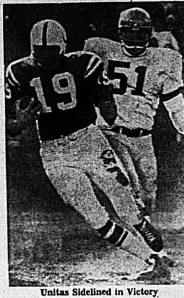
"That undoubtedly was the big play of the game," said Tom Landry, the Cowboys' coach.

"The Mad Dog (Curtis) is the best middle linebacker in the league," said Billy Ray Smith, the rugged defensive tackle who played his last game for the Colts Sunday. "And they can say what they want about this ball club, but we didn't give up. This club doesn't have a give-up bone in its body.

"We did everything we could to give it to them, but we hung in when the going was tough, and in the end result that's what counts."

Then Smith spotted O'Brien in the midst of a swarm of reporters.

"What are you doing over there with all those guys?" he roared. "You only worked five seconds today—and you missed an extra point."



Unitas Sidelined in Victory

Shaw Beats Army

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — "You can hear those Arnold Palmer yells all over the course," said Tom Shaw, who overcame the din of Arnie's Army and won the $135,000 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am golf tournament Sunday.

Shaw's victory ended a year-long slump and left Palmer, the game's biggest name, still looking for his first tournament victory since 1969.

The 28-year-old blonde from Oregon finished with a two-under-par 70 on the 6,777-yard, par-72 Pebble Beach course, and a 72-hole total of 278. Palmer shot a 71 for 280.

Shaw began the final round with a one-stroke edge on Palmer, and as he stood on the second fairway he heard that he was one stroke behind. Palmer holed a chip shot from 40 feet for an eagle-three at the second green and momentarily took the lead.

Shaw took the lead for keeps when Palmer three-putted for a one-over-par on the fifth hole.

Third place went to Bob Murphy, who closed with a 69 for a 282 total. Jerry Heard with a 67, Tom Weiskopf, with a 72, and Howie Johnson, who shot 74, tied for third at 284.

George Knudson of Toronto, making his first start this year, picked up $1,219 after he shot a final-round 72 for a 290 total.

He Means 'World'

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Commissioner Bowie Kuhn said Sunday he sees further expansion of major league baseball and possibly a true world series with U.S. teams competing against those from other countries.

"Japan and Latin America come to mind, and baseball is the fastest growing sport in Europe" he said. "It is possible that at some time we could have a world series with those countries or take in cities from other countries into our structure through traditional expansion."

Kunn said baseball definitely plans to expand in the future. He mentioned Dallas as a logical site, but couldn't predict when it would happen.

Declines Sinden Invitation

Howe Says He's Not All-Star

BOSTON (CP) — Coach Harry Sinden is having trouble keeping his National Hockey League East All-Star team intact with one right winger injured in league action Sunday and another declining to play.

Johnny McKenzie of Boston Bruins, one of the right wingers chosen in the vote by NHL hockey writers to play in Tuesday night's all-star game here, was sidelined with a shoulder separation in Sunday's game against Toronto Maple Leafs.

And Gordie Howe, selected later by Sinden to fill out the East roster, announced Sunday night he has turned down the coach's invitation.

Sinden, who coached the Bruins to the Stanley Cup last season before retiring to a business post, said Sunday night he would replace the injured McKenzie with Eddie Westfall of the Bruins. There was no immediate word on who he would invite to replace Howe.

Howe, who has played in a record 21 all-star games, said in Detroit:

"I'm not playing this year—I don't deserve it. I don't want to fool anybody."

The 42-year-old veteran has not returned to form since a rib injury kept him out of the Detroit Red Wings roster most of December.

"Besides," Howe said, "if I went, I'd just sit anyway."

Howe has played in all the all-star games since 1948, with the exception of 1956 and 1966. He holds several all-star records, including most goals, assists and points with a 10-8-18 record.

"It's a wonderful honor," said Westfall when he heard he was to replace McKenzie, "but I hate it to be at the expense of Johnny McKenzie.

"Right now, I'm looking beyond the all-star game. We're going out and win for McKenzie."

McKenzie had scored 18 goals and 32 assists for the Bruins this season before he was sidelined early in a 9-1 Boston win over Toronto. The right winger left the game after colliding with Toronto defenceman Jim Dorey.

McKenzie is actually the second right winger who will miss the game because of injuries. Ken Schinkel of Pittsburgh Penguins was chosen for the West team but now is out of action with a broken collarbone.

West coach Scotty Bowman, now general manager of St. Louis Blues, the team he coached to the West Division championship the last two seasons, has picked Gary Sabourin of the Blues to replace Schinkel.

The East-West format for the all-star game started in 1969 with the teams playing to a 3-3 tie at Montreal. Last year's all-star game at St. Louis saw the East take a 4-1 victory.

Tuesday night's game will be televised on the CBC national network beginning at 8:30 p.m. EST.

Replacement Scores Two

Bruins Lose McKenzie, Still Have Momentum

Even the loss of an all-star right winger, who has 50 points in the first half of the National Hockey League season, failed to slow Boston Bruins Sunday as they continued their romp to another record in goal production.

Right winger Johnny McKenzie was sidelined early in the game with a separated left shoulder but his replacement, Don Marcotte, scored twice as the Bruins went on to whip Toronto Maple Leafs 9-1.

The scoring outbreak left the Bruins with a total of 215 goals scored in 44 games. With 34 games remaining, they need 89 more goals to pass the season record of 303 goals the Bruins themselves set in 1968-69.

What makes the feat even more remarkable is the fact that less than four years ago the Bruins had just completed their seventh consecutive season out of the playoffs and with a season goal scoring total of 182.

The Sunday night victory gave the Bruins a three-point lead in the East Division over New York Rangers, who were beaten 4-3 by the Black Hawks in Chicago.

In other Sunday games, Minnesota North Stars shut out Detroit Red Wings 2-0, Los Angeles Kings stopped Philadelphia Flyers 4-1, Buffalo Sabres earned a 4-4 tie with Montreal Canadiens and Vancouver Canucks downed California Golden Seals 3-1.

In Saturday action, Montreal beat the Bruins 4-2, Toronto whipped Los Angeles 8-1, Pittsburgh Penguins edged Vancouver 4-3, Philadelphia downed Detroit 4-2, St. Louis Blues defeated Chicago 3-2 and Buffalo beat Minnesota 4-3.

McKenzie, who has 18 goals and 32 assists, will be sidelined indefinitely with the shoulder injury he suffered early in the first period in a collision with Toronto's Jim Dorey.

The right winger had been selected to play in Tuesday's East-West all-star match in Boston and Harry Sinden, former Boston coach who is returning to coach the East All-Stars, immediately picked Bruin Eddie Westfall to fill McKenzie's spot.

Marcotte filled the vacancy in the Bruin lineup as he helped set up a goal by Fred Stanfield as well as scoring twice himself.

JOHNNY McKENZIE

Centre Phil Esposito, the league's scoring leader, collected his 42nd goal and 44th and 45th assists as the Bruins pelted Toronto goalie Bruce Gamble with 54 shots.

The Leafs tried Gerry Cheevers with only 24 shots and a tip-in by Dave Keon spoiled the Boston netminder's bid for a shutout.

The loss marred the start of a six-game road trip by the Leafs.

New York dropped a chance to stay within one point of the Bruins when they let a 3-0 lead slip away at Chicago.

The Rangers piled all of their scoring into the first period and then watched as goals by Stan Mikita, Bobby Hull and Gerry Pinder drew the Hawks even.

A shot from the point by defenceman Bill White won the game for the Hawks and put them 11 points in front of second-place St. Louis in the West Division.

Dick Duff, a veteran of six seasons with Montreal, spoiled the night for his former teammates when he got the tying goal for Buffalo at 15:38 of the final period.

Frank Mahovlich scored his second goal in his third game with Canadiens since moving from Detroit to start the scoring at Buffalo. The Sabres took a 2-1 lead before the end of the first period but brother Pete Mahovlich tied it for Montreal.

Goals by Phil Roberto and Marc Tardif in the third period gave Montreal a 4-3 lead that was wiped out with Duff's third goal of the season.

Danny Grant and Tommy Williams handled the scoring and goalie Cesare Maniago recorded his third season shutout as Minnesota stopped the Red Wings in Detroit.

Los Angeles bounced back from its whipping in Toronto Saturday to hand Philadelphia its first loss in seven games.

Backed by the goaltending of Denis Dejordy, the Kings got a first-period goal by Noel Price before putting the game out of reach with three scores in the final session.

The Flyers outshot the Kings 32-28 but only Andre Lacroix managed to slip one past Dejordy.

Vancouver, on goals by Danny Johnson, Ray Cullen and Rosaire Paiement, broke a six-game losing streak with the win at Oakland.

At Montreal Saturday, Canadiens coach Al MacNeil put Peter Mahovlich, normally a left winger like his older brother, at centre between wingers John Ferguson and Phil Roberto to form a line that BUFFALO (AP) — Erie County executive B. John Tutuska said Saturday night he has given up hope of building a domed sports stadium.

Tutuska's announcement came less than a week after Ralph Wilson, owner of Buffalo Bills of the National Football League, threatened to move his team unless a new stadium is built. The Bills now play in War Memorial Stadium, which opened in 1938.

"It would be futile to attempt to keep alive any thought or prospect of the domed stadium," Tutuska said.

He said he would ask for authorization from the county legislature to begin discussions with state officials toward the construction of alternative stadium designs.

The International League, a Triple-A baseball circuit, revoked Buffalo's 85-year-old franchise last year because the city lacked a suitable stadium.

COLLINGWOOD, Ont. (CP) — The Levack, Ont., brother and sister combination of Peter and Sandra Kotyk captured the downhill events Saturday in the southern Ontario ski championships at Osler Bluff Club.

Miss Kotyk, 16, beat out Toronto's Robin Kingsmill and Cindy Fiske of Boise, Idaho.

Her brother edged Pierre Landry of Val d'Or, Que., and Bruce Barkley of Toronto.

Miss Fiske took the women's slalom ahead of Debbie Tickens of Toronto and Kathy Lindvik of Oakville.

Bill McKay of Banff won the men's slalom over Jeff Heintzman of Toronto and Barkley.

Bucks Running Up String

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Milwaukee Bucks, led by Lew Alcindor's 44 points, whipped Boston Celtics 120-113 Sunday night for their ninth straight National Basketball Association victory.

The winners overcame a Boston lead and held off a late Celtic charge with Alcindor throwing in the key baskets.

Elsewhere in the NBA Sunday, Philadelphia '76ers edged San Diego Rockets 106-105 and Baltimore Bullets beat Seattle SuperSonics 111-96.

Saturday, Philadelphia downed Cleveland Cavaliers 115-96, Milwaukee whipped Chicago Bulls 110-90, Detroit Pistons edged Boston 121-118, Atlanta Hawks defeated Los Angeles Lakers 127-123, Cincinnati Royals nipped Buffalo Braves 114-113, Phoenix Suns clipped Baltimore 117-100 and San Francisco Warriors beat New York Knicks 102-93.

LEW ALCINDOR

Despite having regulars John Havlicek and Jo Jo White out of the lineups, Boston had a 60-56 halftime lead over Milwaukee.

But Alcindor spearheaded a 13-point outburst in the fourth quarter that helped Milwaukee into the lead.

The Celts cut the Bucks' advantage to 106-105 and 111-108, but baskets by Alcindor got Milwaukee under way again each time and eventually to an unsurmountable 120-109 lead.

Don Nelson led Boston's scorers with 26 points.

There was plenty of action in Ontario Hockey Association Junior A play during the weekend—including one game which had 110 minutes in penalties.

Despite the six-game schedule, however, all teams held their positions in league standings.

In Sunday action, Ottawa 67s overpowered Toronto Marlboros 5-1, Montreal Junior Canadiens and Niagara Falls Flyers battled to a 2-2 tie and Hamilton Red Wings, who trailed 1-0 after 40 minutes, defeated 1 London Knights 4-1.

In other Sunday games, first place Peterborough Petes, who have dominated the league most of the season, could not hold on to a 3-0 advantage and were forced to settle for a 3-3 tie with the Hawks and Kitchener Rangers hammered ninth-place Oshawa 8-2.

In Oshawa Saturday, the game was studded with penalties as the Hawks scored their victory over the Generals. The penalties included 10 majors for fighting and three misconducts.

Oshawa captain Terry O'Reilly received 24 minutes of the 110 total in two separate disputes.

Sport Bodies Want Own Say

OTTAWA (CP) — Amateur sport bodies must start running their own affairs or wake up to find that the federal government has taken them over, representatives of about 55 sports were told over the weekend.

The warnings were sounded at the two-day annual meeting of the Canadian Amateur Sports Federation which considers itself the official voice of amateur sport in Canada.

Delegates passed a resolution which said that the sports themselves should have the last word on their own events in the Games.

Later they agreed to petition Health Minister John Munro, the minister in charge of sports, asking that the federation be given the majority in the Canada Games Committee. The federation now has three of the 12 votes

Melville Rogers of Ottawa, a former federation president, said the CASF had conceived the idea of the Canada Games and at one time had a big hand in saying how they would be run.

He said the federation's role has dwindled in relation to that of the government's.

Federation president John Hunnias, re-elected to another one-year term, said the ground rules governing the selection of sites for the games needed to be changed.

Delegates also expressed concern over a Munro suggestion made about a year ago to form a body called Sports Canada.

It, like the federation, would be composed of representatives of all amateur sports. Fears were expressed that it would take over the functions now performed by the CASF.

A resolution was passed calling on the new federation executive to form a committee to investigate the growing federal involvement in amateur sport and to learn whether the federation role as a leader has eroded in relation to government.

Lancers Better on Ice

Loyalist's hockey Lancers were on target with a 6-5 weekend win over Centennial College of Scarborough, but the home town cagers couldn't cope with Centennial's long range artillery in an 84-68 basketball loss.

Goalie Dick Beare was the key to the Loyalist hockey win turning aside 48 shots as Centennial held a 13-shot margin of play.

The game was a tight affair for the whole distance with the Lancers leading 2-1 at the end of the first period and 5-4 after 40 minutes of play.

Len Taft and Gary Goyer fired two goals each with Al Ray and Randy Castellarin rounding out the scoring.

The winners drew five of the game's seven penalties.

Loyalist hoopsters were able to contain Centennial to a 10-point lead at half time, but the winners sharp outside shooting in the final quarters was able to break down the Lancers' zone defence.

Blair Culham was a standout for Loyalist scoring 22 points and doing an excellent rebounding job. Rick Webster hooped 16 points and Mike Parker 14, while Dale Lingard played a strong defensive game.

Bob Mickus paced Centennial with 18 points.

Mo-Hawks Still in Fifth After Dismal Road Excursion

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

Mike Rexe was one Belleville Mo-Hawk who got some sense of accomplishment out of an otherwise dismal two-game senior hockey excursion.

The rookie defenceman picked up his first goal of the season and one assist besides playing as well as any Mo-Hawk in a 7-2 loss to Galt Hornets Saturday.

The younger of the two Mo-Hawk Rexes didn't get on the scoresheet in Sunday's loss in Oakville, but was still modestly enthusiastic about ending what amounted to a two-year scoring drought.

"I didn't play organized hockey last year," he explained. "The year before I got 18 playing forward and defence with Aurora in the Metro Junior B league.

Slightly built for a senior hockey defenceman at five-five 160 pounds, the 21-year-old agreed speed is one of his assets. "Yea, I'm fast enough to make up for some of my mistakes. Trouble is, maybe I make too many mistakes."

Rexe wasn't alone in that department as the Mo-Hawks labored through their roughest weekend of the season. They were outscored 16-4, logged a timid total of three minor penalties in 120 minutes of hockey, and managed only 44 shots on goal in six periods.

Beyond four points, the Mo-Hawks also lost the services of leading club scorer Doug Senior, who suffered a badly-bruised side after colliding full tilt with a goalpost in the second period of Sunday's Oakville game.

Senior, who had 14 goals and 17 assists in 28 games, didn't know how long it would be before he was skating, but it certainly wouldn't be by Tuesday night's home stand against Kingston Aces.

Despite their problems, fate smiled on the Mo-Hawks. While they lost fourth spot in the eight-team Senior A standing to Oakville, they still hold fifth place by one point over the Aces, who obligingly lost Friday night to the Oaks.

Oakville has 29 points in 29 games, Belleville 26 and Kingston 25 in 28 games each.

A strange feature of both weekend drubbings was that the Mo-Hawks managed to hold the opposition scoreless in the openig period.

Coach Dave Jones dictated a cautious checking strategy, which threw the Hornets offstride for the first 20 minutes of Saturday's game.

But after the Jones-Ralph Plane - Les Colligan line fluffed up a three-on-one rush early in the second period, Bill Hway came right back to steer in Ron Hergott's pass and make the scorekeeper start to earn his keep.

MIKE REXE

Fern Belanger and Moe Galand made it 3-0 before the period was over, and two goals by Howie Dietrich, and singles by John Beechey and Bruce Reier offset Mo-Hawk tallies by Rexe and Plane in the final 20 minutes.

The Hornets delighted 2,600 spectators by shelling Steve Rexe with 37 shots. Three of their goals were on clear-cut breakaways, while the red head stopped three others.

Sunday night, it was stand-in Bob Moon's turn to play shock-absorber.

Moon, who hadn't appeared in a game since Oct. 23 helped back up the Mo-Hawks' checking game and hold the Oaks scoreless until the opening minute of the second period. Then defenceman Mike Corbett skated through everybody on the ice and slipped the puck under the Belleville goalie as he went down to block the shot.

Ralph Plane temporarily squared things at 9.30 on a neat individual effort in the Oakville end, but Dunc McDonald, Pat Bester, and Dick Smith hit pay-dirt as the Oaks started to pull away from their visitors.

Bob Wilson's point shot opened the third-period scoring before the Oaks poured it on with goals by Bester, Frank Hincks, Ron Robinson, and two by Cal Russell.

If nothing else, the Mo-Hawks had the satisfaction of playing before more spectators in the two weekend games than they have in their last five home appearances.

DOUG SENIOR

Gaps Could Tell Tale

When is a loss not really a loss? The answer could be demonstrated in tonight's Eastern Ontario Junior B contest in Cobourg.

Belleville Fairways will have lost the services of standout right winger Dave Smith for the key contest that could move the local B's into a fourth place tie with the Cougars.

While the absence of the two-way winger, as a result of drawing a game misconduct in Sunday's third period battle between the same two teams, would ordinarily rank as a mjaor blow to the Fairways, the opposition could be without three of their starting lineup.

David Giles, ejected for a deliberate attempt to injure will be virtually certain of missing the contest, while John Lunn and Ray Bevan also chased from Sunday's game would face further suspensions if the team decided to employ their services tonight.

Belleville will be further strengthened by the addition of centre Brian O'Coin, missing from Sunday's game because of an arm injury and right winger Tim Yohn, called up from the Blake Kerr midgets to replace Smith.

O'Coin has fired 11 goals so far this season, second best on the team as well as serving as team policeman. Yohn, a versatile performer, who can play either forward or defence has managed five goals in only 11 games with the Juniors.

Defensively, the Fairways will be without the services of steady rearguard Rick Holmes, whose work commitments have taken him out of the area. The Tweed product will be available for weekend games, however.

A bus will be leaving Belleville Memorial Arena at 6 p.m.

More Immigrants Return to Homelands

TORONTO (CP) — The number of immigrants planning to return for good to their homelands appears to be on the rise, and lack of suitable employment is the reason cited by most.

Although accurate figures are not available because Canada does not require official notification from persons leaving the country, a survey of travel agents and consular officials in Toronto indicates a mounting exodus, particularly among recent immigrants from The Netherlands, Italy and Germany.

There was also an accompanying drop in the number of immigrants entering Canada from those countries last year.

Figures compiled by the department of manpower and immigration show the number of Italians who immigrated to Canada during the first nine months of 1970 was only 6,692 compared with 8,112 in the same period a year earlier.

The same nine-month flow of Germans was 3,444 compared with 4,565 and the number of Dutch immigrants in the same period was 1,622 compared with 2,096 in 1969.

Marcello D'Alessandro, social counsellor with the Italian embassy in Ottawa, said that while the number of Italians returning home is increasing, he is more concerned at the drop in immigration from Italy.

He predicted that 1970 will be the year of the lowest immigration from Italy since the Second World War.

Blizzard Hits Newfoundland

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Most of eastern Newfoundland was buried beneath mounds of snow today as an intense storm swept over the area, blocking transportation and forcing several communities to declare states of emergency.

A spokesman for the weather office said 23 inches was on the ground Sunday night, with 50-mile-an-hour winds and gusts to 70 whipping the snow into huge drifts. He said gusts up to 80 miles an hour were recorded earlier in the day.

The storm moved in Saturday afternoon and the weather office was not sure when it would move off. The centre of the disturbance was 300 miles east of St. Anthony Sunday night, moving slowly northward.

By Sunday nothing was moving here and Deputy Mayor Leonard Stirling declared a state of emergency, closing business, schools and government offices. Streets were barred to all but emergency traffic until at least 6 p.m. NST today.

Mr. Stirling said the declaration was made to assist snow-clearing operations and to prevent serious accidents. His announcement was followed by similar declarations from municipal councils in suburban Mount Pearl and Marystown of the province's Burin Peninsula.

The half-dozen families living in the Lower Battery, a collection of houses nestled in the rugged cliffs at the mouth of St. John's Harbor, left their homes Saturday night. Four persons died 12 years ago when a snowslide during a storm crushed several houses.

Five Children Die In New York Blaze

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — Five children perished in a fire at their rural home early Sunday after their elder sister leaped to safety but could not make them follow her.

The dead were identified as Betty and Debbie Beardsley, nine-year-old twins; Beverly, 14; Penny, 11, and Charles Beardsley, 7.

Police said that the father was not home as the fire swept the frame home, about 2:30 a.m. The mother lives elsewhere, police said.

Patricia Beardsley, 15, the eldest of the six children woke up when she smelled smoke, police said and then woke up her brothers and sisters.

She attempted to lead the children out the door but found it blocked by smoke and fire, police said. She then smashed the second storey bedroom window and leaped out into the snow.

Police said she yelled and beseeched her brothers and sisters to jump but they would not.

The girl ran for help but when she returned minutes later the house was in flames.

The bodies were found in the debris.

Police said they believed the fire was caused by a faulty kerosene stove.

Chiang Fights Trend

TAIPEI (Reuter) — Nationalist China is stepping up a diplomatic campaign in countries it fears might recognize Mao Tse-tung's Peking government.

Vigilance against possible moves in this direction is expected to be intensified in countries such as Bolivia, Chile, Austria and Belgium which Formosa fears may follow Canada and Italy in establishing formal ties with Peking.

President Chiang Kai-shek, leader of the Nationalist government, recently warned against defeatism in the international field and said: "This is a time to take the offensive—not retreat."

The 84-year-old president, who was pushed off the Chinese mainland by the Communists in 1949, added: "Those states which are being deceived by Communist China's diplomacy of smiles will have their day of awakening before long."

PM Is Sunburned On Borneo Visit

SINGAPORE (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau of Canada had to be medically treated for sunburn when he returned here Sunday night to the Commonwealth conference from a two-day side trip to Borneo.

He was attended by Lt.-Col. L. St. Arnaud, medical officer travelling with the prime minister, and his officials.

Trudeau received his burn 1,000 miles from Singapore in the 97-degree heat of the Siligan Islands off the coast of Sabah, better known as the Turtle Islands.

The prime minister spent an hour swimming and snorkle-diving in the Celebes Sea before returning to the mainland.

Later, Trudeau made friends with a 13-year-old orang-utan at a centre for orang-utans near Sandakan.

Joan, as the orang-utan has been named, shook hands with the prime minister, then hugged him and then pulled him down and kissed him on the left cheek.

Tenement Fire Takes Lives of 7

LAWRENCE, Mass. (AP) — Seven persons, including a young mother and her three daughters, died early Sunday in a fire in a three-storey tenement building.

The victims were identified as Mrs. Sandry Yaun, 21; Christy, 4; Barbara, 3; and three-month-old Kim. Also dead were Tracey Bagley, 4; her brother, Larry, 15 months old, and Carrie Bagley, six-weeks-old.

The fire in the dwelling, which housed about 30 people was discovered by two policemen who ran into the building but were unable to rescue any of the children because of flames and debris in their bedrooms.

Officials said the victims were asleep in the building.

Fire Chief William J. Mains said there were indications the fire started when hot grease ignited on the kitchen stove.

Deadline Nears For Ford Strike

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Negotiations between Ford of Canada Ltd. and the United Auto Workers continued through the weekend under the shroud of a news blackout as bargainers tried to hammer out a settlement for a new three-year contract before Tuesday's strike deadline.

Two Negroes Attempt To Kidnap All Rich

BENNETTSVILLE, S.C. (AP) — "We're going to get all the rich people, every damned one of 'em, and then they're going to have to deal with us," a victim quoted one of his kidnappers as saying.

Wayne Chavis, one of eight persons abducted in this little town in northern South Carolina's rich tobacco belt, says the terror began Saturday night with this declaration by one of their kidnappers.

Two Negro men carrying guns and black militant literature made their way from house to house gathering up victims and forcing them into the Chavis family's Volkswagen bus.

The escapade ended at the home of the third family with an exchange of gunfire.

One of the kidnapped women, the wife of state Senator John Lindsay, was critically wounded, as was one of the abductors.

Two men were arrested.

The abductions began at the home of Chavis, a Benettsville barber. Dina Chavis, 13, answered a knock at the door and was met by two men with guns.

Chavis said one of the men commanded: "Don't nobody move, or we'll blow your head off."

After the kidnappers took a pistol and $12 from Chavis they herded all six members of the family into the minibus and tied them up.

The kidnappers then drove to the home of Sen. Lindsay, who was away.

Mrs. Lindsay was knocked to the ground and with her six-year-old son, David, forced into the minibus with the Chavis family.

The bus next stopped at the home of state Representative T. E. Cottingham. No one was home there.

Mrs. Lindsay was forced to accompany the two men to the house next door, the home of former state representative James F. Lee.

Mrs. Lee answered the door and the men forced their way in.

Lee and his 10-year-old daughter were watching television in the basement and the men went down there.

Lindsay, who talked with the abduction victims later, said Lee struck one of the kidnappers and ran to a room where he kept a loaded pistol.

In the shooting that followed, Mrs. Lindsay was hit in the throat, arm and a leg and one of the abductors was struck in the throat and chest and collapsed in front of the house. The other man fled on foot.

Police found Charles Leonard Scales, 22, of Bennettsville wounded at the Lee home. Grover Bennett, 23, of Charlotte, turned himself in to police Sunday night.

Both were charged with kidnapping, robbery, burglary and assault and battery with intent to kill.

Kinsmen Lack Power For Aurora Opponents

Lack of firepower forced the Belleville Kinsmen bantams to bow out early in the Aurora Bantam Tournament Saturday.

After playing to a 1-1 tie at the end of the first period in their opening game against Kitchener, the Kinsmen were unable to manage only one more score in the remaining five periods of hockey.

Kitchener went all the way to the grand championship before losing 5-0 to Toronto Swiss Chalet.

Belleville ended up on the short end of a 4-2 count against their first round opponents and then suffered a 3-0 blanking from Trenton.

Steve Kirby and Jeff Brown counted the goals in Belleville's loss to Kitchener.

In regular OMHA play, Rollins Construction peewees split a pair of weekend encounters with Kingston opponents.

Kingston Nationals came out on the long end of a 6-2 contest with Rollins despite the goal-scoring efforts of Bob Crawford and Andy Lupenette.

Belleville gained some measure of revenge by coming back with a 9-0 blanking of Kingston Lakeshore.

Mike Bennett and Paul Hayman led the way with two goals each. Single scores went to Tony Meagher, Bob Thompson, Bill Whelan, Lupenette and Crawford.

Working overtime paid off with a pair of victories for the Belleville Towers Food City Novices in the two Sunday games they contested.

Goalie Drew Stotesbury turned aside Kingston Lakeshore 4-0 in a regular OMHA contest, while the Food City team dumped Chambers Food Club house league peewees 6-3 in an exhibition tilt.

Danny Jaques and Gary McInroy potted two goals apiece to stop Kingston. Against Chambers, Andy Plane notched a hat trick with Danny Duffy scoring twice and Gary Frederick once.

Mulroney's Sunoco Novice B's suffered a 5-1 setback at the hands of Stirling with Kevin Meagher picking up the lone Belleville score.

One Cowboy Won

MIAMI (AP) — A member of the losing team was named the Most Valuable Player in the Super Bowl for the first time Sunday when the annual award went to linebacker Chuck Howley of Dallas.

"The award is tremendous," Howley said of the car given by Sport Magazine, "but I wish it were the world championship. They go hand in hand."

Howley intercepted a pass by Johnny Unitas in the first quarter, setting up a Dallas field goal to put the Cowboys ahead 3-0.

On the first play of the fourth quarter, with Dallas in front 13-6, Howley picked off an Earl Morrall pass in the end zone.

Scoreboard Blooms For Dukes' Rosebush

The Dukes got royal performances from Rick Rosebush and Tom Pierce to take a 7-3 Northern Electric hockey decision from the Good Guys Sunday.

In the other contest, scoring was more evenly distributed as the Hornets swarmed to a 6-1 victory over the No Stars.

Rosebush tallied four of his team's seven goals in the Dukes' win with Pierce accounting for the other three.

Mark Acquafreddo had a pair of goals for the Good Guys with Bob Baitley collecting the other marker.

Bill Goodfellow continued to set a hot scoring pace adding a pair of goals in the Hornets' win over the No-Stars. Larry Lupenette matched Goodfellow's total while Brian Allen and Edgar Eley each scored once.

Marco Mior was the lone goal-getter for the No Stars.

Big Line Stymied

checked the scoring of Boston's Esposito, Wayne Cashman and Ken Hodge.

The Boston line, which now has 80 goals, failed to collect a point while Yvan Cournoyer led the Canadiens to victory with two goals.

Roberto and Serge Savard got the other Montreal goals while Bobby Orr and Stanfield tallied for Boston. The Canadiens, with Phil Myre in goal, were outshot 39-21.

At Toronto, the line of centre Norm Ullman and wingers Paul Henderson and Ron Ellis was outstanding against the Kings. The two wingers each scored twice and Ullman once in leading the Leafs who outshot Los Angeles 51-30.

Toronto was leading 7-1 at the start of the third period when Los Angeles coach Larry Regan decided to give Dejordy a rest and replaced him in goal with Jack Norris.

The Leafs lost rookie forward Darryl Sittler for six to eight weeks with a fractured left wrist, suffered when he was checked by Kings' defenceman Gilles Marotte.

Andy Bathgate got the winning goal for Pittsburgh over Vancouver after the Penguins had overcome a 3-1 deficit.

Rookie Greg Polis gave Pittsburgh a 1-0 lead with his 13th season goal in the first period and then sparked the come-back with his 14th early in the third period.

Buffalo's Steve Atkinson got the first goal of the game at Minnesota and the Sabres never dropped behind, despite being outshot 34-20 by the North Stars.

Goalie Roger Crozier turned aside 14 shots in the first period before he retired with a sprained knee. Joe Daley stopped 17 more drives the rest of the way to preserve the Buffalo win. Veteran Gump Worsley was in the Minnesota nets.

Right winger Gary Sabourin scored twice and helped set up the other St. Louis goal by Frank St. Marseille as the Blues dumped 36 shots on Chicago netminder Tony Esposito.

The Blues' Ernie Wakely, who will be sharing goaltending chores for the West in Tuesday's all-star game, stopped 20 shots.

Philadelphia linemates Bob Kelly and Cliff Schmautz each scored twice for the Flyers' victory over Detroit.

Mistakes Worried Morrall

MIAMI (AP) — "We made so many mistakes," Earl Morrall said, "for a while it looked like a rerun of 1969."

The veteran Baltimore quarterback came off the bench Sunday and helped direct the Colts to a 16-13 victory over Dallas Cowboys in the Super Bowl.

Morrall, a sensitive 15-year veteran, had been bothered for two years by the loss to the Jets.

With John Unitas again healthy, Morrall didn't expect to see much action against Dallas, but he was inserted into action in the second quarter after Unitas suffered bruised ribs.

Morrall completed seven of 15 passes for 147 yards, and held the ball for rookie Jim O'Brien's winning field goal with five seconds to play.

"This was a great lift to me personally," Morrall said. "I can't forget the Jets' game, but this one will stay with me forever."

Coach Don McCafferty pleaded with Morrall during the time out prior to the winning field goal to calm down O'Brien.

"I told Obie to take his time and not to worry," Morrall said.

"I told him we'd get the ball into place, and all he had to do was kick it in the middle because there was no wind."
